Hi, I am interested in purchasing a radio for listening to short wave radio broadcasts. I would like it to be portable and have digital tuning. I am looking to spend in the neighborhood of $100 US Is what I want available in the price range I am looking at? A friend who is in to CB radios said look at Grundig radios. Any advise would be appreciated.

Thanks
Drew

China always uses surrogates. Islamic fundamentalists are but one of them.
Terrorism against the West is the symptom.
The disease is the Chinese Communist Party.
The cure is regime change in China.
When you defeat communism you have defeated terrorism.

Drew,

Grundig is good. My favorite portables are the Sangean ATS 909, and ATS 404. Here is a link to a nytimes article from a few years ago that gives a nice overview of SW portables. The article appears to still be pretty relevant. (If you don't want to register to read the article go all,

i have been monitoring what sounds like a data transmission on 13982 kHz. Located in Phila, PA, I am hearing the transmission on USB. I have been monitoring this for close to an hour. Receiver is Yaesu FT-857D. Is this a well known freq, does anyone know/guess what this transmission might be?

But by YOUR OWN ADMISSION, any attempt at "regime change" in China would lead to WMD being used against the West, be they nukes, "molecular nano superweapons" (uh huh), or whatever. On one hand, you scream that China is about to destroy the west, on the other, you scream for the US to overthrow the CCP. What's your logic-they're gonna destroy us anyway, so we might as well commit murder-suicide in the noble goal of destroying the CCP no matter what the cost, even if that cost is nuclear annihilation? That's the same logic used by Curtis Lemay and his butt buddies in 1962 when it looked certain that the US and USSR would go to war. They reasoned that a nuclear catastrophe was inevitable, so we might as well launch first in order to destroy the USSR even if we would be destroyed too, because destroying communism was worth the end of life on earth. Fortunately, JFK didn't listen, and just over a quarter century later the Soviet Union was history, disintegrating with a whimper. Containment, not murder-suicide, had ultimately worked. If or when we find ourselves in a new Cold War with China, we should go back to containment. It worked against the Communists in Moscow, it'll work against the Communists in Beijing. It would be worth it to rebuild America's industrial machine, too.

Just saw something on the news about how they've been able to CURE diabetes in mice. Not only did they obliterate the disease, but once the disease was gone, the mice actually grew new cells to replace the damaged ones.

Let's hope they can apply this to humans in the not-too-distant future.

If you want a Grunding, you can get a YB-400 for under $100.00. See the link below.

Hi, I am interested in purchasing a radio for listening to short wave radio broadcasts. I would like it to be portable and have digital tuning. I am looking to spend in the neighborhood of $100 US Is what I want available in the price range I am looking at? A friend who is in to CB radios said look at Grundig radios. Any advise would be appreciated.

Thanks

When things don't make sense, there is usually a VERY GOOD REASON.

If they leave the borders wide open to terrorists, such as they have, doesn't it suggest this is just a cooked up "scare the people" scheme? If it looks like a duck, quacks like a duck, smells like a duck, walks like a duck--it is probably a underhanded scheme into scaring us into giving up rights, throwing money at the rich, letting they rape the natural resources of other countries, etc, etc...

Get real, you ain't dreaming, this is real weird stuff going on here!

It is scary times we live in when our public servants start calling themselves "leaders", ignore the majority of people and vote in laws, rules and regulations against our will and look at us as if we are complete morons which don't even know it is going on!

He assumed that the US wouldn't use its entire arsenal against China.
The general was referring to six cities. The US has 15 THOUSAND nukes-enough to turn most of the populated areas of China into fused glass. That number is also likely far greater than the number of nukes China posesses. If China really thinks it can wipe out the US and get through relatively unscathed, I'm afraid they're sadly mistaken. The CCP bosses would find themselves trapped in their bunkers with no way out and a quickly depleting food and water supply, not to mention air.

Yep,Lee Iacocca,a great guy and very smart too.He saved Chrysler's bacon.One of the things Chrysler company used to do was instead of building cars to customers orders,Chrysler used to build a certain number of different models of cars and let them sit on the parking lots of auto dealers and a lot of the cars,the customers didn't care about buying,those cars would sit there and sit there all year long and be rusting out.

Yes they do.

We keep going through a lot of cycles of good and bad conditions lately.
Last night conditions were exceptional on the lower bands.

Last night NZ had the annoying habit of switching off 5 or 10 minutes before the hour, then return a few minutes later. This happened several times.

Australia was very good this afternoon on 21,740. I think it was just yesterday that they were very poor on that frequency.

Dear Drew,

Grundig radios are mediocre for the price they charge (and I regret having to say that as Grundig does support the hobby better than any other manufacturer). (Sangean radios, in my experience with two - the 808A and the 606AP - do not hold up well over the years and are therefore not worth considering.) In the price range you mention you should look into Kaito/Degen radios which, all things otherwise being equal, are far less expensive than their Grundig counterparts. Note that most Kaito/Degen radios are dual-conversion and Grundigs are mostly single-conversion. (If you don't know what that means, take it from me - it's quite important for good reception.)

That said, I, like another who has replied here, should HIGHLY recommend the Sony ICF-SW7600GR receiver. Though somewhat more expensive than the price you mention, it is a FAR better radio than any Grundig or Kaito/Degen radio if only for a particular circuit which it alone, among currently manufactured portables, features (synchronous selectable sideband). It is also much better constructed than any other portable SW radio I have seen. It can handle fairly sophisticated antennas should you wish to go that route and can even be played through your stereo system for really "big" sound as it features a fully-functioning line output in addition to an earphone jack.

In my opinion, only a radio such as the Grundig Satellit 800 is better than the Sony among current radios.

Best of luck with whatever you purchase.

Joe

Well, I've read all the posts saying The Sharper Image has the Etón E1 in stock.

Has anyone purchased and gotten it yet?

Has anyone here actually seen it?

Universal still states "August 5" as their "availability" date (as of their July 24 update).

But check this out - http://www.grove-ent.com/eton.html

Grove states "early fall" but no YEAR indicated! ;-)

Frankly I'm just curious about all this - I have no intention at present of buying one. I will let others be the "guinea pigs."

Classic early Fisher Tube Receiver AND Mono Tube Power Amp AND a tube phonostage, by The Fisher Radio Corporation of New York. This is a cool example of one of the earliest Fishers. It has had one owner and dates to the late 40s early 50s. This set up has been part of a custom console set up

Winner takes ALL.

Follow the link for photos and full details.

"THE FISHER" is a a receiver model K2 @ 245 WATTS, serial number 2054. It has bands for AM, FM and Short Wave SW, as well as phonograph selector. It has two very cool "eye"(6U5/6G5) tubes as part of the face as well as a television input in the rear, recorder output, am loop output and FM dipole connectors etc.

Includes original bakelite type knobs.(In the photo the oneknob missing from the console face on the far right is actually the seperate control knob for the Dynamic Expander available in a seprate auction this week.

It includes the following tubes:

SEVEN 6BA6
TWO 12AT7
TWO 6U5/6G5
ONE 6BE6
ONE 6AU6
ONE 6ALS
ONE 6C4

It is missing ONE TUBE a OA2

Receiver has been tested and powers up ok.

Now the Power Amp.

This power amp is the original custom amp that accompanies the receiver. It has no markings on it but it is CLEAN and powers up fine.

It includes the following tubes:

FOUR 7C5
TWO 5Y3
ONE 7A4

The rectifiers have the numbers that appear to me to read 1822b and 1828b.

115 volt 60 cycle ac line and a 5 amp fuse, SPEAKER output as well as two ac outlets to power the phonograph etc. It's power on/off is presently controlled by it's original connection to the Receiver, BUT could be modified to power up on it's own. Original connection cables are ALL included

The seperate Phonostage uses a 12AT7

ALSO INCLUDED is the original Schematic

You've seperated the loop antenna and dynamic expander from the radio and are auctioning these parts seperately.

Just what do you mean with "Winner takes ALL"?

billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. Also includes WARC-92 broadcast band extensions, which may be used before April 1, 2007 on a secondary (non-interference) basis. For multi-use bands, most common usage is shown. Some stations operate outside the official bands. Information is from Sep 2000 NTIA allocations table, see:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/allochrt.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines usually don't. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I find that it outperforms the telescopic whip antennas built into most portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be purchased from some shortwave dealers.

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

By the way, these filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

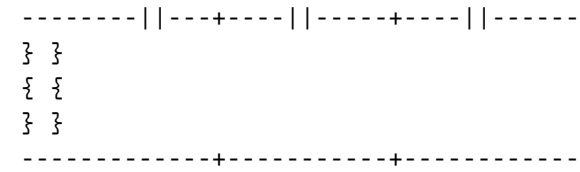
Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)

Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.



The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Date: 12 Jan 91 00:44:25 GMT
From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB
1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

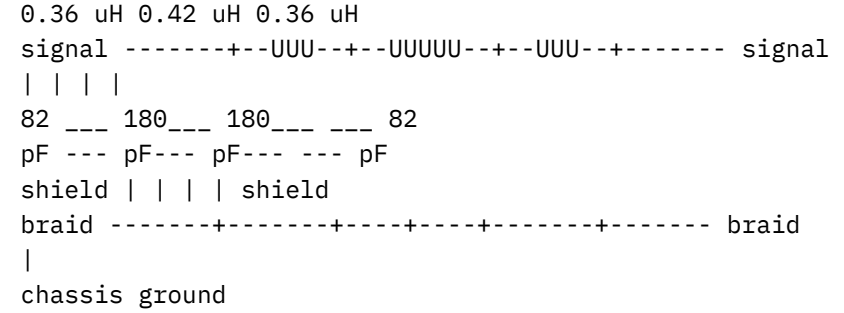
From: johns@uhunix.uhcc.Hawaii.Edu (John Shalamskas)
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)



I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Matthew, Mark, Luke or John but by Judas Iscariot, who DID NOT betray "Jesus," then commit suicide. The betrayer actually was a man with a similiar-sounding name but Judas has taken the eternal bum rap.

The truth is, "Jesus" DID NOT die on the cross and, in fact, lived into his 90s, having married while in his 40s and raising a family.
And Judas Iscariot remained his faithful companion for decades after the crucifixion, transcribing Jmmanuel's travels to India and his many years of preaching there.
Truth or Fiction? All you need do is be true to yourself and compare what's written in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John with scrolls that Billy Meier had found in a cave near Jerusalem in 1963, now known as the Talmud of Jmmanuel (written by Judas Iscariot).
Meier was directed to the parchments -- encased in tree resin -- by extraterrestrials who originally had made their presence known to him when he was only five years old, some 63 years ago, with regular visitations continuing over all these years.
Credit for this mind-boggling breakthrough about "Jesus Christ" and the falacy of the Gospels has to go to many brave, courageous scholars, true scientists in every sense of the word..
First and foremost is Jim Deardorff, research emeritus professor at Oregon State University who devoted 15 years patiently analyzing
The Talmud of Jmmanuel, especially in comparison to the Gospel of Matthew which has long been erroneously believed to be the original.
The bottom line is that Matthew undoubtedly used many of Judas Iscariat's transcriptions as the basis for his own version of the Gospel -- but took the liberty of adding and subtracting facts and information as he saw fit (or had been ordered to).
Deardoff, in the Introduction to his exhaustive research, explains that The Talmud of Jmmanue "discovered in Jerusalem in 1963
ushers in the New Age while exposing the New Testament gospels as being more corrupt than even the Jesus Seminar suspects."
As Dietmar Rothe, a scholar who also studied the ancient scrolls, writes: "The Talmud of Jmmanuel makes it clear that our genetic roots lie in the cosmos, and that there are other human populations scattered throughout the galaxy.
"Extraterrestrial beings have monitored and guided Earth humanity's evolution for millions of years. We need to accept this 'alien' presence and extract meaning and value from this for our own spiritual growth.

"Only ignorant people with an impoverished consciousness will keep asking: 'Is there intelligent life out there?' In truth, the entire universe is alive and intelligent because the infinitely intelligent Creation spirit maintains everything that exists within its consciousness."

Nearly all of the above specimens underwent state-of-the-art scientific testing by major independent laboratories and prove they are bones, teeth or soft organs, many of them human.

> PREFACE
This is the HubbleTelescope's 2004 ultraview photo, one that was taken of a totally blackened sky as if through an eight-foot straw. Result: galaxies upon galaxies upon galaxies, meaning that our universe is far bigger than we can even begin to fathom.

Truth indeed is stranger than fiction.
<
And an honest, courageous scientist follows truth no matter where it leads.
It is with a heavy heart that I bring to light one of the greatest conspiracies of all time.
Especially so, because I was born and raised Catholic.
>
I am sad to report that, beyond any reasonable doubt, the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John are based on an enormous amount of fabrication -- insertions here, deletions there -- as to the biography of the man known as Jesus Christ.
>
For one thing, the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John don't even have his name right. Actually, his name was Jmmanuel (pronounced Immanuel). And much, much more importantly, he NEVER ONCE claimed to be the Son of God.
But Jmmanuel DID reveal that his father was an extraterrestrial, a resident of a planet in another far-off solar system -- certainly not a God. This, of course, never made the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.
You see, the original New Testament Gospels weren't written by Matthew, Mark, Luke or John but by Judas Iscariot, who DID NOT

betray "Jesus," then commit suicide. The betrayer actually was a man with a similiar-sounding name but Judas has taken the eternal bum rap.
<
The truth is, "Jesus" DID NOT die on the cross and, in fact, lived into his 90s, having married while in his 40s and raising a family.
<
And Judas Iscariot remained his faithful companion for decades
after the crucifixion, transcribing Jmmanuel's travels to India and his many years of preaching there.
<
Truth or Fiction? All you need do is be true to yourself and compare what's written in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John with scrolls that Billy Meier had found in a cave near Jerusalem in 1963, now known as the Talmud of Jmmanuel (written by Judas Iscariot).
Meier was directed to the parchments -- encased in tree resin --
by extraterrestrials who originally had made their presence known to him when he was only five years old, some 63 years ago, with regular visitations continuing over all these years.
Credit for this mind-boggling breakthrough about "Jesus Christ"
and the falacy of the Gospels has to go to many brave, courageous scholars, true scientists in every sense of the word..
First and foremost is Jim Deardorff, research emeritus professor at Oregon State University who devoted 15 years patiently analyzing
The Talmud of Jmmanuel, especially in comparison to the Gospel of Matthew which has long been erroneously believed to be the original.
The bottom line is that Matthew undoubtedly used many of Judas Iscariat's transcriptions as the basis for his own version of the Gospel -- but took the liberty of adding and subtracting facts and information as he saw fit (or had been ordered to).
<
Deardoff, in the Introduction to his exhaustive research, explains that The Talmud of Jmmanue "discovered in Jerusalem in 1963
ushers in the New Age while exposing the New Testament gospels as being more corrupt than even the Jesus Seminar
As Dietmar Rothe, a scholar who also studied the ancient scrolls, writes: "The Talmud of Jmmanuel makes it clear that our genetic roots lie in the cosmos, and that there are other human populations scattered throughout the galaxy.
"Extraterrestrial beings have monitored and guided Earth humanity's evolution for millions of years. We need to accept this 'alien' presence and extract meaning and value from this for our own spiritual growth.

"Only ignorant people with an impoverished consciousness will keep asking: 'Is there intelligent life out there?' In truth, the entire universe is alive and intelligent because the infinitely intelligent Creation spirit maintains everything that exists within its consciousness."

Billy Meier, is a wizard and futureteller using not the bible, but using spirits, ufo's etc.
In addition, by denying, that the apostles did write the NT, and that a coward and money lover (Iscariot) wrote it all, he denies Gods power to protect the truth!

(ASV) Levites 19:31 Turn ye not unto them that have familiar spirits, nor unto the wizards; seek them not out, to be defiled by them: I am Jehovah your God Post what?

If you'd like to invite any of them over here for this discussion, please feel free.

I've actually been on that newsgroup a few times several years ago, as we (on alt.war.vietnam) and they shared the same nutcase poster.

Anyway, what would they have to add to this discussion? But go ahead and ask them over. I certainly don't mind.

Doug

Dear Dr. Frankenstein:
A few of your points are well taken.
Many more are not.
Had you been "born" with a full brain,

you would've realized your mistakes.
But, heck, nobody's perfect.
Please have a pleasant day!

My map shows in excess of 20 major cities, and most of the population and industrial centers of China east of Xian. That ain't relatively unscathed in anyone's book.

No one suggested China could wipe out the US, just make a nast mess of a few major cities.

No one in anything approaching their right mind would assume that the US would use its entire nuclear arsenal in a single conflict.

Mike,

1. The police spokesperson initially said he was wearing a thick, padded jacket.

It transpired he was wearing a denim (read that as thin) jacket.

2. The police spokesperson initially said he 'jumped' the ticket barrier.

It transpired he had a valid travel card.

I have no problem with them shooting him but why lie about the reason why he was a suspected terrorist bomber?

Yes, he was in this country illegally. The police did not know that when they shot him!

Also, if you're going to shoot the guy, why not do it out in the street before he had the opportunity of entering an underground train compartment full of up to 150 other people?

PS. I'm no whinging liberal. I believe in Texas justice to burglars - shoot first and ask questions later.

My thinking is that yes, it's preferable to what we have now, but as I like to point out, there will be an impact of some sort that we can't forsee. Remember, 100 years ago, cars were a less polluting option to all the horses that were around, and cars would have been seen as a "cleaner" alternative to all the horse manure and flies and other refuse around.

Hydrogen fuel cells would be a nicer alternative, but what is the long term impact? We don't know. Nuclear power is a nice alternative to coal and gas fired power plants, but no one wants to put up with the risks of it (or the spent fuel).

A guy in North Carolina (I think the article said in North Carolina) invented a little crude looking model car thingy that runs on Hydrogen for a science class experiment.According to what he said in the article the car never needs to be refueled with Hydrogen.(of course,scaling something like that up to be practical in real size vehicles might take some doing) I think I emailed that article to one of my webtv addresses.I will look for it after I read some news updates.Meanwhile,if y'all will do some searches on the internet for the article,y'all might beat me to it.

www.devilfinder.com science class car runs on hydrogen never needs refueling
The article where it says he fills the car with a syringe (something like that) Maybe it was Colorado where he built his little experimental car instead of North Carolina,whichever.

Concerning that question about seeing things in clouds and wood etc.
Here's a perfect example of a Redwood tree that has a being connected to it.

Yes, this is a real picture taken of me and my neice at the Redwood Psychedelic Spirit Tree. It's not retouched or photoshop enhanced.
It's exactly as you see it in the picture. The tree talks at times also when asked questions.
it's long been my belief that Redwood trees are an extraterestrial species of trees that were brought here to Earth by aliens.

Lynch. It would appear to have a general and specific meaning:

The Collaborative International Dictionary of English v.0.48 [gcide]

Lynch \Lynch\, v. t. [imp. & p. p. Lynched; p. pr. & vb. n.
Lynching.] [See Note under Lynch law.]
To inflict punishment upon, especially death, without the forms of law, as when a mob captures and hangs a suspected person. See Lynch law.
[1913 Webster]

WordNet (r) 2.0 [wn]

lynch
v : kill without legal sanction; "The blood-thirsty mob lynched the alleged killer of the child"

He does have it. After using it for a short time, he said he liked it overall--although he did go on to make some more detailed comments that were 'mixed' in nature.

When he last reported, he was on his way to buy an adaptor that would allow him to connect the E1 to an external antenna. We haven't heard from him since then.

If I'm ever again in the market for a portable, I'll consider the E1 if (a) it works as well as it's supposed to and (b) the price comes down to $250 or less.

Mind you, as long as my ICF-SW77 holds out, I won't be on the market for a portable.

Joeseph Newman of Lucedale,Mississippi invented some free energy devices.How do I know this? Because back around 1973,he brought a few of his free energy devices to downtown Jackson,Mississippi.I hurried up and finished up earlier than usual running my bread route for Sunbeam Bakery that afternoon and I drove down town to see for myself.There wasen't anything fake or phoney about his free energy devices at all,I saw them working with my own eyes and there were some other people there with electrical equipment checking out his free energy devices he brought to Jackson.Say or think whatever you like,I saw them working with my very own eyes.I have a big softback book here that I ordered from Joseph Newman when I got back home that afternoon.The book has diagrams of his free energy devices and explains all about them too.

That's a nice collection of big vehicles you have there. Hope you'll still afford the price of gas in years to come. For the record,

I'm not too concerned about your gas guzzlers. Just admire the logic of using up a finite resource in such a wasteful manner, while "economising" could reap many dividends in the long run.

Oh, and lose the "girl" reference. It's tiresome and I thought you were capable of higher things.

> Oil Companies Discover 'Sustainability'

Recently on Nova "Science Now" they had a piece on hydrogen fuel cells. To store enough liquid hydrogen for a 150 mile trip you would need a pressure vessel capable of holding about three times the volume of gasoline needed for the same trip at a pressure of up to 50,000 lbs/sq in. Do you want to drive around with something like that behind you? One of the experts on fuel cells said to forget about hydrogen for automobiles. Just another fairy tale to keep people from learning he eventual truth. Read up on Hubbert's peak. You'll understand what the oil crises means then.

By the way, I worked with Chuck Burch at Conoco in exploration research. I have a Ph.D. in physics and worked in exploration geophysics. The oil companies are merging so they can lay off exploration people. There's no more big oil to be found and they know it.

I have read articles before about some sort of metal hydrides (something like that) technology that is suppose to be safe enough for storing Hydrogen fuel.Humph!,I was reading where James Randi said he traveled to the wilds of Mississippi (not only does James Randi look like a kook,I wouldn't be supprised if he is a kook,mind you,I am not calling him a kook,not yet anyway) to Lucedale,Mississippi to see Joseph Newman's free energy devices.(I wonder if James Randi got stuck in any muddy roads,got attacked by some bears?) I lived in Martinsville,Indiana in 1947 and Bozeman,Montana in 1956 and Salina,Kansas in 1957 and when I was in the Army,Scott Air Force Base,Illinois and SL-60 near Pacific,Missouri in 1963 and near Elizabethtown,Kentucky when I was at Fort Knox,Kentuck in 1963 (Ordnance School, ammo school) and Vinh Long and Tan Son Nhut,Vietnam in 1964 and near Killeen,Texas (Fort Hood,Texas) in 1965 and the "amazing" James Randi said he traveled to the wilds of Mississippi.Well,I can tell y'all the wilds of Mississippi are no wilder than anywhere else in the World I have ever been.

All you have to say is "Chernobyl" to people and their appetite for nuclear seems to dissipate.
Or Yucca Mountain. Or "where do we put the spent fuel rods?"

As far as this stuff goes, nuclear is a great source of energy, if done right. No matter what energy source is chosen, there will be byproducts, because you can't get something for nothing in this world. The question has to be the following: what source of energy is the best with the least amount of problems?
Of the usual suspects, given current technology, nuclear is the best choice. That said, I don't see us shutting down the coal fired plants anytime soon and replacing them with nuclear reactors because people are more scared of nuclear than coal, to be honest.

Well, try the inexpensive solutions first. I'm not sure if you are talking about the original 2001 or the european version of the 2010 which was also numbereed 2001.

Anyway, if the radio has a reset button, try pressing that. Also try removing all batteries for long enough to allow the clock and memories to reset.

If that doesn't work, and the radio has a lot of emotional value for you then seek a good repair shop for an estimate.

Otherwise, look for a newer radio. Either the latest Sony 7700 or the Degen DE1103 would provide excellent reception and features for the money.

Unfortunately I think you are seeing the downside to radios that run from IC's, synthesized tuners and use electronic displays. When they die the only salvation is another parts radio. At todays prices for new receivers many of the older radios are really not worth fixing.

Why do people do that crap? You'll never find those parts to put it together and most wont bid on three auctions just to try for fear you may loose one and end up with a incomplete unit.

Basically parting out an antique radio to maximize his return. I've seen real auctioneers do the same thing with sets of antique furniture.
Slimy profiteering or a free market at work? Maybe a bit of both.

Presumably whoever wins the radio will need to send big snipes after the other items - if they know the radio they're buying has been scavenged.

I've auction houses auction individual parts of a very valuable set, then auction everything as a set - and if the set sells for more than the total of the individual parts, it stays together.

But what he's doing with this radio is more like taking a table apart and selling the top and legs individually.

It may even be a step beyond what Radio-Mart does with stripping options out of radios he buys for resale.

Thank you, for your reaction.
1/ We talk about the European (Netherlands) ICF 2001, bought in 1983 of 84.

2/ I will try the reset procedure removing the back-up battery's. There is no reset button.

3/ If this is not working it 's over and out and will use my dear little ICF SW100 for the time being.

Sounds to me as though the other two items are merely accessories for the radio and that it will still function without them.

Much like selling say a Drake R8 and having seperate auctions for the VHF convertor and the MS8 speaker.

I prefer to call it Viagra 95.3

But here at Narwee nothing much changes... Oh the Premier lives across the Road and the Muslim Book Store at Lakemba still opens at 9am.

Vega sounds ok. Angela is fine at Breakfast on Viagra but I just went back to something more Abrasive with Graham on 90.1 yelling "were for everyone...;not just the Baby boomers!!!!!!

Vega was also one of the Yachts that sailed against the French Nuclear Tests in our Backyard

Moruroa Atoll and the Vega (Source Wilkypedia)

In May 1972, when the newly-formed Greenpeace Foundation put out a call to sympathetic skippers to help them protest against the French Government's atmospheric nuclear tests at the Pacific atoll of Moruroa, a response came from David McTaggart, a Canadian expatriate and former entrepreneur based in New Zealand. McTaggart, a champion badminton player in his youth, had sold his business interests and relocated to the South Pacific following a gas explosion which seriously wounded an employee at one of his ski-lodges. Outraged that any government could exclude him from any part of his beloved Pacific, McTaggart offered his yacht, the Vega, to the cause, and set about assembling a crew.

In 1973, McTaggart sailed the Vega into the exclusion zone around Moruroa, only to have his vessel rammed by the French Navy. When he repeated the protest the following year, French sailors boarded the Vega and brutally beat McTaggart. Later, the Navy released to the media staged photographs of McTaggart dining with senior navy officers, which suggested a degree of civility between the opposing parties. A different picture emerged when photographs of McTaggart's beating, smuggled off the yacht by crew member Anne-Marie Horne, also appeared in the media.

The campaign against French nuclear testing achieved a victory when the French government announced a halt to atmospheric testing, only to begin testing underground. Greenpeace would continue to campaign against testing in the Pacific until the French ceased their testing programme in 1995

Whatever you think of the station Vega 95.3 its a Great Callsign !!!

I love WOR - it is one of the great reputable rascals of broadcasting. But on this one I think they, or the good Kreskin, have a very good press agent.

I recall many ýears back when their tv arm was hauled up in front of the FCC after it was discovered that the lab-coated professor introduced as their science correspondent was in fact the unemployed brother in law of the station's PD.

WOR is a bit like Sydney's 2GB and Auckland's 1ZB, and Los Angeles' KNX. They've all kept more of their identity than many of the clone radios these days, and I would cut them a lot of slack for that.

And they've been at it since 1922, so they are among our senior citzens.

(hard to imagine that there are radio stations around that are more than 80 years old. Do they get a free library card and cheap doctor visits, I wonder?)

Hi guys!

OK, I finally picked up the Pal connector. My local Rat Shack was out of stock and I didn't get a chance to get it all together till today. I used RS part # 278-265B { F to Pal} which is the needed adapter and the other end of it is a female coax. I would have had to use too many other adapters to get a PL-259 or SO-239 going, so I just bought part #278-255B { Phono to F} which is a male coax to RCA female plug.
Why? My antenna ends in a RCA male plug. I like it that way. If I want to use a PL-259, I just add on my RCA to SO-239 and I'm all set for a different radio.

The way I did it, you only need to use 2 adapters. The Pal, and the F to a RCA jack. Plus, my balun ends in a male BNC, so I used a female BNC to female RCA. Now I can just add the balun when needed in a snap. I like RCA plugs. So easy to use.

I'll tell ya, this radio is very very good. The sync detector works like a charm. The DSB {Double sideband} also is extremely good. Actually works. If that doesn't do the job, just go USB or LSB sync.The PBT is excellent. It can measured and adjusted in tiny increments till it sounds just the way you like it. They did a great job here.

Add the bass and treble controls and the choices of 4 or 7 kHz bandwidths, and you just have a superb setup. If you can't get this rig adjusted to your personal liking, you have a problem not the radio.I tried external speakers ONCE, but enjoy the internal speaker better so far. You get used to the ergomonics pretty quickly just like any new radio.

Now, I thought perhaps the external antenna setup would fix the ECSS offset problem completely, but it didn't. BUT, it's not off as much as it was. Still, it's not a big issue. It may be that this radio is just more sensitive.

I definitely recommend this radio for the true hobby enthusiast. Now, the price is up there at $500, but you know what? I think it's worth it. Don't forget you always have the option of using it as a satellite receiver also if you ever choose to.

I think they should have made 2 models.
One for $350-$400 without the XM components and $550 for the XM model.
Why should I have to subsidize XM users needed parts if I don't want XM sat radio?

That's the only catch with this radio. At least you don't have to buy the $50 XM antenna if you don't want XM. Other then that, you'll really like it.
As a portable,
IT CAN'T BE BEAT. In fact, it's too good to take outside.

Tonight I'll do more sensitivity testing and fill you in. I'm liking this radio more and more daily.

Anytime Mike.

I enjoy talking to and helping you guys out anytime. I remember how some people in here were so nice to me when I first started out with newbie questions. But they still replied to help me and I didn't forget that.

All it says is "assembled in India" and the manual states "Eton out of Ca." is the manufacturer. I bet once word gets around about this rig from more respected reviewers, it will sell good.
You'll get one you'll see.

And about wanting to wait for later production runs, you might have something there. On the back of the radio on the left side of where the tilt stand comes out, there is small circle covered with a tab of plastic that can snap off. I couldn't find one word about what it is or what it does anywhere in the docs.

But, one other user called Eton up about it and they say it was meant to be the XM antenna port but was later redesigned.
So it's a useless hole/tab. But, I have a feeling it won't be removed anytime soon.
My radio is the 122nd made.

Yes Joe I own one. Amazon has them too but I don't think they give a 60 day return policy. I added some more to the original thread. news:11embkr1lmkdq82@corp.supernews.com

Good rig. I think you'll love it. Too bad I don't have Sat 800 to compare it to. It's well made and solid. Speaker is just great. It's like it's radio inbetween being a tabletop and a portable. Kinda like in a class all it's own. I recommend it but then again I recommend eating glass to make one stronger...

Also try replacing all of the batteries. That is a fine receiver, lets

Radio Shaft! LOL

It was pouring here with lots of lightning all day and night the day I got it so I didn't go out. Even if I did, I wouldn't have used the external antenna that night. Too stormy.

Sat night, I went in to RS just near closing and they were out of stock. Too late to go to any others in the area.

Sunday, picked up some recommended parts but they turned out to be too many. Like 4 adapters to get a PL-259 or 239 in action. Too many. I figured out what was really needed for myself after orientating myself with this "Pal" connector. I never saw or used one before.

Wanted to go out Sunday night so I couldn't make the exchanges till today.

In the meantime I was using alligator clips from my main ant to the whip on the radio so I was still using it all that time.

Now I'm going to eat dinner bye :)

Thanks. That was all I was asking for. The one I found in that

They are "good" refurbished radios for $80.
A factory new YB400/G4000 for $140 is way overpriced and can't compare to a Sony 7600GR in the same price range.

I love my YB-400. It's a great portable. Really nice for outdoor use, but also perfectly fine for indoor use (though of course not as good as a tabletop model, but that's neither here nor there). It does have SSB, however, you cannot select between LSB and USB. Frankly, the SSB performance is nothing to write home about on the YB-400, but it's FM, AM, and general shortwave reception are very good.

Is the U.S. transforming China, or is China transforming us?

When Hao Fengjun left China to go to Australia to defect, he brought with him a large number of 6-10 Office documents loaded on his MP-3 player [see below]. One of those documents details a meeting held in Shenzhen on October 19-20, 2004, for the purpose of organizing the investigation of The Epoch Times and two other independent Chinese-language media that have also regularly reported on &#65533;sensitive&#65533; subjects that the CCP prefers were not covered, New Tang Dynasty T.V. and Sound of Hope Radio.

In November 2001 the magazine China Brief published an invaluable article &#65533;How China&#65533;s Government Is Attempting to Control Chinese Media in America.&#65533; http://www.jamestown.org/publications_details.php?volume_id=17&&issue_id=638

In June 2005 the magazine Chinascope (&#65533;How the Chinese Government Came to Dominate Chinese Language Media in the United States&#65533; http://chinascope.org/june05/feature.pdf) revisited this topic and expanded on the treatment given in the China Brief article. The Chinascope article in particular discusses the context for China&#65533;s domination of the Chinese-language media. It notes the huge disproportion between the aggressive, purposive actions of the P.R.C. to take advantage of the U.S.&#65533;s free institutions and the U.S&#65533;s largely passive response. The U.S. has neither effectively defended U.S. institutions here at home against the P.R.C.&#65533;s challenge nor effectively projected into China media informed by the principles of a free society.

Chilling Testimony Before Congress:
http://english.epochtimes.com/news/5-7-31/30785.html

The 6-10 Office document:

Tianjin City Public Security Bureau, Office of Cult-Related Crime Prevention and Administration
(Formerly Tianjin City Public Security Bureau 610 Office)

Oct. 21, 2004

Bureau Chief Zhang:

From Oct. 19 to 20, the No. 26 Bureau of the Ministry of Public Security held a meeting in Shenzhen for directors of the 610 offices in the public security departments and public security bureaus in Tianjin, Beijing, Shanghai, Guangdong province, Shandong province, Jiangsu province, Shaanxi province, Hunan province and Anhui province. [�]

During the meeting, each province gave reports on their overseas investigation of the three media [The Epoch Times, New Tang Dynasty T.V., and Sound of Hope Radio], collected by overseas special agents.

Comrade Zhang Yue listened to our bureau's report on collecting information from the Epoch Times website and praised our work here in Tianjin. The Tanggu Branch Bureau reported on the work of the spy with code name "Investigator 102." Comrade Zhang said this spy has done well. He/she has already infiltrated into the Epoch Times in Hong Kong. The essential task now is how to best position this agent and let him/her infiltrate deeper and higher and give full play of his/her special effect. We need to have long term plan for directing this agent, we shouldn't rush. We should consider the fact that this agent wants to work for us and use our assistance to get into Hong Kong's political circle. We can make some arrangements for him/her, to help him/her release his/her burden and work for us. The Hedong Branch Bureau reported on 3 agents (Jin T9901, Dong 16, and 269). All three are on good footings. The key is to direct them to obtain internal information from The Epoch Times more directly, in order to improve Tianjin's investigation over the 3 media.

2. Opinions on Deployment

This special investigation case will continue to be uniformly administered by the No. 26 Bureau, with participation from the 610 offices from the public security departments and bureaus in Tianjin and the other 8 cities and provinces. The task for the 6 provinces is to rely on the overseas secret forces to deepen overseas investigation and improve personnel arrangement. Collect criminal evidence against the 3 media's reporters, columnists, staff writers, and their connections inside China. At the same time, develop a strategic battle plan to gradually weaken the influence of the 3 media, including inserting someone into the 3 media to influence their content and create conflict among these media, forcing out the few diehard members from the 3 media, and try to stir up internal chaos. Especially try to obtain information on the true identity and activity of "Zhao Zifa" [an Epoch Times reporter who regularly interviews individuals inside mainland China] as soon as possible.

At the meeting, each local bureau was required to prepare a detailed local plan on how to implement the Ministry's deployment plan.

3. Our thoughts on Implementation

We have the following thoughts on how to implement the plan in accordance to the requirement announced at the meeting.

1) In the near future, meet with the directors, national security team leaders, and key police members of the Tanggu and Hedong branch bureaus to explore how to use four overseas agents' to their potentials, position them correctly, and investigate the 3 media. We'll try to make a detailed work plan in half a month, submit it to the No. 26 Bureau, and begin implementation.

2) Strengthen internet monitoring of The Epoch Times, analyze its overall content to identify its characteristics, with emphasis on obtaining information about its reporters and staff writers who publish information on Falun Gong. [�]

3) Improve our bureau's investigation work mechanism. Zhao Yuezeng will be responsible for the overall administration of the case. Zhao Guoli will be in charge of overall investigation. Shi He will be in charge of training for police officers from the two branch offices. Yang Guolan will be in charge of summary of intelligence reports. Zhang Yuwei will be responsible for collecting information from our monitoring sites. Our office will take the lead to coordinate a bi-monthly standing meeting on this case with the Tanggu and Hedong branch bureaus. The purpose of the meeting will be to report the latest news on the Ministry's and other bureau's investigations, research our investigative work and troubleshooting the problems, adjust the direction of our investigation, deepen the investigation, and pass notices from No. 26 Bureau and our findings onto the Tanggu and Hedong branch bureaus in a timely manner, so that the police from the two branch bureaus can have the latest news and direct the agents in target areas to collect information.

4) Guarantee manpower, material supply and funding for this investigation. No. 26 Bureau of the Public Security Ministry has decided to allocate special funding to the local bureaus. We will provide timely financial support for the Tanggu and Hedong branch bureaus, strengthen communication with police officers who are directing the special agents, and improve their skill in working with the agents, in order to ensure Tianjin's leading role in this investigation.

Hi RK,

Wow, how neat is that. All I would need is a So-239 to RCA for when I wanted to use the RCA plug or just unscrew it for normal operation. I saw a cable listed when I first looked at the radio at Universal but didn't know what it was cause I didn't know what a Pal connector was. Much thanks.

The XM capability adds maybe $5. It's ust an interface IC that talks to the control/display part of the uP, and a mini USB jack. The actual XM receiver is built into the ''Plug and Play'' smart antenna, sold seperately.

Who cares what the people and Senate has to say. I'll just stroll into my horse barn and make John Bolton ambassador to the U.N. cause I want it so. I don't care what other parties think and how the goverment process works, I'll just bypass it altogether. If you don't like it, try and do something about it. You can't, and even if you could, I'd stop you anyway so what's the point?

Enjoy America. Especially when they take your land and home from you for a buddy that happens to be a private developer.

It really shows that Bush had no other choice because the democrats were going to bottle that nomination up and not let it go to a vote.
Given that abrasive SOB's background would be just fine. He was

Bolton had more than enough votes to win confirmation in the Senate - but the Democrats were filibustering to prevent the vote. Rather than leave us without representation, President Bush appointed the guy he wanted.

Over the years, 15 Supreme Court justices were appointed in recess appointments.

Personally, I think Bolton was a good choice.

The most notorious MKULTRA experiments were the CIA's pioneering studies of the drug that would years later feed the heads of millions: lysergic acid diethylamide, or LSD. The CIA was intrigued by the drug, and harbored hopes that acid or a similar drug could be used to clandestinely disorient and manipulate target foreign leaders. (The Agency would consider several such schemes in its pursuit of Cuban leader Fidel Castro, who they wanted to send into a drug-induced stupor or tirade during a public or live radio speech.) LSD was also viewed as a way to loosen tongues in CIA interrogations.

In his thorough book on MKULTRA and similar projects, The Search for the "Manchurian Candidate," John Marks reports that most of the CIA researchers tried LSD themselves. In fact, an early phase of the experiments was probably the setting for the first acid trip in the United States -- experienced by a courageous CIA man no less!

The fact that these experiments took place is remarkable in and of itself, but the story of the CIA's LSD trips approaches the unbelievably bizarre when the cast of characters is considered. In his recent history of the early exploits of the CIA, The Very Best Men, Evan Thomas describes Sidney Gottlieb, the Stranglovian scientist who ran the MKULTRA project: "Born with a clubfoot and a stutter, he compensated by becoming an expert folk dancer and obtaining a Ph.D. from Cal Tech. A pleasant man who lived on a farm with his wife, Gottlieb drank only goat's milk and grew Christmas trees, which he sold at a roadside stand." When he wasn't busy on the farm, Dr. Gottlieb was dosing subjects with LSD-laced drinks, scrutinizing their reactions, and searching for qualities of the drug that would benefit CIA covert actions.

The CIA's LSD experiments were conducted on many unwitting subjects, most often prisoners or patrons of brothels set up and run by the Agency, which had installed two-way mirrors in the establishments to allow for observation of the drug's effects (these studies were referred to as "Operation Midnight Climax"). Some of the MKULTRA subjects who were informed faced even more inhumane treatment: during one experiment in Kentucky, seven volunteers were given LSD for 77 days straight.

One of the experiments probably proved fatal. On November 19, 1953, an Army scientist and germ warfare specialist named Frank Olson, who was working on an MKULTRA project, was slipped a solid dose of LSD in his drink. Then, after spending eight days stumbling about in what many observers described as a paranoid, depressed state, Olson jumped through his hotel window in New York and fell ten stories to his death.

The Agency covered up its role in Olson's demise, and twenty-two years would pass before his family would learn of the events leading up to his death. When the CIA's acid exploits were made public in the mid-1970s, the Agency found itself facing heavy criticism. One Senate committee put it this way in 1975:

"From its beginning in the early 1950s until its termination in 1963, the program of surreptitious administration of LSD to unwitting non-volunteer human subjects demonstrates a failure of the CIA's leadership to pay adequate attention to the rights of individuals and to provide effective guidance to CIA employees. Though it was known that the testing was dangerous, the lives of subjects were placed in jeopardy and were ignored.... Although it was clear that the laws of the United States were being violated, the testing continued."

Though the most prominently discussed aspect of MKULTRA is the CIA's LSD work, the program included many other unusual investigations relating to the science of mind control. CIA researchers probed the potential of numerous parapsychological phenomena, including hypnosis, telepathy, precognition, photokinesis and "remote viewing."

These studies weren't conducted merely to satisfy the CIA's scientific curiosity -- the Agency was looking for weapons that would give the United States the upper hand in the mind wars. Toward that objective, the Agency poured millions of dollars into studies probing literally dozens of methods of influencing and controlling the mind. One 1955 MKULTRA document gives an indication of the size and range of the effort; the memo refers to the study of an assortment of mind-altering substances which would:

"promote illogical thinking and impulsiveness to the point where the recipient would be discredited in public"

"increase the efficiency of mentation and perception"

"prevent or counteract the intoxicating effect of alcohol"

"promote the intoxicating effect of alcohol"

"produce the signs and symptoms of recognized diseases in a reversible way so that they may be used for malingering, etc."

"render the indication of hypnosis easier or otherwise enhance its usefulness"

"enhance the ability of individuals to withstand privation, torture and coercion during interrogation and so-called 'brainwashing'"

"produce amnesia for events preceding and during their use"

"produc[e] shock and confusion over extended periods of time and capable of surreptitious use"

"produce physical disablement such as paralysis of the legs, acute anemia, etc."

"produce 'pure' euphoria with no subsequent let-down"

"alter personality structure in such a way that the tendency of the recipient to become dependent upon another person is enhanced"

"cause mental confusion of such a type that the individual under its influence will find it difficult to maintain a fabrication under questioning"

"lower the ambition and general working efficiency of men when administered in undetectable amounts"

"promote weakness or distortion of the eyesight or hearing faculties, preferably without permanent effects"
Few of MKULTRA's objectives were realized, but the very conduct of these experiments caused many critics of the CIA to argue that successful or not, CIA scientists shouldn't pry at the doors of perception.

I find it facinating you defend this leader and DARE to compare him with Washington and Clinton who both had actual working brains. I think you NEED a seeing eye dog but then again you're projecting and don't know it. Go chew on that.

bush has to be the dumbest, most moronic deer caught in the headlights impostor of a man I have ever seen on the political scene. I want a flight suit too Mom. Say "bye bye' in less then 3 years.

The Democrats were doing it for a good reason. Why can't the Dems be right?
Because the "take my right's away too please" dipshits say they are not right?
Because the cowards with big mouths who drive 3 tons "cars" and don't have to worry about getting their arms and legs blown off in a war say so?

No bush appointed the man who follows his idealogy and orders that's all and he dictated what he wanted. One day all will come out about bush. The again,

I am so heart broken over all this. I knew about some it. Man is a animal who does more harm then good. It's aways "weapons" "mind control of other people", dominating other people, extermination of other people, classifying of people. It's all disgusting and perverse no matter what country or who does it.

Man is actually the lowest form of life on this planet cause HE KNOWS BETTER.

I'm convinced we will end up destroying each other in the end. It's in our blood...

Recess appointments are an executive power granted in Article 2, section 2, paragraph 3 of the Constitution.

"The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session."

I replied to David earlier with a link with a very limited history of recess appointments - that post seems to have taken a long cut, so

At about $500.00,I am not about! to buy one.Is it that much better at pulling in long distance AM and Shortwave without an external antenna than for instance a good $150.00 price range radio? For me,it would have to be one heck of a super duper radio.I am not knocking the radio though.I guess I am just too cheap to pay that kind of money.I have an old heavy big Sears Travler transistor multiband radio that does a very good job at pullling in AM/and FM/and Shortwave stations without an external antenna and the radio has great sound too.I only paid about three or four dollars for it at a Goodwill store about nine years ago.The on/off/volume control is about worn out and so are the push buttons on top of the radio.I can get it to work ok for a while if I keep messing around wth it.Thing is though,every time I turn it off,I have to mess around with the controls again for a long time to get it to work again so I just let it sit in the corner,unused.Basically,the old radio is just worn out.

Most wars are started by a few. "Let's you and him fight" is good for the bottom line. Nations are framed in order to cause invasions and wars. Dishonesty is rampant in many 'intelligence' services, which, in most cases, are nothing more than script writers used to justify almost anything.

Remember the 'big lie' attribution. Which present day attack reminds you most of the Reichstag fire?

That's the problem I have with the whole concept of a $500 portable.
The same investment (or even less) in a tabletop will buy you more performance.

This high-end part of the portable market puzzles me.

It's not exactly a new concept. Both Sony and Grundig have both fielded portables that topped a kilobuck. Some, by a great deal. I remember at the CES in 1989, Grundig displayed a portable that had so many features you couldn't capture them all. Even had WeFax. For more than I paid for my first Mercedes.

I"ve known a number of hobbyists that bought such rigs as more or less 'one stop' centers for all their listening needs. And in today's climate where an external antenna is the moral equivalent of shotgunning the neighbors' dogs, a good table top is less attractive than a portable of presumed higher performance.

I know, when I was living at home, my father was absolutely intent on preventing any radio in the house that couldn't sit on a table and be completely self contained. External antennae were forbidden on principle. Internal antennae were more than sufficient. Even though the color TV in the family room wiped out listening on all bands on every radio in the house. But he wouldn't hear of anything different. And even when I did A/B comparisons right in front of him, he wouldn't admit that there was a difference. He was committed to denying that good listening required an external antenna. And he wasn't alone in that thinking. So, in my neighborhood, there were a lot of higher end portables. Often with highly disappointing results.

Still, they sold in considerable numbers.

The mentality persists even today.

This mindset is also fueled by an appetite for gadgetry that high feature portable radios feed nicely. Look were they sell: Gadget stores.

You're right. For listening, you can spend the same money or often less and get a much better package of performance in a table top.

But performance isn't often the only priority when selecting a receiver.

I remember a Sony portable that was 2 or 3 grand. Then suddenly AES closed them out for about a grand. I bet there were a lot of ticked off SWL's. Was it the CRF-1 maybe? I don't remember the model # right off hand. I would have loved to have one but the price was too high for me. It looked like it was quite a large radio. Anyone remember the model #? Anyone have one?

Boltons backround of using his power to "blackmail, intimidate, and force his way on subordinates, fellow workers and just seeing things his way and no elses is why. And that the old grind I hear all the time. If the Dems offer any view different from this administration and the homosexual Karl Rove, they HAVE to be "guilty" of chasing "political opportunities. So I guess WHATEVER the dems do is wrong. Guess, what? It's a political party and they have every right to chase political venues.

Yes, but they said on debates on TV this was NOT a case for recess. That the Senate was able and willing to act. If that takes time, so be it. Even one Republican said this was not a good idea. Not at all.

Look Mark, it's obvious to anyone bush is doing what he wants whenever he wants to. Him and that other war criminal Cheney.

I'm amazed that this administration has you hypnotized into believing whatever they say and do is right and good. Of course this country's medicare laws are not written by the big pharma corps, drug prices fixed, energy bills written by the big oil corps allowing our poor planet to self destruct with environmental laws they wanted, trees cut down in mass in areas that were once protected and species and plants wiped out for good on a daily basis.

Crippling and killing our young people especially minorities so white trash can get enough gas for their new 13 tons trucks. Yes, they just came out with one just under the 13 ton legal limit truck to rival the Hummer.

But these people support the troops who buy them. Why not?? They keep the oil flowing for them. You'd think with oil over $61 dollars our "leader" would call on all patriotic Americans to purchase small cars to help in the effort to reduce our need on foreign oil from these Arab states that use that money to kill us.

Thanks to bush we the U.S. have never been hated so much all around the world.

Now if this idiot was so keen on the "terror" problem, and he showed it by closing all our borders up tight, calling for gas rationing, I might believe him. But he and Cheney are full of shit. I fully believe they knew about the plot of 911 but let it happen. Yes, the deaths of 3500 Americans mean NOTHING to this people and the defense corporations.

Heck car companies knew certain designs would KILL people, that a number would DIE, but made "ecomonic decisions" that it's better and cheaper for them if these women,kids, mothers, grandfathers and babies died in a firey crash and burned to death alive.

So, you don't think they would dispose of 3500 people to make BILLIONS AND BILLIONS AND BILLIONS in defense contracts many of which were "no bid contracts" that Halliburton got?

That Cheney connected Halliburton cheated tax payers out of millions and wouldn't utter a word about it during the debates, "Cause it would take too long to explain" just like "I was too busy doing other things then volunteer for the war back then" while most Dems volunteered and bravely were willing to give up their lives for this country.

Answer me this. When a Republican named McCain who suffered in a POW camp for 5 years was running for president, why did the stinkin animal bush and buddies do everything to discredit his war service and McCain personally like he did to Kerry both of who served in wars?

Why did this bowlegged hick bastard and his homosexual buddy Karl Rove go after McCain a fellow Republican and WAR HERO? Why? WHY? WHY?

Ask seeing-eye-mutt about that. I'm sure he'll tie China into it somehow.

Well Steve,

if you look around, everyone seems to be getting out of the good tabletop models business or they stopped production and got out long ago. So the only good rigs up for sale to new comers are used and years old. What's left that's brand new and a decent rig for $500? The R75 that's about it. Unless you go the transmitter route and use it for receive only.

So, I already have many of these good rigs but they are used 2nd hand except my R75, Degen 1103 and the Nav fax 100 which doesn't even count. All the rest are years old.

So, these companies know the customer base is limited and don't want to spend gobs of money on new receivers like they made years ago. Here the Eton E1comes along . A decent receiver with all the goodies and sat radio to boot. Add to that it took years to get it out, and it's not "too serious" for newbies to learn but serious enough for us hobby types who like the outdoors.

So there you have it. You can satisfy some of the people all of the time, or all of the people some of the time but with SW radio folk, you can definitely NOT satistfy all the people all of the time.

You'll have to wait a couple years before you see used ones for $250 if ever. You can always buy one for fun and give it back 59 days later :)

Or maybe you'll keep it.....

I simply see the Power Amp/ Receiver/Phono stage as the main pieces.
And grouped them together as such.

The loop antenna and the expander are just accessories. Not essential to the main units.

Greetings all. As of late we've been getting some incredible thunderstorms with enough hits to think it's a war. Anyway some of my equipment has suffered and I'm looking for ideas to better protect everything in my house. Is a whole house surge protector the answer? Do I have to wrap the house in a metal grid? Any help or ideas would help. Everything is properly grounded just to start. I haven't had a direct hit but close enough....
Thanks for any input.

There are four main entry points for ligthning.
Radio antennas
AC main power
Telco CATV/Satellite

http://www.polyphaser.com/ppc_ptd_home.aspx
Is a good place to start.

Good protection won't be cheap. And according to some who live in FL, the strikes there are intense enough to defeat even good protection.

I have survived on direct strick that vaporised coax and antenna, and several near by strikes that took out nearby trees with no damage.

Good protection will also require a good, low resistance ground. Not a casual project.

The Dumocrates are in bed with the Socialists in the U.N. There is an important session in the U.N. comming up this September and the U.S. would have had no representation had the Dumocrates had there way.
Of course THAT IS what the Socialist Dumocrates want. An imoral, unethical

Has anyone noticed that in the past few years that the Democrats (Liberal left-wingers) have suddenly developed an affinity for WAR HEROES?

All the while out the other side of their mouths (or simply talking out their asses) they'll inform us that the Vietnam war was illegal, immoral, etc., etc.

Are you sure? I suppose it depends on the character of the person who is her handler at the time. "Her" verbal damage, if we must call it that, is monotony. "She" really has little of interest to say with the except of those fun and creative put-downs... or when "she" pretends to know physics. ;-)

H. L. Mencken was a well known author, newspaper columnist and political commentator who assumed room temperature in 1956. Here is one of his quotes:

"As democracy is perfected, the office of president represents, more and more closely, the inner soul of the people. On some great and glorious day the plain folks of the land will reach their heart's desire at last and the White House will be adorned by a downright moron." H.L.Mencken

Another way of looking at it is Bolton is focused on results. He expects his subordinates to be team players.

Yes, people have the right to chase political opportunities, but if doing this distracts you from the job at hand, what have you accomplished?

President Clinton: 140 recess appointments over two terms. Among them:

Former Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., ambassador to Saudi Arabia, August 1996. Put in the post two months after a bombing that killed 19 American soldiers stationed there, he received Senate confirmation in October 1997 and served until March 2001.

Mickey Kantor, commerce secretary, April 1996. He replaced Ron Brown, who died in a plane crash, but left in January 1997 before his nomination went before the Senate.

Roger Gregory, 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, December 2000. He was later re-nominated by Bush and confirmed by the Senate.

Bill Lann Lee, assistant attorney general for civil rights, August 2000. Blocked by Senate Republicans, he was appointed acting assistant attorney general in 1997, then received the recess appointment to serve out Clinton's term.

James Hormel, ambassador to Luxembourg, June 1999. A gay philanthropist whose nomination was blocked by Senate Republicans, he remained ambassador until near the end of Clinton's term.

As someone said here, that's too fine a unit to just give up on.
Those progressive symptoms suggest an internal power supply problem that a technician with the service manual might repair.
Corrosion on the main board, and cleaning it up, may be productive too.

Although they can fail (for a number of reasons) of course, diodes, transistors and IC's, if not overheated, and not used outside their electrical parameters (overvoltage, static etc,), have indefinate lives. LCDs, due to their organic materials, do wear out eventually (years and years) , but your unit's symptoms indicate a total unit power loss. Resistors also rarely fail if not overheated. Electrolytic capacitors are the most common problem as some dry up or leak. .Good luck.

"Amazing" in what way? That I don't drink your kool-aid? That I consider more people being killed as more bad, even though it didn't involve a -- GASP -- nuke?

Since you need it spelled out in simple terms, go to a library (aside: when there, don't pronounce it "lie-barry" -- they'll laugh), pick up this month's National Geographic, and read the story on the 60th anniversary. It'w written in simple, easy to understand english, so you'll get it, and there are pictures too, just in case the english is too tiring on you.

There's even a picture taken from 5 miles away from a 15 kiloton (Hiroshima-sized) strike, with a bunch of troops.

Good luck at trying to open your mind to a new concept.

I don't know.

I generally look for this sort of thing at hamfests.

They're usually about $2 per adapter, and I'll generally buy an assortment in the hopes of keeping stuff in stock that'll let me convert almost anything to almost anything else.

You never know when you might need an RCA-SMA adapter...

It's incorrect to characterize this as a choice between having or not having representation at the U.N. If Bush had been willing to field a less controversial candidate who was acceptable to both sides we would have had representation. He chose to circumvent the political process and we have a candidate who on his first day at work was booed as he entered the U.N. A spectacle that was seen on world wide television.
Classy act, eh.

Do not put a hard adapter in a 3.5mm socket. Use a 3.5mm plug with some flexible cable long enough to reach the table (for strain relief). Remember Sony provided these away with every 2010?

A majority of the Senate believed he should be confirmed.

Bolton was booed by protesters on the sidewalk outside of the UN - not by diplomats.

Kofi Annan said "He is the choice of the President and I will work with him,"

President Clinton: 140 recess appointments over two terms. Among them:

Former Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., ambassador to Saudi Arabia, August 1996. Put in the post two months after a bombing that killed 19 American soldiers stationed there, he received Senate confirmation in October 1997 and served until March 2001.

Mickey Kantor, commerce secretary, April 1996. He replaced Ron Brown, who died in a plane crash, but left in January 1997 before his nomination went before the Senate.

Roger Gregory, 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, December 2000. He was later re-nominated by Bush and confirmed by the Senate.

Bill Lann Lee, assistant attorney general for civil rights, August 2000. Blocked by Senate Republicans, he was appointed acting assistant attorney general in 1997, then received the recess appointment to serve out Clinton's term.

James Hormel, ambassador to Luxembourg, June 1999. A gay
philanthropist whose nomination was blocked by Senate Republicans, he remained ambassador until near the end of Clinton's term.

Bush chose to circumvent the normal political process, a process the republicans agreed to in the very recent past.

I see you agree with what I said. Not a very good way to start the first day of work, is it. It presents a poor image of the U.S. to the rest of the world at a time when we need international support for our occupation of Iraq.

That statement does not even qualify as faint praise of Bolton.

Yeah, but radiomart gets beat up here, not so much for stripping out options, but for being "imaginative" with the truth in his descriptions.

This seller doesn't seem to be up there with radiomart, but he does say some things which engage the imagination:

"Winner takes ALL"

ALL of what? Not the radio's loop antenna or the radio's dynamic expander. Those are being auctioned seperately. And not the radio's speaker. Your guess is as good as mine as where the speaker is. I suppose ALL means just the receiver chassis, the phono chassis and the audio power amp chassis, as well as an option to take the cabinet. In this case, the word ALL doesn't mean ALL of the original radio.

"Receiver has been tested and powers up ok."

The receiver has been tested, but there's no reason to think it passed it's test OK. In fact, I wouldn't expect it to work without it's 0A2. Unless I miss my guess, the radio uses a gas discharge regulator (the 0A2) to stabilize the voltage to the radio's local oscillator. Without that tube, the radio just won't work. Inexperienced people sometimes think those tubes are defective because they glow internally as they work, much like a neon sign. "powers up", in this case, seems to mean little more than "all the tubes glow clean".

Not there's anything wrong with being obtuse about the radio's condition. It's an Ebay auction. I've bought several dead radios through Ebay. But I prefer sellers who are more forthright about what they're selling.

Here they are Steve.

Selectable using the "Fast" button for the Display and Tuning resolutions only not the Select:

MW AM:
1]Display resolution: 10Hz, 100Hz, 1KHz
2]Tuning resolution: 10Hz, 100Hz, 1 kHz
3]Select: 9kHz 10 Khz

MW SSB:
1] 10Hz, 1kHz
2] 10 Hz, 1kHz
3] 9kHz 10kHz

LW and SW AM:
1] 10Hz 100Hz 1 khz
2] 10hz 100hz 1 khz
3] 5 khz

LW and SW SSB:
1] 10hz 1khz
2] 10hz 1khz
3] 5 Khz

FM:
1] 10khz 100khz
2] 20khz 100khz
3] 100 Khz

I want to add I love the dot matrix display.
It's groovy to look at at night :) No really, nice and big with plenty of options. Or, you can turn the display light off and it doesn't affect the local or GMT. It's really a pleasue Steve.

Also, I hooked up my good speakers and the sound is just superb.

Well on reflection, perhaps comparing him to Radio-mart was a bit harsh.

I'd feel better if he mentioned the "options" he took out are being sold on other auctions.

I'd think most folks who would bid on something like that would want the whole thing instead of a chassis.

Oh, that's what you meant to say. Now I understand. It's incorrect for Democrats to publicly voice their displeasure that the Chief Executive circumvented the political process by forcing an unacceptable candidate on the UN.

Republicans (such as our President) are less than adept at verbal skills, so I suppose it is ok for them to use non-verbal attacks instead. Such as dirty tricks on family members of individuals who expose the weak underpinnings of the Iraq invasion.

LA public schools.They are all the same all over U.S.A.nowdays.Yeah,they dope them down and put them on drugs,ritalin,luvox,and about six or seven other kinds of drugs and the kids are drug dealing their drugs all over the place.fed govt creates the problems and then steps in to "solve" the problems.The best public schools that fed govt drug money can buy! Thank GOD when I went to public schools back in my day (1946 to 1958) the schools weren't in the mess they are in today.

Hi Joe

I was just fooling around with you that day. You have been so helpful to me in the past. So Joe, whatever I can do to help you on whatever you want to know about the radio please please ask.

It's a great receiver and I think you'll just love it. Just a pleasure to use and listen to. Plus it looks great in "person". Much better then in the pictures of it. You just can't capture the display with those pictures online.

I would order it from the Sharper Image. There is a FREE shipping coupon for it or $20 off. Take the free shipping cause it costs like $26 to $30. You will pay tax though if you have a SI in your state. BUT, they give 60 days to return it for almost ANY reason you give. So paying the tax is worth it if you don't like it within 2 months you have a long time to decide and return it.

Coupons if they still work.

http://www.sharperimage.com/ls_0805_fsh50/

http://www.sharperimage.com/ls_0805_20off100/

So again Joe, please let me help you in any way I can.

Well, he does mention that near the bottom of his Ebay auction page. But to get there you well go past the sales pitches for:

classic Receiver
AND Mono Power Amp
AND a tube phonostage original bakelite type knobs (minus one knob, to be auctioned seperately with dynamic expander) Original connection cables are ALL included
ALSO INCLUDED is the original Schematic from the rear of the console with a tube layout chart

A Radio-mart comaprision is a bit harsh. More like Ron Popiel.

Dunno. Consoles were large, and the really fancy ones were the home entertainment centers of the day. Shipping them around is expensive. Few people have the room to properly display a few console radios. Nice table top radios attract more buyers and usually get a better price.

I find it interesting that those on the left claim to be more supportive of alternative lifestyles, yet they seem to be the ones who take pleasure in accusing people of being gay.

Rove is married.

As evidence folks are gunning for him from all directions, yesterdays gossip column in the Baltimore Sun had speculation he's got a girlfriend on the side. No proof of that either...

When Judge Roberts was nominated, folks on the Daily Kos were speculating his son was gay because Mom looked embarrassed when he mentioned him in his speech. Then it turned out mom was embarrassed because the toddler was clowning around on stage during the nomination speech - so then they started speculating the judge was gay...

Bolton? Results? Hell, the guy is "the Godfather of the North Korean Atomic Bomb". His diplomatic imcompetance insured that they have kept up their nuclear program, just to stick it in his face.

And there's tons of Soviet Plutonium littered around Russia because he screwed up the cleanup program there, too.

He's a frigging lawyer, and should be limited to something he's competant at. Maybe cleaning the shark tank at the Washington, DC Aquarium.

Oh, so because he's "married" that means he can't be bisexual or totally gay? Movie stars like Rock Hudson and many other gay politicians got married too. It's called a "beard" Mark. Roves wife is his beard.

If you're in the public, political and religious spotlight and you're single all your life, or at the age where fine young Republican men should be married with kids already and you're not, and you look gay or are involved in the scene, you always have that old, old solid excuse just in case.

"But he's married". Grow up Mark.

And this still doesn't explain why a gay ex G.I. prostitute with no credentials or value to anyone decent is roaming the halls of the White House anytime he wanted. I guess he was there to show how he perfected cold fusion....

They are no longer available from most suppliers, but you can check anyone who carries parts for appliances, (razors, toaster, etc.) take the radio with you to find one that fits. you might search for antique radio parts, but they will be more expensive. Hope this helps.

You don't seem to have pointed to anything but idle speculation to indicate Karl Rove is gay.

There are lots of people in the white house at any given time.

Do you have anything to show Rove spent time with the gay ex G.I. prostitute?

Snide comments are sometimes difficult to pull off. Clearly the recess appointment was far less than a classy act. And Bolton himself is far less than a classy act.

Bolten may be a bit abrasive, but he's just what the UN needs. Recess appointments are not new with Bush. But now that it's a Republican doing it it's a different story.

You need to refresh your knowledge base of American federal laws...Bush has the legal right to do so under the conditions that the liberals forced the committee to stone-wall a solid decision. Bolton's appointment will expire when ? Check that out and get back to us...that will prove that your truly interested in ethical American government, and not another liberal Bush hater. Seems to me that Clinton's staff never passed a basic ENTNAC security check, and by federal security regulations, and those I had to comply with during my 26 years of service, Mr. Clinton's escapades in foreign countries labeled hostile and off limits to US citizens should have made him ineligible for even the basic security clearance let alone ultra-colored, comparmentalized clearances.

If ethics do interest you then where were you some years ago...Clinton's thrice lying to federal judges should have landed him in a federal penn, or automatically removed him from office pending a full investigation and legal proceeding. Why should we all comply with the law and not him ??? Bush seems an angel and up front rather a back-door man in more ways than one like Mr. Clinton. A fool's follies are easy to love, but deliberate inclinations to socialism or an American form of Communism is above the law and free will of the US citizens. It doesn't take a village Hillary, it takes a family. The USSR and Nazi Germany tried what you said....and the result was what ???? Give parents the right to discipline their kids without this ridiculous child abuse crap, and get the National Guard in the schools and on the streets...shoot to kill the Bloods and other pushers, and the first time Billy Badass disrupt the school or accosts the teacher, kick his ass all the way to a cell until his parents can be located, and give them a choice...a huge fine, or teen boot camp for the brat or bratess.

Flowers for some John and H. Dziardziel !!!

After 24 hours without back-up battery's and not connected to the 4,5 V trafo (the reset theory John S. mentioned).

I put back the 2 back-up battery's, connected the 4,5 V trafo and ... oh wonder, the display gave a clear view. The commands via the push buttons were follwed and I could listen to my favorite far-away shortwave broadcasting. Also FM senders are working. However, not all the functions like scanning are working, sometimes it is fading away and display disapears. Some minutes later it comes back. Now it is working longer time.

So I think time comes to open the radio and clean inside as H.D suggests.

Does anybody know a www-site where I can find drawings of te inside ? I have bad experience with Sony as it goes about supply information about parts numbers and drawings.

I presume you're talking about the agreement to end filibusters.

My impression is the agreement was only for judicial appointments.

If it was applicable to the Bolton nomination, it would seem the Democrats have the short term memory problem, as they filibustered.

in point of fact I hear Bolton timeing was staged to make hay of the dems and lay possible ground work for further attacks (which is just part of the game in DC)

Is stamp collecting dying? I know people don't use stamps as much as they once did, since they don't use the regular mail as much as they once did. However, I'd expect this to be a boon to stamp collecting, as it makes stamps much more 'collectible'.

The next time you decide to troll rec.radio.shortwave, I suggest you

A solid decision by whom? In this case bush could not have circumvented the political process if he choose someone everyone liked. Both Dems and Repubs.
That would have been fair and right way to do things instead of choosing who he wants and who he buddies want. Why not try to come to some kind of

I think 2007 but I don't have to get back to anyone. Who are you to tell me I have to check back to prove anything to anyone? I know I'm ethical and that's all that counts. I personally don't care what you or anyone thinks about my views and opinions if they don't like them.

Seems to me that Another narrow mind outta the woods. If you speak out about bush and his homosexual buddy you have to love Clinton. This is the old, old, old way of "fighting back" when people speak out aginst Mr. Flight Suit Man. How do you know how I felt and what I did when Clinton lied? Ah but you already knew that in your mind about me didn't you?

Bush seems an angel and up front rather a

Yeah, I guess taking away a private citizens land and home for a mall or casino is not a form of communism.
Are you able to hear, read and speak?
Do you read the news???

You see, if Flight Suit Man closed the mexican border tight, and stopped all the TONS of drugs from entering into the U.S and allowing a BUMPER crop of heroin out of Afghanistan while we have military all over the country, we wouldn't have any pushers or Bloods to shoot. Many lives would saved too.

Seems to me you have no idea WTF you're taling about. Yes, let's go out and blame the blackman, the real enemy and pusher here. Shoot them all. Yes almighty you got all the problems sown up don't you?

Sir, you're a complete and total out of the loop moron. Go take a nap.....

Just last night I was lamenting the shift of the old HF RTTY Newsagency services to satellite then the Internet. It's possible to now receive or download 10 or 100 times as much information in the same period of time, but it just isn't as much fun!

Plenty, and there's still stations out there I've never heard before. Why just

I hate to say it, but here we go again.

It is not dead. Not even close. It is true that sw is changing. Due to the internet and satellite, many of the major broadcasters have dropped English service and or service to the "modern/western" world. In the main, they have not dropped any of the "foreign" language programming directed to the third world. Half the time I DX the tropical bands, I find a transmitter that I cant find on any of the lists.

If your disappointed about the loss of the good old days of Radio Moscow and the cold war, you've got plenty of domestic conspiracy crack pots to enjoy. And there is still stuff out there like Voice Of Justice (Iran) and Voice of Korea if you like the propaganda stuff.

The medium is simply too economical and practical ever to be diminished to the point were there wasn't enough for a hobbyist to listen to.

Hello.

I have whole-house protection as well as individual surge protectors and/or UPS units on each and every one of my electronic components. These certainly offer adequate protection except, of course, against a direct lightning strike such as a "bolt from the blue," for which there is no advance warning. (My antennas are all indoor types; my main antenna, a Wellbrook ALA330S, is mounted in my attic. So these antennas do not have to be physically disconnected from my radios during a storm as it is imperative to do with outdoor ones.)

Even so, when my equipment is not in actual use, everything is unplugged (including the power supply to the Wellbrook antenna). I have written about this, and its importance, before. While it may seem a "pain" to unplug all the time, believe me, you soon get used to it and the peace-of-mind it affords makes it well-worth the small effort required.

Best,

Joe

Have 8 ohm speakers and just bought a receiver that has power output at 6 ohms per speaker channel

My assumption is 8 ohms is ok for the speakers, as in... don't use less than 6 ohm speakers. But I haven't put a system together in years and don't know for sure that I can use the 8 ohm speakers with 6 ohm output from the receiver.

Adding to the mix is the increasing cost of oil, Oil generated Electricity and hence Shortwave transmissions..

BUT,

It'll work fine (as long as the amp is modern solid state). You will not be able to get quite as many Watts as you would get at 6 Ohms, but the difference is inconsequential.

The 8-Ohm speakers will work just fine.
Only "hint" is that the maximum level of power output could not be reached. On the other way there are many 8-Ohm speaker with better audio level than many speakers with 4 Ohms on a given amp.
You just can feed every speaker with higher resistance (Ohms) on any amplifier. Just do prevent going much under the given resistance of the amp output. This will damage many amplifiers not having a security circuit.

Dear "Lucky,"

Thanks for the kind comments. I'm glad you're enjoying your new Etón E1. I hope you'll continue posting here as I am very interested in your experience with it.

I'm not going to buy one just yet, if ever. The radio does not offer IBOC on the MW or FM bands, nor does it offer DAB (Canadian and/or European) or DRM. I should have thought that Etón would have included these advanced features in a new radio, even one designed primarily as a shortwave receiver.

I would also not buy one unless and until it has been on the market for some time as I have been "twice-burned" by Etón/Grundig: first with the Grundig Classic 960 which I bought from Willoughby and Ward in 1996 (when it first came out). It cost $249.95 plus shipping and came with a 25(!)-year warranty. So I'm theoretically covered until 2021. But what a piece of junk! I'm on my third unit but this one is just as bad as the two previous. Now that it's discontinued, I wonder how they'll honor that warranty as they told me that they do not actually work on the radio but merely replace it when problems occur.

The second example was my Grundig Satellit 800 which I purchased in June 2000 (one of the initial production runs) and which lasted only 3 1/2 years before needing repair. I will say that, after Drake's repair and refurbishing (for $109.00) it has worked well and I like the radio very much (as opposed to that Classic 960).

So I'm naturally leery of buying an Etón product until the production people have ironed out all the bugs. I would also want to see a review in PASSPORT.

But, even so, without the more advanced radio circuitry (pay satellite radio doesn't count; in any event it holds absolutely no interest to me), I feel the radio is "dead in the water." I may be wrong. Time will tell.

Again thanks for your comments and I hope, for your sake, that my impressions and opinions are wrong.

Best,

Joe

The difference to the receiver between 6 and 8 ohms at the speaker outputs is trivial. In fact, the impedance rating of the speaker is only nominal to begin with. It may be higher or lower in reality than the rating, and over the frequency range of the program material, may vary considerably either way, especially with budget speakers.

Don't go much lower, especially if you use more than one set of speakers. But two ohms higher? Don't give it a thought.

Enjoy.

Earlier tonight I heard a numbers station on 8175 khz. I listened to it for around ten minutes, until the transmission ended at 0200 utc. It was a female voice. I'm not completely sure of the language, but I halfway suspect it was Czech and that I was hearing the Czech numbers station S10d.

I made a short recording in the hope that some knowledgeable soul can help me ID it:

I hope this link works, but you might have to copy it and paste it into your address bar.

So I'm curious to know if there are any general SWL online groups, aside from this fine rec.radio.shortwave, that any of you folks might recommend. Back when I remember that the old SWL group on QTH.net was pretty active but I guess that the cantankerous ways of that Duane, the list administrator, has put enough people off that this group is only a shadow of what it once was. It's my understanding that a lot of the activity has gone to the Yahoo groups but there seem to be so darn many of them that I just thought I'd ask here which of these groups is worthwhile and not inundated with junk, spam and nonsense. There seem to be a lot of Yahoo groups of such specificity as to render them useful only if you want opinions on a particular product or if you're having trouble with that particular product. What I'm looking for is simply a few decent, general SWL groups, Yahoo or otherwise, which have large enough of an active membership to make membership worthwhile.

Making it over here at S-6 just above the noise floor. Its clear and listenable in LSB with NB turned on. Currently hearing percussive and vocal it sounds like the E1 is better than I thought it would be, this one could go down in history as a classic. I wonder if the Degen 1108 will be even better since it will have the E1 to jump off of.

many of the complaints I have read seem to be of the "misunderstood" nature and if the designer was present to answer them would actually make sense.

I believe that even though the set has XM circuitry, it is a bonus for american users and that the set was really designed for a global market and that is the reason for the antenna connector that is a pain for the US user. notice the choice for the FM range in the setup options.

I have a feeling that they left out the ferrite antenna because the set is too big to rotate and they wanted it to be more omnidirectional for the average user and that anyone that cared to MW DX would not be stupid enough to use a built in rod and would use at least a hardwire connected select-a-tenna for max signal gathering.

with a set of this awesome performance, ECSS is a waste of time. ecss is overrated because of the work involved in accurately tuning the signal for proper audio fidelity reconstruction and PHASING ! with the sync performance that is available ECSS sould be forgotten and use that selectable sync.

even though I have no immediate plans to buy an E1, I will still study the manual. when I can get one for around $300 used, I will pick one up.

Dear "Lucky,"

Thanks for the kind comments. I'm glad you're enjoying your new Et&#65533;n E1. I hope you'll continue posting here as I am very interested in your experience with it.

I'm not going to buy one just yet, if ever. The radio does not offer IBOC on the MW or FM bands, nor does it offer DAB (Canadian and/or European) or DRM. I should have thought that Et&#65533;n would have included these advanced features in a new radio, even one designed primarily as a shortwave receiver.

I would also not buy one unless and until it has been on the market for some time as I have been "twice-burned" by Et&#65533;n/Grundig: first with the Grundig Classic 960 which I bought from Willoughby and Ward in 1996 (when it first came out). It cost $249.95 plus shipping and came with a 25(!)-year warranty. So I'm theoretically covered until 2021. But what a piece of junk! I'm on my third unit but this one is just as bad as the two previous. Now that it's discontinued, I wonder how they'll honor that warranty as they told me that they do not actually work on the radio but merely replace it when problems occur.

The second example was my Grundig Satellit 800 which I purchased in June 2000 (one of the initial production runs) and which lasted only 3 1/2 years before needing repair. I will say that, after Drake's repair and refurbishing (for $109.00) it has worked well and I like the radio very much (as opposed to that Classic 960).

So I'm naturally leery of buying an Et&#65533;n product until the production people have ironed out all the bugs. I would also want to see a review in PASSPORT.

But, even so, without the more advanced radio circuitry (pay satellite radio doesn't count; in any event it holds absolutely no interest to me), I feel the radio is "dead in the water." I may be wrong. Time will tell.

Again thanks for your comments and I hope, for your sake, that my impressions and opinions are wrong.

Best,

Joe

Hi Joe

Yes, I was very disappointed with no DRM. I felt for sure they would surprise everyone with this after all the delays.
This would have introduced a whole new market as I just bought my Ten Tec 320D for the DRM experience.

I have a feeling they might see how this one sells then offer a new version or enhanced version later on. But Joe, I just love radios. All radios. I had to buy it after checking it out. Plus, I'll admit I had some inside info on it before hand from a very trusted source.

And life is too short expecially in this angry and delicate world now. I get a delight in working with new rigs if they are decent enough. Each radio has a different personality to it. I use certain ones at certain times. Yes, I was worried about having Eton E1 number 00122 off the line. But, with a 60 day return policy, I can always give it back or exchange it for another if I find a quirk in it.

I think the Sharper Image should have one on display in their stores at some point. Then you can go and at least look and play with it. See if it piques your curiosity. So far I'm having fun with it.

And remember, this one is assembled in India, not Taiwan or China which is a first for them I think.

All the best buddy
Lucky

I believe you have completely missed the point made by r2000swler@hotmail.com . Somehow you think a surge protector is surge protection. During the surge, a wire or a surge protector does the same thing. And both are only as effective as the earth ground they connect to. Even the world's best 'whole house' protectors is no better than a plug-in protectors without the most critical component in a surge protection 'system'. Single point earth ground defines the quality of that protection.

Why is a 'whole house' protector effective? If it makes a short connection to earth, then the protector is doing as Ben Franklin demonstrated in 1752. What do plug-in protectors (especially APC) forget to mention to sell their grossly overpriced and undersized protectors? Earth ground. What did r2000swler@hotmail.com define when he was discussing effective protection? Earth ground. What did the utility customer service rep (who probably has no experience with what another division of the utility deals with often) not mention? Earthing.

Take the money mostly wasted on plug-in protectors to address the one component required in every protection system - earth ground. First and foremost, every incoming utility must make a connection to the same earthing point when entering a building. This connection is either using a direct hardwired connection (ie CATV, satellite dish) or via a 'whole house' protectors (AC electric and telephone). The telco already installs a 'whole house' protector for free. How effective is it? What kind of earth ground did you provide for the telco to connect to?

Notice CATV has no protector nor is a protector needed. A connection to earth ground is via a hard wire. No protector required because that wire does the same function.

This figure from the NIST demonstrates why improperly earthed incoming utilities result in fax machine damage. Even the protectors are not effective. Why? Earthing defines protection (or in this case, lack of protection): http://www.epri-peac.com/tutorials/sol01tut.html

A surge protector is only as effective as its earth ground. Earthing (not a protector) is the protection. Those who promote the protector instead of earth ground clearly don't know why or what makes protectors effective. Better spent money is on the earthing system; not on undersized, overpriced, and ineffective plug-in protectors.

No, it doesn't make sense. If the radio is in portable form, I believe it should have an internal ferrite antenna. My guess is that the designers didn't want to go through the effort to provide the required shielding in order to make this possible.
I have built several MW receivers and I know that you really need to shield and decouple the control circuitry in order to not have harmonics of the clock, broadband noise, etc from being picked up by the loopstick antenna. You need to have worst case radiation of less than .2uV to make the receiver usable. I've been there, done that.

Hi Mike,

It is not a matter of stupidity to use an internal loopstick antenna. It is quite possible to design a portable radio with a loopstick antenna that has MW performance that at least equals a good communications receiver that has an external amplified loop antenna connected to it. I have just finished up a prototype this evening that does just that. It is an easy matter to have facilities to switch the antenna out of the circuit the way that Grundig has done with their Satellit receivers for several years. It is also very easy to bypass the switching altogether and merely wind a small coupling loop around the ferrite for an external antenna connection. 5 to 10 turns of Litz wire would do the trick.
The E1 is a very good radio, and I will probably pick one up in the next year or so. Is it worth the money they are asking for it? Probably. Will the price come down after the initial wave of sales. Hopefully.
The radio does have XM circuitry, and I know that XM radio was a big purchaser of the Analog Devices AD607 demodulator chip that I based my Sync detector on, so if this is the case, this could be a very good radio indeed.
A friend of mine did play his E1 over the phone and it did sound good.......quite a bit of gain. He told me that he didn't have any IMD problems, so it sounds like a winner.

w_tom - I do believe you make a very valid and important point. After reading up on it a bit, one point grounding is one of the most important things that need to be checked. As you mentioned the cheaper surge protectors need that good ground to work properly. I'm still researching this and have to agree at this point, the best protection is to disconnect everything but there are times that's not practical. Once again, THANKS to everybody that's helping out.

Several months ago we had a thread about RF going through the ionosphre if the angle was accute enough. IE 90 degrees.
I wrote the fine people at www.spacew.com/proplab.
This is my original question to them and their response.
I would suggest that anyone who is interested in this subject download and read thier manual, it is educational.
Now if I just had a spare $150 kicking about......

Terry

> This may be a silly question, but does any RF penetrate the ionosphere even at the MUF? Can you suggest any online links for info on thsi subject?

Sorry for not responding earlier on this.

Assuming we are speaking strictly of RF that has a known trajectory (elevation angle with respect to the ionospheric layer), and we aren't including effects of reflected/scattered RF energy that may reach the ionosphere at an angle different from the primary RF energy, then the answer is no - no RF energy penetrates the ionosphere, even at the MUF
- provided all the RF energy is below the critical reflection frequency of the ionospheric layer in question. If a 20 MHz signal is omnidirectionally transmitted, there WILL be RF energy penetration at near vertical incidence because that frequency will exceed the critical plasma frequency of the F-layer (even during the day).

We don't have any specific links to sites on the Internet for this particular subject. Our Proplab-Pro manual is available online (a link under www.spacew.com/proplab) that includes a fairly comprehensive discussion concerning ray reflection and may help (it's a PDF document).

I own a McKay Dymek DA5 and have compared it in a side by side test to the Palomar. Both do a credible job. However from research for a friend I think the Kiwa loop will perform much better.
See the link at: <http://www.kiwa.com/pktloop.html>
See the reviews at:<http://www.kiwa.com/review.html>

I would love to try one of these heads up against my DA5, but based on these reviews and some others that I have read, I think the Kiwa is much better.

A friend moved to central KA and wanted to listen to WHAS in Lossyville KY. He was going to buy one when he found WHAS is available via the web.

Good morning Pete

I agree. The more and more I use this radio the more I LOVE it. It's a pleasure to use. Just a pleasure. The sync on it is fabulous. Couple that with the superb PBT and it's just fantastic. The display is just great to look at.

The sensitivity is right up there with the better rigs. The radio also has a "DX" button for extra gain on weak signals. I think the DSB {double side band} actually works as good as the Lowe HF-150 even though in the beginning I thought the Lowe was much better. It still is a bit better, but it seems to do more on this radio then the 150.

I can hear the difference using it. With the 150, it seems the lock range is much tighter. You have to really hit the needed signal perfectly to get it working and it's easily lost. With the E1, it's easier to use that feature. As Mike pointed out, ECSS isn't really needed on this rig though I still like to use it for fun and when it's neccessary.

Now, many people are saying they will wait for later production runs before buying. I have a contrarian view on this.
That Eton knows the first batch out will spread the news on how good or bad their radio is and tell the tale. That these first users and reviewers will set the tone for future sales.

They know what happened with the 800 and they know people will be looking for the same thing to happen again. So, I decided to go with the first batch. I know they payed very, very close attention to QC on this one imho. I would be more skeptical to buy later runs then the very first batch out.

If they only added DRM, it would have been a monster. But, I have a feeling XM had something to say about it. Why give people so many more options then going with XM sat programming? But, they had to include AM/FM and SW. I bet their is a easy mod for DRM once the radio gets dissected by the pros like you! :)

Have a good one Pete!

I thought the Democrats embraced and applauded homosexuality? Perhaps, but only if the homo in question is a Democrat. Much like they espouse the idea of minorities getting ahead, but heaven forbid if the minority individual gets ahead and is a Republican.

Since reports have been (mostly) positive so far, I could see shelling out $250 for a new, off-the-shelf E1.

If they'd remove the DRM capability, then I might be willing to spend $275.

If they'd also get rid of everything XM-related, then I'd be willing to cough up $300.

Guys,

this is a SW newsgroup and politics has nothing to do with it. It doesn't belong here. I remember when I first started out and came here, RHF and many others were such great help to me and answered all my questions for me. RHF was right up there with his good natured heart and helpful ways. I even was talking about radio with Dxace and he gave me good radio advice too.

Now, with all the OT political posts, including mine recently, the radio hobby friendships I had have been somewhat ruined. I hope not, but it's hard to take back bad feelings especially personal political stuff.

I feel badly about all this cause in reality our posts will not change anything except cause strong emotions and bitter feelings. Even though Mark Holden is a very intelligent and understanding person, I can't help but see these arguments causing mixed feelings between us. I hope not I truly do. I have not changed my feelings towards him in any way whatsoever.

So, I think it's best to get back to what we're all really here for, radio fun!!!!!!!
Rah rah turn that knob!!!!!

I mean what good does all these political posts do actually? All it does is divide people and causes hate. Do we really need this in our lives? Many of us are getting up there in age and we definitely don't need this aggravation.

It's a tit for tat game that's all. Sure we can still discuss politics but in the proper group for it if we chose to do so. I know, I'm one to talk after all my postings and rantings but then it hit me how the good times were so much better then this and how it turned into a mess.

I don't want to blame anyone else for my posts, but it all started with people dropping in here JUST to post their agenda. It's hard not to get involved after reading one these OT posts. You just naturally want to voice your opinions. I'm going to try and stay out of these types of posts now. In the end I see no point in them for this SHORTWAVENEWSGROUP.

Sorry

Expect a Worldspace antenna compatible with the XM feature in the E1.
XM is buying back a big piece of Worldspace when the latter IPOs.

I reckon I will stick with my Goodwill radios.I am going there in about four hours,no telling what I might find there.I have been collecting junk (but it isn't all junk,some of it,I wish I had never seen before and I just dont have room for more junk) all my life and many of my radios are collectible radios.I know they would fetch a lot of money on ebay but I dont ebay (just not interested,same as I dont cut and paste,I can but just not interested) and besides,I like my old junk.

If you decide to ground to a water pipe,make sure you connect the wire to the street side of the water meter.Water meters are not electrically conductive (they are made of brass or a similar material to prevent rusting out,put a little magnet on the water meter and check it out) and some houses have plastic water pipes as part of the water system.Some houses have retofitted water pipes installed in the water system because of old iron metal water pipes rusted out or clogging up.

Hear, hear. 55555.

It's a real shame to have to use filtering to block political posters, because sometimes those same political posters have some good DXing info. If we could all make an attempt to stick to DXing on this newsgroup, and post the political stuff elsewhere, this group could really take off again. I know the sunspot cycle isn't helping but there is still plenty of DX to talk about, we don't need to resort to secondary subjects.

(Getting v. strong China Radio International here in Gloucestershire, UK. Even stronger than BBC World Service which has Wooferton

So what happened that took these good natured people into the realm of limited vocabulary and constant insults towards those they disagree with?
It seems to me they have been making their own beds for quite a while.
Not once have I ever been a witness to either one admitting they were perhaps wrong about something, or even willing to admit that maybe someone else had a viable point of view.
Instead all we hear is " 'tards" and "tote that ...".
I'm sure they're lovely human beings, but they haven't a clue as to how to behave in public.
Yes this is a sw group, it's too bad certain people like to intimidate others (to the point they leave, thus making the group less that what it could be).
And all of this is a shame, because with the knowledge these individuals posses, and the passion they exhibit towards it, they could be instrumental in reaching new listeners.
But they choose to denigrate anyone who may seem to be a little different than they are.
If shortwave listening is dying, it is in part to people like these, who care not a whit about the hobby, only how important they look.
And if they are the shining examples of today's modern Republican party, the Republican party is in a lot worse shape than most people realize.

Mmmmm...not really a true statment.

Though your statement would not apply in this instance in any case, since tube amps are tapped at 4, 8, 16 and 70v, the difference between the nominal output impedance of 6 ohms and the nominal speaker impedance of 8 ohms represents a non issue, even to tube amps. Especially in light of the impedance swing during operation of the speaker which can easily take it out of tap range.

In absolute Tweak terms, yes, precise matching is an issue with some amps, mostly tube types. But in real world applications, and especially in this particular circumstance, which may not ever actually rise to the level of a mismatch, you'll never hear the difference, nor will the amp behave with any untoward symptoms.

Have you ever used a McKay Dymek DA5, or DA7 or the Polamar loop?
The DA5 has a ~12" feritte bar and the DA7 has an ~18" feritte bar.

While here in the USA we have a "lot" of MW stations, Europe is much worse.
A friend spent a year in Europe, in France near Germany, and her DX398 was nearly useless on MW. Here in the USA most MW are relativly low power. I have a MW on 770KHz about 3 miles from me that is the bane of my existance. It sneaks into nearly everything. The only good part is they are daylight only and they cleaned up the TX last winter. They had nasty spurs all over the MW band. The spurs were at the same spot on receivers with different LO/IF chains.

The DA5 does a usefull job of nulling out offending stations, not perfect but given the typical garbage on MW here these days I seldom listen. I am currently intrigued by a 10W "Traffic Information Station" that is ~20 miles away, working into a 20' vertical antenna with a poor ground system that I am receiving
S3 after some improvements to my ground system.

XM's feed of BBCWS is hardly Hi-Fi. In many cases it sounds more like a low bit MP3 with shaped response to filter out the higher levelss of in spectrum aliasing noise. More refined than 5975, lower noise for sure. And more detailed, perhaps.

Talk channels are more bandwidth limited than the music channels on XM. Most aren't stereo, either.

XM is a lot of things, but one thing it's never going to be is Hi-fi.

These are extraordinary times. We are under siege and unless we resist the fascists they will make your shortwave radio illegal.

There are already laws drafted that make listening outside broadcast bands verboten.

You can if you have a serviceable antenna...or an internet connection.

What you don't have to do is pay a fee every month for the privilege of letting Sirius decide what you can/cannot listen to.

You're pretty funny, actually. You get on here and rail against corporate America, and yet, when it comes to getting information, you're content to suckle at Corporate America's biggest, swaying tit.

And with very limited exceptions, it's correct. There will be a shift in spectral content with an upwards mismatch on a tube amp, and a loss of efficiency, to be sure, but short of extreme operating conditions, you'll have to be pretty well trained to hear the difference.

Well, thank you. I've read it. I"ve also worn out two editions of Tremaine.

It warms my soul to see you've read this. Pittman is one of my heroes, and I own a half dozen of his microphones.

One of the things that's dogma to The Tweak, though, is that he/she/it takes a detailed account of an audio moment, and applies it within parameters as rigid as he/she/it can make them. Little realizing and absolutely determined to ignore the reality that in Physics everything happens on a curve. Rarely around a sharp corner, and in only about two circumstances on a straight line. There's lots of real world play in virtually any match/mismatch situation, especially with speakers, and, to be fair, microphones, two of the most inconsistent components in the audio path. And the two with the greatest impedance swing under load. That's why so many components are labled with standardized nominal impedances. Cause you gotta fit somewhere. In truth, real world impedances do not fit such simple categories.

And with the very limited exceptions of extreme operations into very low impedances, most amps neither notice, nor care what's connected to them. As long as it's reasonably close. And audibile artifacts are virtually undetectable. In the minutiae of the Tweak, opening a window in the listening room will have a larger impact on the sound from the audio system than most of the 'adjustments' made in Audiophilia.

As long as we're sharing, you may wish to pick up a copy of Dr Harry Olson's "Music, Physics and Engineering."

Also a good read. Get the revised edition.

The world trade center buildings were not designed or built with the more conventional steel beam support system. The buildings were built with thinner smaller steel structures inside of the exterior walls. Once you got the thinner smaller beams hot enough from all that JP 4 fuel burning, instant collapse. And once it started to collapse it was like a house of cards going down. It wasnt built like in the good ole days of the empire state bldg., that had a B 24 fly into it and survive relatively intact. Of course the B 24 is not anywhere near as large a plane as what hit the WTC either.

Yes truce. I apologize to you.

OK, I did hook up an external antenna a couple days ago. My antenna ends in a male RCA plug for simplicity so all I needed was 2 adapters. One was the Pal adapter that ends in a female coax and the other was a male coax to RCA female. All I had to do was plug my dipole and { 4:1 current balun} into it. I use RCA cause my first rig was a FRG-7700 and I needed a preamp/tuner for it. The preamp I bought was the Ameco TPA that uses RCA jacks. I got used to it and never changed the end on the antenna.

Also this way, I can plug and unplug my balun into it for different radios. Like the Ten Tec 320D doesn't like the balun at all. Either does the FRG-7.

When I hook up more serious rigs like the R75 and Lowe HF-150, I use a regular PL-259 connection. But for the E1, I never saw that KOK cable for it {Pal to SO-239}. No biggie. I'll buy that cable one day soon.

All I can say is this radio is really quality. It's not a rinky dinky receiver like some people may think it is. Everything on it is quality except they could have made the tiny buttons for the menu, AM sync etc slightly bigger and lighted but you get used to it quickly enough. The sound is very good, sync and DSB work so well you hear a major diff when engaging them. And the PBT works wonders.

It's actually worth the $500 even without the XM additions. This radio imo will sell very well once Passport and others review it. Plus, you can actually use the radio as a portable but I think it's just too good for that. But if you're camping out or doing an all day hike, you just can't take anything better with you imo even the Lowe HF-150. The 150 has it's small size going for it but it's not enough once you use this one.

And with FM also, the whole family and/or friends get their chance to have some fun after you're finished SWing.

I'd buy it from the Sharper Image and pay tax only to have the 2 whole months to see if you really, really like it. If you get the free shipping, and have a local SI in your area, you can give it back there. No cost for shipping back to them. It's win win deal one way or the other.

I'm so glad we're friends again. It sucks the other way.

Lucky

It's because there really isn't all that much new to be found on the shortwave bands anymore. The information you find on BBC or China Radio can also be found on the net , cable tv or on CNN. The program related posts on this forum that generate the most excitement seem to be those listing the latest station to abandon the shortwave spectrum. Otherwise it's back to the fights about China politics, our verbally challenged president, bodily noises and whether the Yaesu FRG7 or the Drake of the same number was once the best radio of all time.

I dunno, stamp collecting seems to be alive and quite well by comparison. The USPS and its worldwide counterparts create something new for collectors to collect almost every day. My wife has taken up knitting again after a 30 year hiatus, and the forums she visits are full of people actually talking about the hobby. Strange as it may seem.

What is "considered" listening outside of broadcast bands? Listening to something fed govt "thinks" we dont have the right to listen to? We absolutely have the right to listen to anything and everything.

It's because there really isn't all that much new to be found on the shortwave bands anymore.

I must have an amazing setup, then. On most nights the shortwave bands are literally bursting at the seams for me here in Brooklyn, NY.

The information you find on BBC or China Radio can also be found on the net , cable tv or on CNN.

And, the information you find on the net, cable tv or CNN can also be found in newspapers and magazines.

The program related posts on this forum that generate the most excitement seem to be those listing the latest station to abandon the shortwave spectrum. Otherwise it's back to the fights about China politics, our verbally challenged president, bodily noises and whether the Yaesu FRG7 or the Drake of the same number was once the best radio of all time.

I sort of enjoy the receiver debates. Of all the receivers I've owned, my favorite is definitely the Drake R8B. I haven't been lucky enough to use an R7, but hope to have the chance one day. If another R7 ever turns up on ebay and I have some money burning a hole in my pocket....well, maybe...just maybe.

I dunno, stamp collecting seems to be alive and quite well by comparison.

Not according to Mike Terry!

Perhaps the postal authorites should drop the price of postage so that stamp collecting does not die!

That would be somewhat akin to the FCC dropping the code requirement for an amateur license.

But question asked why nobody posts about what they heard on BBC, CR, Havana or what their latest DX catch was (on topic posts). Not whether there are stations on the bands. If someone caught Radio Flyspeck domestic broadcast at 1733 or heard some exciting news on the 2300 broadcast of Megawatt International it sure isn't appearing on this forum. The only conclusion I can draw is that not much new is happening other than the gradual dwindling of international broadcasters.

And that's the point - there are many many reliable anbd more timely sources for information.

Sure talking about the receivers of old (and new) is fun - I enjoy it.
But there has to be more to the hobby than that. It is the equivalent of people talking about their television set rather than what happened on the 6:00 news and Jay Leno. What are people using shortwave receivers for besides paper weights and room warmers.

I just posted last night about a numbers station I listened to, and that turned out to be "The Czech Lady". Others recently posted about Radio Tashkent, Radio Nigeria, Radio Belarus and CKZN in St. John's Newfoundland. I'd say that's pretty good.

Depends on what kind of information you have in mind, and what kind of broadcast.

I once called up Siri's sales dept and asked them if they broadcast their music in stereo. The first guy said yes, then when I said if he's sure and can I have his name, he told me to hold on. He switched me to someone else. This person said as far as he knows, it's in stereo but he can't be 100% sure.

How can a company not know if their music signals are broadcast in stereo or not? A poster in a group showed me pictures of Siri's receivers, and a few said "stereo" on them so I guess it is in stereo. I don't know about XM. I know at one time Siri had more sats in space then XM but they launched a new sat like 4-6 months ago.

I won't pay for the service either. I can find all the music I want on FM or on the net. Radio waves were meant to be free for listeners with commercials supporting the station. To me, this sat radio business is a created offspring of radio that has been hyped too much. But from many people who have the service, they say they'll never go back to "old style FM" again.

I surely won't pay $13 or $15 a month for it. If it was like $3 a month, I'd try it.

So what are the dimensions of this beast anyways? I usually take a DX-392 on better buy than say a R75?

The music channels are in stereo. The talk channels, most but not all, are not.

As for whether the goof in the phone center actually knows what's being broadcast...they know what the cards, or the monitor in front of them says. Whether music is in stereo is not a question that comes up very often. Many of the phone monkeys don't subscribe. Many for the samee reasons you don't.

There was a discussion here a couple of years ago about stereo vs mono broadcast and public perception. Most listeners don't really understand stereo. Audiophiles obviously don't fall into this class, but the rank and file don't really understand what differientiates a stereo signal from monaural sound. For them, as long as the pilot is lit, its stereo. For some, even, if there are two speakers, it's stereo. No matter what's actually coming out of them.

And receiver manufacturers haven't really helped this. In order to keep fringe signal noise down, most receivers have a blend circuit that slowly combines the left and the right channels according to signal strength, or in some cases, strenght of the difference subcarrier. In many markets even the best stereo signals are heard by more than half of listeners at any given moment in varying degrees of mono, due to the blend circuit in their receivers. Listeners rarely notice and never complain. Actual stereo audio is just not on their radar.

When AM stereo was new, a number of stations I was involved in actually broadcast mono audio, but lit the pilot for it's cool factor. No one ever noticed.

So don't be surprised if someone at the phone hole can't answer your question. They've not been briefed, because the question almost never comes up.

It's such a non priority, that my XM receiver, while being a stereo receiver, doesn't have a stereo annunciator. When it is you can hear it. When it isn't you don't.

Usually, unless there's something dramatically wide, you don't notice it one way or the other.

This may be part of the reason that DRM doesn't generate more buzz than it does. If stereo audio was such a priority, most SW broadcasters would embrace it, promote it, shout it from the mountaintops, and DRM would be standard on radios worldwide.

So far, like AM stereo, and IBOC here, there are more stations transmitting DRM for no apparent reason than there are listeners clamoring for radios to hear it.

I can easily imagine some of the goofballs and kooks
I saw at a certain hamfest last week trying this on 75M after reading this. If you do guys, remember that a good ole traditional METAL garbage can, like a trusty galvanized Wheeling Mfgr Corp model, available at any home depot for modest cost, would work FAR BETTER than any of the Rubbermaid plastic model(s) Also remember that when you fart inside of a said can with the same propped over your head down to your lower torso, the sounds produced will be AMPLIFIED by a factor of twenty or so and you can get a breath of 'fresh air' while you're at it.

GO FER IT BOYS !!!!!!!!!

Hi

No, it's not a better buy then the R75 for $500 but it really depends what you want to do with the radio.

If you're a big BCB and program listener, the E1 is much better for that. You also have WFM plus bass and treble. So the R75 would probably not be so that much use to that kind of listener.

Now, if you're more hardcore and want to DX and use SSB more then BCB then the R75 is the much better buy. Yes, the SSB on the E1 is great, but with the R75's DSP, twin PBT and easy computer control, the R75 wins for $500.

But for some users the R75 would be a pretty bad radio they wouldn't like it at all. "Too much to learn, AM doesn't sound very good at all and "what, no FM?"

But the E1 radio is more fun to use for sure. It's the kind of radio you want to play and tinker around with. With the big dot matrix display, the radio looks more like a futuristic listening device then a radio. But, there is so much more to it then your used to portable radio.

I think they made this radio's learning curve and features rich for DX'ers and SW hard users, but it made it simple enough for most average users to operate. I have to admit also the FM is a nice feature to have after doing SWL all day or night. Plus a girlfriend or wife can use it. This is a good rig to scale into if you're just starting out too.

And who knows. Maybe one day XM will be free if sponsored by some big corporation who will buy blocks of hours of programming at a time. This could happen. Like they might have "free unscramble hour or day" where all you need is the XM hardware to pick it up.

Never say never.

Thanks RK.

I now own 11 radios.

1] Icom R75
2] Lowe HF-150
3] Kenwood R-5000
4] JRC NRD-525
5] FRG-7
6] Ten Tec 320-D
7] FRG-7700
8] Degen 1103
9] Nasa Target HF3 {Nav-Fax 100 in U.S.}
10] Great Cond Kenwood QR-666 that later became the R-300.
11] Eton E1 :)

So, I have a sense of quality and features etc. But, I'm not a super pro like some of the other guys in here that have been doing this for years.

A previous discussion between engineers about earthing was in two discussions in the newsgroup misc.rural entitled:
Storm and Lightning damage in the country 28 Jul 2002
Lightning Nightmares!! 10 Aug 2002 http://tinyurl.com/ghgv and http://tinyurl.com/ghgm

If your building does not, at minimum, meet post 1990
National Electrical Code (NEC) requirements, then sufficient earthing may exist. Connection to cold water pipe is no longer sufficient to earth for human safety reasons. Earthing for transistor safety typically exceeds what the NEC requires.

Distance to that earth ground is critical. Plug-in 'shunt mode' protectors are too far from earth ground; not sufficiently earthed to provide secondary protection.
Therefore those ineffective (and so grossly undersized) protectors avoid all discussion about earthing.

Earthing a building is for secondary protection. Also inspect earthing for your primary protection:
http://www.tvtower.com/fpl.html

Ham radio operators would disconnect the antenna, place the antenna lead inside a mason jar, and still suffer damage.
Disconnecting alone was not sufficient protection. Damage stopped when the antenna lead was earthed. Do as Ben Franklin demonstrated in 1752. Give the surge a non-destructive path to earth. Lightning rods and 'whole house' protector; both do same. Earth before lightning can enter a building.

Well, stop replying to the OT posts - if it's not about shortwave, it gets ignored.

Anytime Lucky!

It sounds like they might be using that AD607 for the Sync function. My Sync detector has a very wide acquistion range. You would almost think that you are tuning with an envelope detector, save for the fact that you don't hear the effects of selective fading. I am glad that it is working out for you. A fellow in the Chicago area picked up one of these radios.....he was perturbed that it didn't have a loopstick, but he is a radio collector so it isn't as much an issue as it could be.

Hmmmmmmmmmmm, I wonder about that. The I.F. bandwidth shouldn't be such a factor with system gain unless filter losses for different bandwidths haven't been compensated for in the design. The fellow that had the radio likes wide bandwidths, so I would surmise that he was using the widest I.F. bandwidth. I just don't know. Once these things hit the shelves in quantity, I will give it a listen myself.

''Survival Tips for Tube Amps
by R. Aspen Pittman

Tube amps are simple, and so they are easy to keep running smoothly. However, if you neglect to follow a few simple rules, you can buy yourself some expensive trouble. What follows are some suggestions you can try that will put your amp in top condition and keep it there.

TIP #1
Speaker Impedance

The proper matching of the impedance between your tube amp and speaker is extremely important. Improper matching will cause severe tube wear and is a common cause of early tube failure.''

Since Pittman sells $40 matched pairs of output tubes I salute his willingness to be honest, even if it costs him money.

Harry Olsen is oft quoted in the Audio Cyclopedia, to be sure. I've gotten alcohol buzzes on with Don and Carolyn Davis, while discussing antique trucks.

We're lucky to have Lucky on RRS! Thanks to him we now have a good idea of what the Satellit 900 --err, E1-- is all about. And thanks also to him for the pointer to the manual.

From what I can tell from the specs, this is a repackaged Satellit 800 sans the ugliness and empty air. The addition of PBS is useful for SSB. For AM one simply off-tunes while in SAM mode. I suspect the detector circuitry is essentially what's in my Drake SW2, so a shift of up to 50-60% of the width of the chosen filter would be possible.

With my Satellit 700 developing a buzz after a few minutes operation, and with my having to do some repair work on my ancient 2010, the E1 is looking like the perfect bedside/rooftop radio. Can't wait 'til J&R gets their shipment!

Like Lucky, I have a thing for radios. In addition to the above units, I also have the 525, R30 (each feeding a speaker through an SE3 and FL3), HF150, SPR-4, Sony 5900 & 7600, and Pete's MW receiver as soon as it's released. Clearly I desperately need another radio!

Thanks again, Lucky.

Rail against Corporate America? That doesn't exactly mesh with my beliefs. Corporations are required by law to maximize their bottom line for the benefit of their shareholders. I do not blame them for taking every advantage possible.

Who I am mad at are the politicians who sell-out to the corporations and the citizens who let this happen.

Satellite radio wishes it was ''Corporate America's biggest, swaying tit'', but it ain't. Do you have free internet access?

Hi-fi is relative. Truth is, I like Sirius sound better, but XM sounds higher fi than the HF feed, especially if S:N is a consideration.

XM uses MPEG4, which synthesises the upper octave in the receiver.

You are indeed ''Lucky'' if you can get clean FM stereo where you live. I cannot. Like millions of people in the Western part of the USA, mountains and multipath destroy the FM stereo at my house.

Is this the 11th Commandment, or what:

''Radio waves were meant to be free for listeners with commercials supporting the station''

The first commercial stations were signed on so stores could sell radios. Very similar to the satellite radio business model.

Here's the deal: you pay for shitty radio every time you buy a Coke.
Quit buying Cokes and listen to better radio.

I just want to make sure I understand your position. You're not mad at corporations for buying politicians, because corporations are required by law to buy off politicians. You're only angry at the politicians themselves? Is this right?

I just looked at my internet service agreement. There is absolutely no charge for listening to radio broadcasts via the internet.

Considering some of the "Stereo" radios that are on the market (the clock radio varieties, namely), the radio itself isn't good enough to let people notice.

Using a Delco radio in a GM car in the 90's, you could hear the difference if you paid attention. In Cincy, given the hills and everything else, there are a lot of locations where the FM signal will fade, and you could hear the signal trend toward mono if you were listening, even though the Stereo pilot was lit. The aftermarket Kenwood in my current car doesn't have that to such an extreme; it'll simply kick to mono. Just like the old Sears that I had in the Volare I cut my driving teeth on in the 80s.

A nice way of finding the difference between FM, satellite radio (or in my case, the Music Choice channels from DirecTV) and regular CDs is to have them all run through the same receiver. Switching back and forth is very educational to how good the sound is on each format.

I suspect that the people for whom DRM was designed for would be more likely to go and use an internet stream or satellite radio solution than use DRM. YMMV, of course.

Freedom of Speech
Monday 1 August 2005
Presented by Michael Duffy

Andrew Fraser is a professor of law at Sydney's Macquarie University. Recently he has called for a return of the white Australia policy. A phone poll which had 35,000 callers) conducted by Channel 9's A Current Affair showed 85 per cent of the audience agreed with Professor Fraser's controversial stand. Others see him as a rascist. Andrew Fraser puts his case on Counterpoint Talkback Radio.

tvtower.fpl.html That guy sure got that right about Bell South,and how! Last year,starting the first night of November on through about half of December,my phone line would quit working every single time it rained here and by the time I got my phone line repaired,it had rained over fourteen seperate times here.I phoned them two times and still didn't get my outside phone line repaired.I phoned them a third time and a Bell South repairman guy disconnected a wire inside my phone box inside my carport.My house has a crawlspace under it high enough I can sit up under there and my own phone wires are always dry under there where they are fastened to the floor rafters/boards.It never rains on that box which is mounted about three feet high on a wooden baseboard above the concrete foundation of my house,the phone box is always high and dry.The wire he disconnected is a wire from their end of the phone wires up there on that pole at the end of my driveway by the road.Bell South,(RIPP OFF! Bell South!) wanted to charge me $101.50 for something that had nothing to do at all with the phone wires from my end of my phone line wires to their phone box.You have to always be on your toes and watch out! about those utility Crooks!

That was XM. I doubt it'll happen because XM receivers use huge amounts of power. Plus, the single-hub topography makes it really easy to ''take out''.

Dear Jim,

I bought the Grundig Classic 960 in 1996. Right off the bat I realized it was hopeless for SW broadcasts, though it does have good sound on MW and FM. (The drifting on SW is intolerable and the tuning "feel" is awful.) A few months after I bought it, the radio "died." I contacted Grundig and they told me to ship it back to them, which I did. Instead of fixing my radio, they sent me a new one. This radio drifted quite a bit (the first one did too, but not to the same extent, especially on FM). When I called them and spoke to a technician he admitted to me that the set's design was not "all that would have been desired." Then a couple of years ago that (second) unit died. Again I had to send it back to Grundig and again they replaced it. (I noted that the SW frequency coverage was somewhat different on this new unit.) But this unit is the Mother of All Drifters! You can't listen to FM (which is now all I use it for) more than an hour or so before it drifts off frequency, no matter how long it's been running.

I "hate" that radio. It's my definition of "junk." (Three examples in less than 9 years!) It "looks" good (people always comment on it) and it has reasonably good sound, but its performance is very, very poor, in my opinion. When new MW/FM radios are introduced featuring IBOC, if the reviews are good, I'll replace that terrible "Classic" radio. (I wouldn't even sell it to someone unless they knew exactly what they were getting; it does have that 25-year warranty, however.) It's my understanding that the local FM station that features classical music half the day and jazz the other half is going to "split" in two via IBOC and have classical music 24 hours a day on one "channel" and jazz 24 hours a day on the "other." That sounds good to me as far as local programming goes.

By the way, that radio is kept in our living room and I have it playing music most of the day. I do not play it "loud," and it has always received good care.

I think it is, and has always been, a "loser." It's obvious that its cost is next-to-nothing or they wouldn't just keep replacing the set rather than fixing it. Naturally a year or so after I bought it for $249.95 + shipping, the price "dropped" to $149.95 + shipping, though the warranty also dropped from 25 years to 1 year. I can't blame them for that! I wonder if they have a "stash" of them set aside for people like me who have 25 year warranties and they'll use that "stash" to keep replacing "dead" sets until the warranty runs out!

P. T. Barnum was right, as I learned through this experience (and a few others over the years!).

As always, my opinion.

Best,

Joe

Every time you buy a product from a radio advertiser, you pay for radio.

Plus, advertising is tax deductible. Guess who makes up the difference when businesses write-off expenses.

Hi Lucky...

Thanks for your input on the E1. I'm curious to know how this radio is on battery consumption, so if you run it off of cells, let us know how it is with regard to battery drain. Is the display always illuminated, even on battery power?

I've had my eye on the E1 for quite some time and anticipate eventually buying one. It's good to see Eton reviving this class of radio. If it's all it purports to be, then it seems that its performance could well be a notch or two above the '2010, SW77, and Sat 700. The $500 price tag might seem a bit much to foot, but let's face it, it's not a matter of whether or not its performance is superior to a similarly priced R-75 but rather whether one is in need of a high quality and truly-portable portable, laden with numerous features not to be found in the under $200 class that dominates the portable scene. Let's face it, the SW77 retailed at $469.96 in its day (and it only had two bandwidth filters and certainly had no passband offset). For folks like me, where indoor conditions are a nightmare due to local noise conditions, something like the E1 is a godsend: a nice, state of the art, fully featured, self-contained portable, sized such that it can easily be carried along on outdoor listening excursions.
I guess that with the XM option available for this receiver, it's inevitable that this radio will take the heat of the sat-radio opponents of this group. Personally, I would have preferred Sirius over XM with this radio... I'm a Sirius subscriber myself, but it's not as though this in any way diminishes my enthusiasm for shortwave.

All the best, folks.

Thanks again, Lucky.

Also true. But what's not specified here are the range of tolerable mismatch. Especially in the case of loudspeakers, where the impedance is, in fact, frequency related, the swing of impedance can easily exceed the two ohms in question of the original poster's query. In some cases, by quite a bit more.

In which case, the mismatch is not just irrelevant, but at points along the spectrum, it's a literal non issue. Like I said, to the Tweak, yes, the match is critical, but in the real world there are so many factors that converge on a speaker/amp configuration, that the issue of a match in tube amps is a matter of matching nominal designations. If it were really that much of a concern, no 6 ohm speaker would ever be connected to an 8 ohm terminal, nor vice-versa.

Which was the point of all the advice given to date. He's within tolerance putting an 8 ohm speaker on a 6 ohm output. Solid state or tube.

Did you ever work with a Collins 212 series? The first board I ever owned was a Collins 212F. Amazing piece of engineering. That would also keep the room warm on those cold Illinois winter nights.

I miss that one. Sold it about 17 years ago. The broker kept me up on where it went. Saw it in a movie shortly after the sale.

Ref: ComMidEastFor Inst 16134//24 K

1. All commanders promulgate upon receipt.

2. The following T-shirts are no longer to be worn on or off base by any military or civilian personnel serving in the Middle East:

"Eat Pork Or Die" [both English and Arabic versions]

"Shrine Busters" [Various. Show burning minarets or bomb/artillery shells impacting Islamic shrines. Some with unit logos.]

"Napalm, Sticks Like Crazy" [Both English and Arabic versions]

"Goat - it isn't just for breakfast any more." [Both English and Arabic versions]

"The road to Paradise begins with me." [Mostly Arabic versions but some in English. Some show sniper scope cross-hairs]

"Guns don't kill people. I kill people." [Both Arabic and English versions]

"Pork. The other white meat.' [Arabic version]

"Infidel" [English, Arabic and other coalition force languages.]

3. The above T-shirts are to be removed from Post Exchanges upon receipt of this directive.

4. The following signs are to be removed upon receipt of this message:

"Islamic Religious Services Will Be Held at the Firing Range At 0800 Daily."

"Do we really need 'smart bombs' to drop on these dumb bastards?"

5. All commands are instructed to implement sensitivity training upon receipt.

Sometimes with hilarious results. On the ABC Talk channel last weekend, the top end synthesized material lagged the baseband by enough to sound like a cheap slap. Rebooted to clear it up. MP4 or not, a lot of the talk channels, BBCWS included sound pretty ratty.

I"ve only heard a couple of Sirius receivers. And those in pretty high noise environs, so an evaluation was pretty meaningless. I'm getting one later this week, though for evaluation. I'm interested to hear the differences.

Truthfully, I'd rather hear HF on a well tuned Hammarlund.

So? This is all trivial. The bottom line is, I don't have to pay a fee

I have to pay many fees every month, but not that one. You do.

When you tax a business, you're really using the business to collect a tax from their customers. Raise the tax, they'll raise their prices.

Without customers, they have no money to pay the tax.

It's popular with folks who like big government, as it helps prevent people from realizing how much of their income actually goes to taxes.

I know it's too early to tell yet,but I wonder how trouble free the radio will be over the years,perhaps ten to 15 years or more,for that much money they should last forever.Some radios y'all own and talk about,it seems to me they have to be sent off somewhere (Sangean radio's front panels come to mind) too often for repair service and that cost more money if the radio is out of warranty,or if still in warranty,(dont forget to fill out the warranty cards and send them in or do it online) at least for shipping and handling charges.

I own some old tube testers.Some small hand held ones and one or two larger size tube testers.Some of those tube testers won't (according to an article I once read about thirty five years ago in a radio magazine) really give you an accurate readout of what condition a tube or tubes are.

Ham radio operators would disconnect the antenna, place the antenna lead inside a mason jar, and still suffer damage.

Only dumbass hams, and some CBers did that stunt. About a stupid trick...Like a little glass bottle is going to stunt a strike that traveled a few miles in air to get there...
When I ground out my feedlines, it's to a good ground, and is totally outside. When I take a strike, or even a close non direct strike, you can hear those feed to ground connections arc, even though they are connected by so-239's/pl-259's. I've never had any trouble using that method, and I've had two direct strikes to my mast in the last 4-5 years. My mast directs most of the energy to ground, but you still have some current on the lines that needs to be cleaned up. You sure don't want to run it into the house... :(
If the coax is elevated, and not snubbed to ground at any point, the strike potential at the end of the feedline will be HUGE. Disaster city... That much potential can travel halfway across a house looking for ground. Usually will seek plumbing, toilets, etc. I've heard of toilets being blown to bits in a case like that.

Welll.....Sorta... To me, it's almost in both directions at the same time it's so quick. I guess you could consider the streamer as the first part of the strike, but you need a down leader to complete the strike. The downleader connects with the streamer, and you have a strike, which can pulse more than once. If you have a streamer, and no leaders find it, you ain't gonna have a strike. So it takes both ends to make a strike. Saying it starts at the bottom is semi misleading, to me anyway...It really goes both ways, and they meet in the middle to complete a strike. Or thats the way I see it... But, the streamer does form first of the two, so I guess that would make it seem to start at the bottom... MK

That sounds like a loser radio to me! My wife bought me one for xmas one year as I had commented earlier that I thought it was kind of cool and "retro" looking. I also mentioned to her that as cool as it looked, I wouldn't pay $150 for it as I had played with it in the store and didn't like the "feel". Later, she told me not to be too upset with her for buying it as Circuit Cirty sold her the floor model for $50 with no box just to get rid of it! I guess it didn't sell very well. I don't understand why ;)
All I use it for anymore is to listen to my "Old time radio" cd's through it's AUX input. I have a "MINT" (don't you hate that word?) Zenith floor model radio that I use once in a while. That thing sounds/works great. Not very drifty either, once it's warmed up. If I was you, I'd trade that 960 in once a year just to help them deplete their supply!

The point of that post was overlooked. If they were using mason jars, well, what year do were they learning how to protect from lightning? 1920? Effective protection (by using techniques far more reliable than disconnecting) has been that well understood for that long. Yet even in an internet age, myths still claim that effective protection is disconnecting. Disconnecting can help IF humans are sufficiently reliable (which they are not). Disconnecting was still not sufficient when damage occurred almost 100 years ago. And yet still myths about disconnecting continue.

Effective protection by earthing is always working; 24/7/52 weeks every year.

Earthing is what plug-in protectors forget to mention to sell their ineffective and excessively profitable products. Disconnecting is not sufficient especially when effective protection is so easy, so reliable, and so inexpensive.

Jeezus Xavier Christ on a Skidoo, "what have you done lately", that's the way it always is with you people. Never mind every damn day some raghead takes as many infidels out with them as they can in Iraq, and Ive got darkies by the damn thousands croaking in Africa who weren't blessed with the sense to realize that people need food to live and still keep birthin' new niglets by the hour. That is, the ones who aren't active participants in the "save the HIV virus" movement.

Not to mention the mundane every day LA drive-bys, OD's, wife killings, death by Mickey D's or KFC cardiac episodes, various and sundry apeshits and diseases, etc...etc..

You'd think I'd get some thanks, but nooooooo...!

I would love for someone to take the whole console

But I concluded that case would be unlikely

The console weighs 400lbs

Selling the audio gear and offer the console for free to any winner who could arrange for pick up on their own

You must have something else on what passes for a brain in your doggie debutante world. Brass, bronze and similar metal are electrically conductive. Being ferrous is not a condition needed for conductivity.

Indeed w_tom makes the best point about protection -- only a single point ground for ALL points in a system in which all are tied together and utilize a single point for a collective ground is effective. Damage is (and will) be done if there is ANY means for a potential to vary in a system. In other words, ALL points must rise and fall at the same time. Current flows when there is a difference in two points in a system. My radio tower is 65' high and located in west central Florida, aka Lightning Capital of the US. After a strike to the foundation of my home 3 years ago, which literally blew ceramic tiles off the concrete slab and turned them to shattered glass shards, and blew a 3 inch deep, 2 inch wide chasm some 5 feet long into the concrete, I undertook to make certain I was safer. The strike did not hit my tower...it actually struck the telephone equipment point 90 away in the front of my home. The measures I took are on my web page: http://www.knology.net/~res0958z/

Canadians use neither form. It's tasteless garbage and best left to the likes of the Ace and Cuhulin. We all know exactly what the Ace meant. Now he's backtracking and claiming the words were 'laughing' and 'ass' all along. I've read Animal Farm and can spot revisionism fairly quickly.

By the way, your Social Studies teacher must have been a home boy. The correct spelling of my country's name is Canada. Bet you can't remember it.

Regardless,I am still right,basically. www.devilfinder.com What kind of metal are water meters made of? And water companies probally wouldn't appreciate grounding wires attatched to their water meters.If you are going to ground to a water pipe,it is best to ground to the pipe on the street side of the water meter.If you live in an apartment,you probally can't.Even when I am wrong,I am right.

I understand why you feel that way Mike, but it is still possible to have a good internal antenna. I think that the goal was to make this radio as cheaply as possible (not a bad thing in itself). I will end up picking up one of them as a fun to play with "toy". Right now, the Grundig 3400 is my current "toy", but moods change from time to time.
I am waiting for them to come out with an active antenna for this model. Part of the plan with some of these radios seems to be the money that can be made on the "add-ons". Still, it would be interesting to see the schematic (ha! that will be the day!)

Unfortunately, a Google search also yields BPL.

Yes, and Google has invested $100,000,000 to kill it. Boycott Google if you want to keep listening to shortwave radio.

> Why do people do that crap?

I can't figure it out either. I've seen a seller with twelve auctions for R-390A parts (one auction: gears. Second auction: gear clamps. Third auction: knobs. Fourth auction: IF deck minus filters. Fifth auction: Filters for IF deck etc.) all claiming they all came from the same "working" R-390A. It's like they decided they could make more money by stripping every little piece off a working radio. What was sad in this case was that it wasn't even complete subassemblies - they tore the geartrain apart and were selling the gears in one auction, the metal plates in another, the clamps in a third, !!!!

I have nothing against selling "parts" radios or selling parts from a non-working non-restorable radio. But to strip a perfectly good working radio into tiny bits and pieces.... it hurts to think about it.

My only conclusion is that their day job is at a chop shop.

Tim.

I own both the KIWA and a McKay/Dymek DA-7 (which is the same as the

Do you have a diagram of the DA7?

I had always thought it's main claim to fame was a

It would be nice if it is easy to modify the DA5 to

It appears he's selling "backups" made from legal copies of the audio books. If you already own the originals, it's legal for you to own a backup.

If you don't own the originals, it's not legal for him to sell you a backup so he doesn't want to know about it. (Call him Sgt. Schultz)

The real question is: Will discussions of the death of shortwave ever die? I'm in my 40s and people have been announcing the death of shortwave ever since I can remember. Seriously, I remember it going back at least as far as the late 60s, when I was just a kid. We hear this tired old song over and over and over, and the people who sing it just never seem to get tired.

If only I had that kind of stamina!!! These people should be out there competing in triathlons or something.

Now, there might be a little station just starting out here in Florida, low powered so it comes in badly but it's usually not a station I want to listen to.

And as for Coke, I gave up soda about a year or more ago. I don't touch the stuff unless it's pure seltzer and then only once in a long while. The stuff does NOTHING for your body and my doctor told me it eats up your stomach lining slowly but surely.

BPL has not been of checkered success in other countries. But FCC has made a commitment to it. Short of a sudden burst of good sense, they're not likely to back down, especially with the enormous commercial money being poured into it.

My question is: How does BPL perform with electrical noise on the same line. The further out a line runs from the hub, the more noise it can pick up from switching, appliances, other electronic devices. We're all familiar with the huge noise output of an SCR dimmer. That's because of the enormous switching generated by the On/Off switching of the SCR. Since BPL is targeting rural users, where Edison can run on very long lines which are more susceptible to picking up, and radiating noise from high current transients, transients of surprisingly rich harmonic content, how's this going to affect digital devices taking down data bursts which may contain harmonics from these switching transients? Even modems are affected by low level noise on the line, which can create errors, and eventually disconnections. AC lines can be dramatically more noisy.

I don't hold out a great deal of hope for the commercial success of BPL, but I don't suspect anyone in a position to change things will admit that until the damage HF usage has been compromised.

A comparison of the DA100E with the AmRad active antennas.

A friend bought a DA100-E active antenna and brought it over for me to evaluete. I compared it to a AmRad and "North Country" active antenna. The AmRad and NC are both built from published diagrams.

The DA100-E is rated for operation from 500KHZ through 30MHz.

I live about 3 miles from a 1KW MW on 770KHz and within about 5 miles there is a station on 1250KHz(1KW) and on on 1380KHz(2KW).

These provide a realistic test for IM. Antennas,a nd receivers, that suffer from IM will give products at:
770+1250
770+1380
1250+1300
1250-770
1380-770
1380-1250

The last is a good indicator of LF performance.

The AmRad has excellent IM charactoristics and I receive no mix products.
The North Country is barely acceptable and gives weak MW and HF mix products
with bad LD products.
The DA100-E falls in between.
The DA100-E goes deaf very rapidly as I tunee below 500KHz and by the time I reached 242KHZ, a 25W NDB about 7 miles way, was virtually deaf. I couldn't pick up the 100KHz LORAN C at all. The lousyville DGPS on 290KHz is S4 on my wire antenna, S9+10 on the AmRad adn lost in IM on the NC antenna. It was just detectable on the DA100-E.
I could just detect the 770+ mix products with both other MW outlest.
But I could not detect thier mix products. There was no 2nd or rd harmonic with the DA100-E, but theire was a weak 4rt and 5 harmonic. These are produced inteh antenna and are not actaul "real world" signals. The AmRad and my wire antenna do not have them.

Above ~5MHz the DA100-E and the AmRAd are very similar and roughly equal to my 70' wire antenna. The AmRad is a better deal, but requires modest tech skills to construct. The DA-100E is an acceptable MW and good HF antenna, but it is a very poor LF antenna. Compared to my ~$20 wire antenna, I use commercial Mini Cirucits transformers, the ~$180 seems to be a bit steep.

The "North Country Radio" antenna <http://www.northcountryradio.com/index.htm#anc506> plans were published in PE magazine several years ago. My copy was based on the published plans and may not reflect the current product. I made no effeort to select devices for optimal performance. I would rate the version I built as only suitable for locations far from MW stations. Above ~5MHz it was an acceptable antenna.
Nothing to set the world on fire, but very workable. The North Coutnry site does list a LF extension modification that worked, but given the proximity to 3 MW stations, the LF mod onlyh added more noise mix products.

The AmRad antenna is reported to have some LF noise issues when operated from the stock power supply.
See: <http://www.pacificsites.com/~brooke/LF-Ant.shtml>
And the stock power supply was reported to produce some nasty spikes from the un-bypassed diodes. I don't and have never, operated from the stock supply.

We need to keep in mind that Drake had a part in designing the E1 as with the Satellit 800. Remember, the Satellit 800 is basically a Drake SW8 with a larger speaker and an ADDED FERRIT ANTENNA. The Drake SW8 had NO ferrit antenna but rather used the internal whip antenna for MW reception.

In my particular case, the two distant MW stations I listen two during daytime hours come in without any co-channel interference on my car radio, which uses a whip antenna.

Of course a ferrit antenna would be nice for direction and interference nulling, but in my case I always have to turn the radio to an odd position for reception of the stations I listen to. For me, the whip will actually be better, and I will use an external loop for other dxing.

But their motivation for investing in a technology like BPL was hardly to kill shortwave as the OP stated. I think it is safe to say that shortwave broadcasting is probably close to the bottom of the list of competitive threats (and opportunities) that Google management is compelled to deal with.

Not to say that shortwave broadcasting completely escapes the attention of Google. It is one of a gazzillion entries in their ever expanding search indices.

SW isn't even on the radar for Google's involvement in BPL.
Collateral damage at best. But damage nonetheless. The point of the original poster, is that, taken as a whole, Google is dumping money into a project that will kill HF listening in many areas. Whether targeted or collaterally, is irrelevant.

But the OP's statement was that Google had targeted shortwave, which was obviously wrong. And that was what I was responding to. It's fine to change topics, but don't mix up responses.

It's clear that the concerns of SWLs and HAMs are not even being considered in the decision to push BPL. That neither hobby can rouse any public, regulatory or legislative interest in the impact of BPL on amateur use of HF frequencies says a lot about the present state of those hobbies. That commercial broadcast and utility users of the HF spectrum apparently haven't registered any significant complaints says they are (1) Possibly very small in number, (2) unconcerned, (3) ready to pull out anyway or (4) all of the above.

BPL has mostly flopped in real world tests in the US, as well. However, I don't think the FCC has actually made any commitment to BPL. By allowing BPL, they've put themselves in a win-win position. If it works, millions of voters get a broadband internet access choice they otherwise wouldn't have.
If BPL falls flat, no politician gets to point his finger at the FCC and claim "The DSL, cable and satellite interests are running the FCC!!"

The second scenerio would be particularly attractive if the folks at the FCC were convinced that BPL doesn't really work.

Absolutely. And you don't need imagine anything as high tech as a light dimmer or a switchmode power supply. How about a sparky 'ol vacuum cleaner?
How would BPL perform in a thunderstorm?

And that isn't even considering all the changes in RF reflections as circuits get switched. Lights go on and off. The neighbor's washing machine cycles. And the bigger the digital party line, the bigger the potential problems.

I don't think the worst case scenerio, thousands of miles of HV power distribution wires carrying high speed digital signals, was ever practical. There's interference, there's unpredictable reflections and, even in the most optimistic case, the available bandwidth won't split among alot of users and still be high speed.

There are other approaches which promise to cause much less interference, although I think the real motovation is to minimize BPL's vunerabilities:

Lucky,did you ever go to Spook Hill in Lake Wales and Coral Castle in Florida.I have been to those places before.Spook Hill is really an illusion pertaining to the lay of the land,it only looks like vehicles roll uphill but really they roll down hill a few feet.That guy who built Coral Castle must have used a home made crane or hoist to lift those heavy stones.He certainly didn't use any kind of magic "levitation".I quit soda pop over twenty years ago and even before I quit that slop,I rarely ever drank it.I drink tons of coffee and water and V8 juice and orange juice (Florida orange juice,of course) and one or two six packs of beer ever couple of weeks.

You said:

"You are indeed ''Lucky'' if you can get clean FM stereo where you live. I cannot. Like millions of people in the Western part of the USA, mountains and multipath destroy the FM stereo at my house."

How is that "illustrative " when there are millions of people like me who do live on the east coast and have no problems?
Or the midwest?

Then, from the western hills you go to NY for another "illustrative" purpose and choose country music to prove your point.

There are (actually were) several companies that made quality receivers capable of AM, FM and shortwave broadcast reception. And there are some truly trashy receivers capable of shortwave only reception.

I'm not sure what the definition of base station receiver really is, but I'm assuming it is one that can be powered by AC and set on a table. Many of us also listen to SW as well as AM and FM on receivers that sit on desks.

> THEN

This doesn't follow. If you want to play logic then drag out your venn diagrams and start mapping the various kinds of receivers and find the overlaps. You hopefully will find that not all quality shortwave receivers are limited to only hf reception. You will also find that there is a small subset with coverage limited to the HF spectrum.

Yes, this is what everyone keeps saying, much to the delight of Eton's marketing department, I'm sure. However, no one has yet been able to spell out exactly what Drake's role was. Nor can anyone explain why Drake, which sold the 800, is not selling the E1, or why Drake, which serviced the 800, is not servicing the E1.

Window unit airconditioners have a lot to do with Shortwave Radio.There are many Shortwave/Ham Radio Operators who have window unit airconditioners in their Shortwave/Ham Radio Shacks.Look in the window (or the wall) and you will find a window unit airconditioner.Does a chicken dip snuff? Look under it's wing and you will find a little square box!

There are knockoff copies of American brand name vehicles being made in China right now. www.chinesecars.net They sell for much less in price than the American brand name vehicles being manufactured here in U.S.A.What has that got to do with radio? Well,take a look at the electronic things that have American brand names on them that are being made in China and other foreign countries.Governor haley barbour (I can not spell any! politicians name with capital letters,it is practically physically and mentally impossible for me to do so) of my home state of Mississippi recently got back to Jackson from a trip to China.Of course most of us know Nissan (Nissan used to be called Datsun,Datsun means Bluebird) is not an American brand name although there is a Nissan plant just north of Jackson about fifteen miles or less and that Nissan plant/factory has developed a line of cars (Aprexa,or something like that,I think is the name of the cars) that have the suspension system and some other things designed/developed for the Chinese market.That Nissan plant/factory near Jackson is going to be selling cars to China,someday,probally,China will be manufacturing the same line or similar of cars in China and selling them to Americans.I have said it here in this news group,someday Chinese manufactured cars,trucks,vans,suvs,boat engines,motorcycles,ect will be showing up in American dealers showrooms and someday,there will not be anymore factories in America manufacturing those products.Take a look at what has happened to American name brand radios that used to be manufactured in America,RCA,Sylvania,Emerson,Magnavox,Motorola and others.And tv sets and on and on and on,,,,,,,,,, We are digging a hole we will never get out of,thanks to fed govt and free trade and nafta and gatt and hold on to your hats folks,there is a new one the Crooked B......s in fed govt just recently approved and signed on to to help Sell U.S.A.Down The River even some more,cafta.(guess who is getting rich and richer from that and guess who gets poorer and poorer?)There are other countries in Asia that are becoming the "New China",India is one of them,so is Malaysia and other third world countries.Sure,I know the E1 radios are not an American name brand,but y'all get me driff.I remember when America used to be self sufficient and most of what Americans bought in American stores was Manufactured in America,except for Chrome which we get from Africa and Russia,without Chrome (I am not talking about the Chrome plating on auto bumpers and similar thingys either) we would be in big trouble Militarily speaking. cuhulin

Well, I don't have a definite answer - but I'd seriously doubt that - although that may be what the poster wanted people to think...

Along those lines, as easy as it is for government officials to know who someone is that posts on the internet (IP address', other trace software they have, etc), the poster could be in line for a little 'Cuba or Egypt questioning' session at the least -

Extremely stupid game to play...

I was an swl back in the early 1990s, and stumbled on 14.313 one evening and was hooked. It was more entertaining the television.

Unfortunately, I never recorded the goings-on and was wondering if anybody here, who had a good listening post, recorded the festivities from those days.

I'd pay a reasonable price for cds of mp3 files, or, if you have them only on cassettes, I would be happy to convert them to mp3 and put them on cd for you.

I also have a website they could be put up to for free download by anybody.

It would be a pity to have that entertainment disappear, and it will if only a few collectors have boxes of cassettes.

If you are interested in selling a copy of your cds of mp3s, or in loaning cassettes to me for conversion, please email me.

This isn't a money-making proposition; it's strictly for my pleasure in hearing the 'shows' again, and in making sure they don't disappear.

For that matter, does anybody have the 75m chronicles of Big Al from around the same time? That was another hilarious series of shows'

Our astronmer friend is cleaning house in preperation to moving to NZ. She loaned me a couple of older books. "The Handbook of Solar Flare Monitoring and propagation forcasting" , by Carl
M Cherman is fascinating.

One antenna is too interesting to ignore.

The MLA-2/B loop anenna is deigned to be used from 3~25MHz for both RX and TX operations. It is based on "an impedence transfomer from a 50 Ohm transmission line to the nominal 377 ohm resistance of free space."

The publishd pattern is very interesting. A quick net search didn't bring anything up. It was made by Antenna Research Associates of Beltsville MD.
I have visited their web site and sent a Email.

I was just wondering if anyone in the group had run into this odd antenna. It is reported to have "the performance of a half wave antenna with a device no larger then 54 inches". If accurate this could be a usefull antenna.

Another oldie but goodie is J.A. Ratcliff's "Sun Earth and Radio". The Copyright date is 1970 but the information is still of interest to anyone who uses HF radio. I had heard of this book and tried to locate one for a longtime.

Thanks.
Is the band change switch on the loop or on the tuning unit. If it is on the loop then they are adding more turns, if it is on the tuner, then they are adding more capacitance.

I don't know if you have ever had the loop open, but it has very few turns. Much less then one would expect on a MW feritte rod antenna.

Hmmm. I visited their website too at www.ara-inc.com. It's very interesting. Check out the ALC-1302 loop antenna.

My understanding is that Drake sold the design of the SW8 (and maybe the R8B??) to Eton.

Drake no longer sells the Satellit 800 or any other SW receiver. Drake decided it was best to sell the plans to their receivers rather than continue manufacturing them as current prices would be too high for any kind of market with the competition from imported receivers. Notice all the complaints in this newgroup about the $499 price of the Eton E1, yet the Satellit 500 and the Satellit 700 both sold for $500. The Drake SW8 was just under $800 and nobody complained about the price. Of course Drake quality is higher than Eton's, but most of us like getting a new radio every few years, and very few care about getting a receiver that will last 20 years or so. I paid $900 for my Satellit 650. Great quality receiver. But my $500 Satellit 800 has better SW reception and many more features. Not the great sound quality of the 650, but a fantastic selectable sideband sync detector as well as fast/slow AGC.

If the E1 is a great receiver, then it is well worth the $499 price tag. Pay less, get less.

I heard all of what Annan said. This is one sentence only, a "sound bite". Appointing ambassadors is an internal affair for a country. Annan also said that Bolton will have to work with the other 160 ambassadors and is one of many. No approval or disapproval detected in what I heard. I did hear some other "sound bites" of this Bolton fellow. I certainly hope that they are not fully indicative of his and his country's positions. He sounds like a radical and rather ignorant, similar to the recent US ambassador to Canada unfortunately.

No, for Americans it'd be corn, not oats. Your production of corn and added corn-derived sugars and syrup to foodstuffs is far beyond your oat production. It also fits with the "aw shucks" "just plain folks" type of politicians you tend to elect, at least your last 2 presidents and several celebrity governors.

No. We know the universe isn't really infinite, but it's so staggeringly gigantic that to anyone other than a mathematician, "infinite" is the most accurate way to convey the idea of something so hugely big beyond all human comprehension.

Try imagining a trillion suns, then a trillion groups of a trillion suns, then a trillion sets of groups each with a trillion groups of a trillion suns, then....

Close enough to infinite for all practical purposes. :)

Ideological people are generally very stupid, because they take a few received precepts and force the world to fit them as a substitute for intelligent thought.

Doesn't matter whether the ideology is Communism or religion.

The problem isn't intelligent atheism but unintelligent absolutist Communism or unintelligent absolutist free-marketism or absolutist religion or unintelligent absolutist anything.

If someone has a real need for portability, that's one thing. In that case, I can see spending tons of money on a portable receiver. I can also see spending a lot on a portable if you're a collector and simply "have to have" a particular portable, regardless of the pricetag. That's what collectors do.

However, if you're just interested in getting the best performance possible for the price, then no portable will be worth $500 when there are better performing tabletop receivers in the same price range. Maybe I'm nuts, but this just seems obvious to me.

Fortunately, there are receivers of both kinds for those who want them.

And if there are any of Art Bell's and George Noory's (talk about a couple of kooks!,Sheesh!) "space aliens" out there,they are so far away they dont know we exist and we will never know if they exist.Time does not exist and our Solar System only has about four and a half billion years to go before it is all toast.Four and a half billion years is nothing in the grand scheme of the Universe.As far as that is concerned,it is like a gate that is open and closed at the same time and we go though that gate but at the same time we do not go through that gate.We are gone before we are here.COMPLY!

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

Awesome work, Bill. Minor quibble about the terminology - "single point ground". Your diagram looks like a multi-point ground system in a star-star and daisy chain. I agree with the objective of trying to minimise the potential difference across the area being protected and that implies good conductivity into the earth for enormous currents. That is accomplished by providing lots of contact with the soil and the soil should be deep and wide and conductive. Instead of ground rods, I recall seeing some Australian research decades ago into the use of wire mesh and radials. Rocks, desert and permafrost present special problems.

I've got it here in Denver. Signal is strong but comes in and out. Programming is a combination of music and news. Passport says it is a broadcast directed to asia on 100kw.

cuhulin

And active antenna is an antenna with a built in amplifier, or "active" component. For example the AmRad active antenna uses a special FET (Field Effect Transistor) and is "as effective" as a ~100' long wire.

For low frequencies, like a 60KHz signal, even a 100' antenna is short.
The AmRad, DA100-E, "North County" and even the "Tiny Tenna" all use transistors to convert a small 36" or so, wire into a usefull antenna. The Tiny Tenna is the simplest, but even it will do a decent job far from any MW (AM 540~1600KHz).

Loops can be passive or have amplifiers, and those with amplifiers are termed active.

For RF reception from 500KHz through ~30MHz I prefer the common ~100' wire antenna. For MW DX work a loop is hard to beat. For LF work, 500KHz and lower, an active antenna is the only practical

Hey, I picked up a hallicrafters S-120A at a yard sale the other day, hardly ever used, pretty good shape. I'm quite impressed with it compared to my Zenith
D-7000 and Realistic DX-375 and other old crap radios around here. Only complaint is the Ministry of Truth (CBC) has a 30,000 watt fm transmitter that I can see from my window which causes some problems on the higher SW freqs. Any one know of a filter I could build, or other solution.

Sorry about posting about radio. I'll try to bash a political viewpoint next time.

A low pass fitler designed for ~30MHz ought to help.
Look up a low pass fitler desinged for ham transmitters.
Cehck oyour local public library for the ARRL Ham Handbook.
They have featured good designs before.
You may have to add some RFI control on the power cord as well.
Corecom makes some nice RFI IEC(PC power cord) style fitlers.
If the case isn't metal you might want to find some copper screen and line the inside of the case to stop direct pickup.

Strong, close RF sources can be beat, but it requires some work

And don't feel too bad about an on topic post, it will be one of very few today.

I agree with your sentiments. But which film coverup are you refering to. The lead-up to and aftermath of both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombings seem to be two of the more thouroughly covered aspects of a very well documented war. For example public TV just recently ran a 1

You have three choices. (1) Stop whining about your poor reception; (2) lay out more wire; or (3) write out a check every month to Big Brother at Sirius.

So far you've chosen (3).

We all understand that. No one is interested in it.

Given what I've heard so far about its lack of a handle, size and overall construction, it doesn't sound like something you'd want to lug around a lot.

Let's face > it, the SW77 retailed at $469.96 in its day (and it only had two > bandwidth filters and certainly had no passband offset).

Very true. And as much as I love the SW77--as it's an excellent portable--there's no way in *(&^ is should have sold for $469.96. But note: it wouldn't have been worth more money if it had had more filters and a passband offset. We think about these features as though they can be slapped onto just any radio and function properly, but in my experience this just isn't so. Put four filters on just about any portable and you will not have a significantly better radio. You have to have an underlying receiver that can do justice to these features. This is my beef with the way a lot of portables are marketed and sold. They have all kinds of junk on them in the way of "features", but all of these really cool features are attached to....a mediocre radio that can't even begin to do them justice. Frankly, I'd rather not have all the bells and whistles if they're just going to be useless appendages; and if the manufacturer skipped the bells and whistles, they'd probably be able to sell you the receiver at a reasonable price.

Well, the seller says it is in almost mint conditon, so I'm going to expect a minor scuff or two but a radio in darned good condition.

Unless the seller forgot to list the options, this is a stock R-5000 with the exception of the DC adapter. The optional Kenwood speaker is in my experience only marginally useful because much better audio can be gotten from a Radio Shack speaker or one of the Kenwood transceiver speakers with built-in audio filters.

R-5000 receivers in good cosmetic and operating condition with an optional filter or two or the pc interface seem to go for $350 to $400 on Ebay.

If the high bidder (currently a zero feedback) is a collector of mint Kenwood things then a price guideline most of us would use would go out the window. So is it overpriced...I guess it depends. For the guy who is high bidder, no. For me, definitely yes.

Corn sugar is bad for people.

I dont count Canadians as people at all.Speaking of the E1's though.A previous poster commented they dont have IBOC (I think he said IBOC) and a few other things that would make the E1's a better radio.I dont know most of those technical terms some of y'all talk about (it's all Greek to me) but I think he is right.It's not like I am knocking the E1's because I am not,but I think (only thinking) they could have made it a better radio.

Wow, you mean those guys who were awarded a Presidential Unit Citation in Afghanistan; the Canadian snipers who were awarded individual medals by the U.S.; Canadian General Walter Natynczyk, deputy commander of the U.S. Army's III Corps when they were the lead unit in Iraq; etc. etc.

Ha. I rather don't think he needs one.

I'm curious about comparisons between 1), 3) and 4).
I already know about the audio on 2), and I'm not that interested on 5) through 11), but the Icom, Kenwood and JRC are the interesting ones for me.

No Dewayne unfortunately. I heard to much about the terrible quality control and wobbly knobs that come off and all sorts of other things. So, I didn't want to take a chance on buying one off Ebay and bought the R75 with the last $500 allocated for a radio. Perhaps one day I'll buy a brand new one from Universal.

Right now I need to be a little tight with my money.

Ultimately, it'll be a matter of waitin' and seein' if the E1 does indeed perform well in all it aims to do. Because I can help but to have my own doubt in this regard, I'd be hesitant to be one of the first to run out and buy one.

As regards the size/portability issue, I can certainly appreciate your opinion on this matter, Steve, especially given the many compact and micro-sized portables out there nowadays. For me, the E1's size and lack of handle is no real issue: I regularly carry an SW8, antenna, etc to remote areas to get in some quality listening in a less noise-filled environment. For that matter, I frequently do the same with the SW77, which I carry in one of those Pelican 1450 cases (nice fit for the SW77 and accessories). For the E1, it's simply a matter of getting a new foam insert for the case and picking & plucking for the E1's size specifications. But then, that won't happen until I'm assured of the quality and performance of this product.

And, sure, there's no need to give any thought to the various features if, beneath it all, the radio itself simply isn't up to par. That's why I'm really keen on seeing some mag reviews, as well as additional user opinions posted on this receiver. I have to say, though, that it's good to see a portable receiver being provided with such features as passband offset and more than two bandwidth filters. I would like to see more such performance-related features being added to portables. For too long, it has been a tiresome reality that the only reason to upgrade from one portable to the next has been that the new model has an additional 100 or so memories to leave empty. So, in designing the E2 or whatever successor model there may be (if any at all), it'd be nice if the Eton folks would consider giving us a notch filter, as well...

Best,

j.a.mulc.

I also pre ordered mine from Willoughby and Ward. Waited more than a year for it. I have an original 960 on my desk. I thought it would be nice to have a solid state version for casual use, so I didn't have to chew up so many tubes, a couple of which were getting hard to fine.

Went through three of them, before I found one that 1) didn"t drift halfway up the dial once a station was selected, and 2) was less than 1mHz off dial calibration.

Inside the classic 960 was worse than some homebuilts I've seen at highs school science fairs. Build quality would be a misnomer. But it was difficult to tell from all the spiderwebs of hot glue used to hold the damned thing together.

An embarrassment to the Grundig name.

Three of them, one worse than the next.

I finally sold it to a college student in Canada for a pittance. He was happy, so it wasn't a total loss.

They did release a revised Classic 960 that addressed the drift and dial backlash and that held something that at least hinted at dial calibration. It also had a revised tuning mechanism with more tactile resemblance to the original 960.

But I didn't spring for one.

I posted the details of my experience with Classic 960, here, at the time.

What a miserable excuse for a radio.

That would be "Australia Talks Back", Radio National's nationwide call in show.

Hmm, 11880 isn't a Central/South Pacific frequency at that time.
(11880 comes in best here at their 17:00-21:00 transmission).
Looking at the schedule, it's an Asian frequency from 09:00 to 13:00. For North America, it's usually just 9580/9590 at 9:00 (for an hour or so until 6020 and some others come on).

Gentlemen,

It all depends on: the time of day; the critical angle; and the frequency of interest. The best thing is to get one of the free propagation programs, and play with it to fully understand the implications of the three variables working together.

In reality, unless you are in the business of SIGINT, or going for all DX awards, it is of little use to most SWL or operators.

There are taxes on everything,especially the RIPP OFF sales taxes here in Mississippi.I guess (only guessing) that we all do indirectly pay for listening to radio whether we like it or not.Unless one whom is homeless finds a battery powered radio in a dumpster somewhere.I APPROVE of that.Some homeless folks are homeless because they want to be homeless (maybe they know something we dont know) and weirdingly and interestingly,I APPROVE of that too.Sometimes,I envy them.

Joe

In the orignal thread we we wondering/debating what, if any, RF penetrated the ionosphere. Not all that practical a musing as none of us are likely to be on the far side of the ionosphere. I had mentioned that I remembered reading that at all frequencies some RF made it through to free space.

I was attempting to correct me error.

A good understanding of propagation does help snag the rare ones.

That's odd. My 960 doesn't drift any more than my S-3drifty. Well, I guess that's alot. On MW or FM, it's fine in respect to drift.
Don't feel bad, I plunked down $450 for my Zenith, although it works good. Being as I bought it on a whim at an antique store, I'm sure I paid way too much but I always wanted one of those Big "Black dial" Zeniths. MY aunt had one that we used to listen to when I was about 6. I wish they still had the shows we used to listen to. While I don't intend to buy one, (all the jacking around they did for the last few years has pissed me off) I do enjoy reading what you have to say about this radio. I REALLY want to hate it due to my feelings toward Eton but it sounds like a real winner and I hope you enjoy yours for years to come. While I DO have a problem with having to have EVERY radio I see (I currently have in excess of 125 various radios) I am doing my best to avoid this one. Like the 800, I believe the radio should be priced in the $200 range. I did buy a refurb 800 which puts it a little closer to reality. Maybe in a few years...
Then again, like I said, I have this "problem" I keep telling myself that these radios are my retirement $$$. But I don't have any I want to get rid of.....
Anyway, good luck with your new toy. I AM due for a new toy but think next will be a 7030+...

The band change switch is on the loop. The knob on the front of the unit has MW freq's listed on one side, and LW freq's listed on the other, 180 degrees apart. The LW runs from just below 150 Khz to just over 300 Khz. The MW seems to tune all the way down to 510, and up to about 1630.

... Anything on SW...?

You mean, radio traffic to the embassy in DC? Probably.

I googled for "antenna Russian embassy" bub didn't see anything exciting on the first page of hits. There was a link to a Bill Gertz article that may be interesting.

"Russian merchant ships used in spying" http://www.c4i.org/rmss.html

I see this is happening off the Pacific coast of Russia. If it were near Norfolk, I might be able to hear something.

The sub is said to be 625 feet below the surface, way too far down for the wet exit. Pressure at that depth is about 300 psi.

Rush mentioned something about it during his broadcast. Went something like a few weeks ago the Russians and the Chinese were playing war games together but when it comes to rescue games the Russians call the US.

I understand we and the British (and probably others) have equipment enroute.

Last I heard they may have oxygen enough until Monday or so.

The K7RA Solar Update

SEATTLE, WA, Aug 5, 2005--Average daily sunspot numbers rose by more than 68 points this week to 83.7 compared to last week's numbers. This is four weeks after the recent large number of sunspots around the beginning of July, which corresponds to the rotation of the sun relative to Earth. That area of the sun is now back in view, but with sunspots diminished.

The reporting week began July 28 with heightened geomagnetic activity, but it quieted down. Prediction for the next few days is for solar flux to remain above 100, which is expected until August 10. Current geomagnetic conditions are slightly unsettled, but after August 10 are predicted to be quiet. Barring an unexpected solar flare, expect good conditions--at least relative to recent HF propagation at this lower spot on the solar cycle. The Northern Hemisphere is about halfway between the longest day of the year and the fall equinox, and fall is typically favorable for HF propagation.

Looking at the monthly averages, we see a tremendous variation from month to month, with a rise in average sunspot and solar flux numbers for July. This was due to the unusually large number of sunspots early in the month.

The average daily sunspot numbers for the months October 2004 through July 2005 were 77.9, 70.5, 34.7, 52, 45.4, 41, 41.5, 65.4, 59.8 and 68.7. Average daily solar flux for the same months was 106, 113.7, 95, 102.3, 97.2, 89.9, 85.9, 99.5, 93.7 and 96.5. Looked at in isolation, the numbers since early 2005 almost suggest a rising solar cycle.

The overall trend for the remainder of this sunspot cycle will be down, and it becomes more obvious when we average the numbers over a long period. Currently we are looking to reach solar minimum around the end of 2006. We've been reporting this for some time now, and this is based on the table of predicted smoothed sunspot numbers that appears occasionally in the back of the weekly Preliminary Report and Forecast from the NOAA Space Environment Center. This week's copy, No 1561, contains that table. Looking back over the past few years shows the predicted values out to the end of 2007, just as it does today.

Look at this table for predicted smoothed sunspot numbers from four years ago, in August 2001, and compare it to the table in the latest issue noted above.

Even back in 2001 the predicted low numbers for the end of next year were the same as today's prediction. What changed are the predicted numbers for a few months from now, which are higher than predicted four years ago and, of course, the actual smoothed numbers for all that time in between differ also.

We must go back to 2000 to find tables that end earlier than 2007. Here is one from August 2000 that ends in 2005.

Until I rechecked this, I thought the table was perhaps updated yearly, with another year in the future added on. I've asked the NOAA Space Environment Center to clarify this as well as the July 18 report of a sunspot number of -1 mentioned recently.

Vic Woodling, WB4SLM, wrote about recent VHF DX, but on the FM broadcast band, about half way between our own 6 and 2-meter bands. Vic's girlfriend lives near Haysville, North Carolina, in grid square EM85, and around noon local time on Tuesday, August 2, she heard KRKX in Billings, Montana, on 94.1 MHz on her car radio. The strong signal was full-quieting, and the KRXK transmitter site is in grid square DN55, a little less than 1500 miles away.

For more information concerning radio propagation and an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin see the ARRL Technical Information Service Propagation page. An archive of past bulletins is on the ARRL Web site.

Sunspot numbers for July 28 through August 3 were 29, 69, 62, 110, 102, 112 and 102 with a mean of 83.7. 10.7 cm flux was 95.8, 103.7, 105, 109.7, 111.2, 110.2 and 108.9, with a mean of 106.4. Estimated planetary A indices were 28, 19, 16, 9, 16, 12 and 11 with a mean of 15.9.
Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 18, 14, 11, 10, 18, 9 and 6, with a mean of 12.3.

Pre-amp # 2 gives amplification above that of pre-amp # 1 from the bottom of the tuning dial all the way to the top. So, unless my R75 is a mutant, it is not only for 50-60 MHz. Regardless, it also amplifies the noise, so I rarely use any pre-amp unless on a weak signal. With any pre-amp on, I usually also use some NR to chill things out a bit.

The Federal government isn't outsourcing.

The people are responsible for outsourcing. By demanding more for less, and tolerating worse and worse service, we have told the soul-less corporations to keep racing to the bottom.

This short-term miserly thinking will end up costing far more than the pennies you saved by worshipping at WalMart.

Thanks!
That means they are switching more windings for LF.
I bet they use the exact same electronics in the tuner and all the magic is in the loop. I further bet that I can get at least 3 bands, 100~300, 300~500 and the stock
MW. It would be nice to see if it will work down to 60KHz for WWVB all the way up to 1.8MHz or above. Since I have a spare feritte rod, I will have to "duplicate" the rod part and see what I can see.

I won't get around to this for a few weeks or longer, but if it works I will post the number of turns I use and the results I get.

Back in the 1940's,Rolls Royce had a factory in Massatwobumps.(Massachutssets) (look it up if y'all dont believe me)
That factory in Massatwobumps was useing American made wireing (harnesses) and differentials and some other American made thingys.(I have a book here about that) The American made Rolls Royce cars were much more dependable and reliable and they didn't break down.The "official" Rolls Royce story (look at what happened when Jaguar merged with Ford in America) in limeyland was they just weren't selling enough Rolls Royce cars in America.Back in the 1920's and 1930's,Mercedes Benz (Lawd,,I wantttttt a Marcedez Benzzzzzz) (not me!) and Fiat had factories in New York and Chevrolet and Harley Davidson had factories in China and Ford had factories all over the World back in the Ford T model days.I have a book here about that to.That married Irish woman wayyyy over yonder across the big pond whom I email chat with lives about seven miles from the Rolls Royce,Godwood,England factory.brits dont know s..t about how to build cars.Hey,Rooster Cogburn movie is fixin to start on After reading the post by Guy Kudlemyer I decided to open the feritte loop in my DA5. I was puzzled to see the feritte rod is slightly different then the replacement that I ordered back in ~1974. The replacment is 12" long, 3/4" diam, and has a 1/8" hole runing down the center through the entier length.

The DA5 has a slightly shorter, 11 7/8", 3/4" feritte rod, with the 1/8" lengthwise center hole, but it also has a ~0.10" slot from the edge to the center hole.

It also has two coils. the larger is near the center, and the other is a 6 turn that is not connected.

Saturday I hope to wire them in series and see if this will lower the tuning range to 150~300KHz as with the DA7.

The serial mumber is DA50001039 so my guess is this is a 2nd run. I have trouble accepting they sold more then a few hundred of these units. The "1039" is in a slightly lower position.

It would be too much to expect the unit to only need a switch. While I modified the tuner unit to operate from an external +12V I never had a reason to open the loop.

Yeah, nice list, but it's not shortwave. Additionally, it's not going to do

My Dad,

W7US

Willis George Allen was born April 5, 1923 in Cleveland, Ohio. He passed away July 20th, 2005 at his home in Tucson, Arizona. He was a loving father and husband who will be greatly missed. My dad served with the navy in WWII in the South Pacific in nine major battles on the USS Biloxi. Dad retired from Tucson Electric Power Co. in 1984. Dad was a life long member of the American Radio Relay League. Bill Allen is survived by his wife Greta of 57 years and his son, William (Bill) Allen. His daugheters Marguerite McCann, Holly Hancock and Beth Pfeifer. Also grandchildren Zachary, Logan, Treveor, Sean, Matthew and Laurie. A great man who is to be forever missed. The family memorial was private. emails to son, "Bill" will receive respones from williamdallen@cox.net Communist China never fights a superior enemy covertly.

Communist China is busy in research of post-nuclear super weapons.
Including nano-scale weapons and covert delivery of deadly biological and chemical weapons.

There is speculation that the recent Level-3 spread of the bird flu virus by migrating birds throughout Asia was initiated by the PLA as a test of a possible covert biological delivery method.

The CCP has very little regard for loss of life, including its own peoples - Since 1949 the CCP has murdered 80 million of its own peoples. The CCP will go through extraordinary measures to insure the Party's survival and dictatorship. Even if it means the death of millions of Chinese citizens. Unlike the U.S. population of about 300 million, China, with a population of 1,300 million can reproduce 1 million people in ONE YEAR! Read http://www.dragoninthedark.com

As many of you know, a common problem with the RF-2200 is the gyro antenna failing to stay in the "up" position. Mine still stays up, but I can tell that it is getting looser. I guess I always thought something broke on these instead of loosening up over time, but apparently that is incorrect and I can tell that mine is losing its ability to stay up. (No Viagra jokes, please).

Is there a way to fix this? I haven't had it apart in a while, but I don't remember anything looking like it can be tightened. Anyone with some experience out there? Thanks.

Russia could reduce Radio Liberty's correspondent network

RIA NOVOSTI. August 5, 2005, 8:01 PM

MOSCOW, August 5 (RIA Novosti, Dmitry Panovkin) - The Russian Foreign Ministry may take measures to reduce the number of correspondents working for Radio Liberty/ Free Europe after its journalist Andrei Babitsky interviewed Russia's most wanted terrorist, Shamil Basayev, for U.S. television network ABC.
A spokesman for the ministry said ABC's assertion that the interview had been broadcast at Babitsky's initiative was ridiculous.
According to the source, RL/FE used loopholes in Russian legislation in the sector of information and immense foreign resources to create an extensive network of freelance correspondents in Russia. The spokesman said this was prohibited by Russian media laws.
The source said the Foreign Ministry would consider the possibility of restricting the activity of the radio station's correspondents in Russia.
The ministry accredits a limited number of foreign correspondents, while, he continued, many of RL/FE freelance correspondents work without accreditation.
"Now an opportunity to resolve the problem has opened up," the source said

If China would let the Chinese women have more than one child,China could produce more than one million children each year.If a Chinese woman already has one child and she gets pregnant again,she must have an abortion willingly or the Chinese government will force her to have an abortion.

We discovered that cutting up the radio spectrum into artificial little slices was a waste of energy, so we completely did away with 'frequencies'.

This country now enjoys full spectrum All Radio, All the Time!

For those with old fashioned radios, help is still available:

well unfortunately these kind of problems happen a lot with sex changes in thailand

they are cheap but ... you get what you pay for you get your surgery over there and then go back to u.s. and then a problem develops they know you are not going to fly back to thailand to get it fixed so you end up paying to fix it in u.s. and in the end it cost you as much as getting your sex change in u.s.

maryanne make sure you keep up with your dilation schedule because if not you run the risk of your vagina closing up and then you will be s-o-l

best of luck to you

You needn't be facetious about her problem - a vaginal fistula is nothing to sniff at! For the inflammation, I recommend copious applications of fish oil.

Shoot, I got a new one from Universal, bench tested and all, and it still has problems. The tuning knob wobbles and is intermittent. But I still enjoy

Oh brilliant, and you suppose the Irish never ate any limes?

Reception in Europe is always more difficult due to the concentration of high powered SW BC stations there, anyway.

Your reception in England will be about the same as in Ireland, if that is what you are referring to, with your usual, inane blather.

Should we expect corporations to behave morally in some non-human sense? Should we expect them to behave immorally, or rather amorally? Aren't corporations moral agents in any sense? If not, what about their chief executives? Exactly what do you and your monthly subscription to Sirius have to hide?

It was a sort of real life soap opera, that ran every evening for years on 14.313.

I think it started because of the complaints of one operator about the way a maritime net was being run on that frequency.

It degenerated, as these things usually do, into personal attacks, and settled into a sort of trench warfare, with a group of regulars on each side, and a chorus of hecklers, drunks, and people having psychotic episodes.

As sometimes happens with soap operas, once you got to know the cast and the general plot, you were hooked; it was by far the best long-running entertainment I have come across.

The participants probably didn't find it so entertaining: there was a lot of nastiness, not confined to verbal stuff; but if you were just an observer, it was great fun.

I think it also resulted in a crackdown by the American regulatory authorities on amateur radio.

If enough tape-recordings exist, there's probably a goldmine of material for an aspiring PhD in psychology or sociology.

I'd be happy to convert tapes to mp3 format and put them on my website. If you have any and care to loan them to me, let me know.

Hmmm. I wonder what that guy's time is worth? Not only for the time in which it takes to break down the radio but the time to set up multiple auctions, answer all the e-mail, confirm payments and ship the stuff out. It sure seems like alot of extra effort even if he's cherry picking parts for his own radios and selling the leftovers on the side.

Maybe there's a lottery ticket mentality at work. You never know when you'll score really big on the next IF transformer or tube shield.

If you are using an external antenna with a co-axial downlead and the radio is well-screened, Terry's suggestion of an in-line low-pass filter will work. A cheaper solution is a transmission line stub notch filter cut for the offending frequency. Insert a tee connector in the co-ax line. Add a stub of co-ax off the tee, open-circuited at the far end, about a foot long. Trim about a 1/4" at a time until you reach minimum interference. If you go too far, make another one!.

''Fishwrapper'' is slang for a newspaper.

A former backer of Air America, whose interest was bought out in the Spring of 2004, is accused of the shenanigans, not anyone at the Network.

Lars Larson is a retard (apologies to the developmentally challenged

Statement:
If the allegations of mismanagement and corruption at Gloria Wise Boys and Girls Club are true, it is absolutely disgraceful.

As reported in the Wall Street Journal and the HBO Documentary, Left of the Dialï¿½ the company that the Gloria Wise Boys & Girls Club officials gave money to, Progress Media, has been defunct since May 2004. That company was run at the time by Evan Cohen who has not had any involvement in Air America Radio since May 2004.

The current owners of Air America Radio have no obligation to Progress Media's business activities. We are very disturbed that Air America Radio's good name could be associated with a reduction in services for young people, which is why we agreed months ago to fully compensate the Gloria Wise Boys & Girls Club as a result of this transaction.

We at Air America Radio strongly believe in the mission of Boys and Girls Clubs to provide a safe and nurturing place for young people to learn and grow. As a result, we recently allowed the same club, Gloria Wise Boys & Girls Club, to use our name in a fundraising effort for a summer camp for children in their community.

The funding for Camp Air America was raised and collected entirely by the Gloria Wise Boys & Girls Club, and Air America promoted the camp on air and urged support for it. A link on our web site sent those interested in contributing to the camp to the Gloria Wise web site. Regrettably, the camp did not survive the closure of the Gloria Wise organization. We have offered any individuals who contributed to the camp as a result of Air America's promotion the option of a refund paid for by Air America Radio and the Club offered the alternative option of having their donation redirected to Kip's Bay Boys and Girls Club.

I went to Mexico about twelve or thirteen years ago only to see what things are like in Mexico.Matamoros,Reynosa,Nueva Laredo,Saltillo,Monterey,Rio Bravo and the other towns between those Mexican Cities I drove through/visited.I visited Reynosa for a couple of days.(I slept in my old 1978 Dodge van) I would go to a food store and buy something for breakfast and I sat there and watched Mexicans going about their everyday business.There was a guy and his wife and their little girl and they had a food/refreshments push cart thingy and every morning,I saw them pushing their cart on over to that busy Highway area.The guy would go somewhere for a few minutes and he would come back with a couple of Pineapples and some other fresh fruit thingys,they sold fresh fruit thingys to the commuters) and There I was,watching the busy,busy,busy,very busy traffic going and coming via the main drag of Reynosa.(population of somewhere around over 200,000,I think) When I got ready to leave Reynosa,I went to a store and I bought some toys and crayons and tablets for their little girl and some gifts for the guy and his wife.

That's because you don't live in his hometown.

''Attention, Rush Limbaugh and everyone else who thought that liberal talk radio couldnï¿½t work: Portland is proving otherwise. At least if you believe the folks who measure listenership.
The spring Arbitron ratings show that KPOJ (620 AM), which carries the upstart Air America Network with Al Franken, Randi Rhodes, et al., has made huge strides since its March 30 launch.
In the important 25-54 age category, KPOJ ranks third in the Portland market with a 4.9 share (which means a 4.9 percent share of the listening audience). Itï¿½s ahead of all other AM stations and finished behind top-ranked country-music KUPL (98.7 FM) and No. 2-ranked adult rock station KINK (101. 9 FM).
In a three-month period, KPOJ went from 12,000 listeners to almost 80,000 listeners per week, with little promotion or marketing. Previously KPOJ had been airing golden oldies, drawing a 1 percent share.
With numbers like that, KPOJï¿½s success could very well spawn other stations featuring ï¿½progressiveï¿½ talk in Portland and around the country where underperforming stations may be looking for a new format.
ï¿½There are a lot of stations out there that were just kind of watching and waiting to see what happened,ï¿½ said KPOJ Program Director Tony Coles. ï¿½My guess is that for Air America and for Ed Schultz, the phones will be ringing off the hooks once stations see the Portland numbers.ï¿½ Schultz, whose show can be heard on KPOJ from noon to 3 p.m., is syndicated through the Jones Radio Network rather than Air America.
Of the 16 stations around the country where Air America is featured, Portland is the biggest success story, showing the most substantial growth. It also was one of only a handful of stations that carried Air America from the beginning, when financial problems almost sunk the network in its first month.
In the midday period from10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Air Americaï¿½s Al Franken and Schultz rank No. 1, leaving Limbaugh, KPAMï¿½s (860 AM) Sean Hannity and KXLï¿½s (750 AM) Lars Larson in their wake.
However, when measured by listeners ages 12-plus throughout the day, KPOJ is in 11th place overall with a 3.7 share. KEX (1190 AM) is in sixth place with a 4.2 share, and KXL is eighth with a 4 share.
The hour-to-hour breakdowns had not been released at press time, so itï¿½s not yet known whether Franken actually beats Limbaugh head-to-head from 9 a.m. to noon.

KPOJ is owned by Clear Channel Communications, which also owns KEX, the home of Limbaugh. In the mornings ï¿½ from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. ï¿½ KPOJ ended up in ninth place in the 25-54 age group, ahead of No. 11 KEX, which took a serious hit from its sister station.
As long as weï¿½re keeping track, the 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. ratings indicate that Howard Stern on KUFO (101.1 FM) is No. 1 in the mornings among listeners 25-54, with a 7.6 share. Heï¿½s followed by KGON (92.3 FM),KUPL, KKCW (103.3 FM) and KWJJ (99.5 FM).
The Arbitron ratings are based on listener weekly diaries, and theories abound about how accurate ï¿½ or inaccurate ï¿½ they are. Some inside the industry speculate that fans of KPOJ and what it stands for are writing down in the Arbitron diaries more hours than they really tune in for.
But Arbitron is the only radio ratings game around, and advertisers have little else to go on.
ï¿½People have created their own bumper stickers and yard signs in support of the station,ï¿½ says Mary Lou Gunn, market manager of Clear Channel Radio Portland.
For Air America, itï¿½s still early in the game. To ensure its survival, the network must pick up stations in dozens of markets and needs to grow audience in places such as New York and Los Angeles. But in Portland, itï¿½s on a definite roll.''

I think you said something about yourself along time ago but I don't remember all of it.

Would you say a few words about yourself, the name "cuhulin" you choose and why, what interest do you have in the "MP's" and please include your real first name (for some reason I think it was Steve)

TIA,

Burr

hey Burr,google gives all of our mf (Massey Ferguson) postings to all of the Massey Ferguson (mf) World.I am fixin to head on over to the Goodwill store now.Yesterday afternoon,that girl over there told me to take that hat off my head,she said my head is nasty.I told her I washed my head just before (I dont lie) I came over here.(the Goodwill store) y'all should have seen her and that older woman laughing! Then,I told them I washed both of my heads off.That girl was standing there and pointing at herself just like she had two heads to that other older woman.

You're entitled to your opinions. If you're going to hate the "Brits", why not concentrate on the English, and leave us Scots alone?

In case you didn't realise, very few people in Scotland regard themselves as being British.

I sold my R5000 because when I bought a TS-430. I already had an NRD-535D.
I later sold my NRD to the person who bought my R5000 for the R5000 and cash. I've never regreted it, the R5000 "sounds" better. I don't miss the sync detector of the NRD because I have an additional 4kHz AM filter in it and the R5000 is stable enough to listen to an AM broadcaster in SSB mode which pretty much does the same thing.

I dont see why that is suppose to be news that they are spying.That sort of thing has been going on since at least back in the 1950's.Countries that have Submarines do spy on each other.This month's or last month's Popular Science or Popular Mechanics magazine has an article about a new American high tech Submarine.I have the snail mail magazine around here somewhere,the new Submarine has a built in garage so peole and underwater vehicles can leave and return to the Submarine.There might be something at their websites about that. www.popularmechanics.com www.popsci.com Those two magazines are printed in countries and foreign languages around the World,so it is common knowledge by now. cuhulin

A little googling turns up:

James Larry Ryan,
1304 Denson Ave
Jackson Mississippi 39209
http://www.allaudios.org/detail-11188354.html

(on WWW most frequently appears as Larry) ~65 yrs old,
Vietnam vet 1964
http://64.233.187.104/search?q=cache:UulyLjiAF-sJ:www.tsna.org/view/+%22James+Larry+Ryan%22&hl=en&lr=lang_en ; former e-mail tainbocuilgne@webtv.net, sometimes identified himself as "tain"

Cuhulin is a variant of Cuchulain.
http://www.english.emory.edu/DRAMA/YeatsHawk.html
Also Cuchulainn, Cu Chulainn, C&#65533;chulainn, C&#65533; Chulainn Cuchulain is "the usual name of the hero Setanta; son of the god Lug and of Dechtire, and foster-son of Sualtaim (pronounced Cuhulin)".
http://vassun.vassar.edu/~sttaylor/Cooley/Names.html

A different pronunciation is heard here:
http://content.answers.com/main/content/img/pron.gif

According to BBC, the Irish legend of Cuchulain is:
"Brave youngster, fathered by a sky god, chokes dog with ball, changes his name and single handedly faces invading army in war over prize bull. The Irish can tell a good yarn can`t they? This rather simplified, and purposely irreverent summation refers to one of the most famous Celtic heroes of all time: Cuchulain, the hound of Ulster."
and...
"Tain Bo Cuailnge (Cattle Raid of Cooley) is the oldest vernacular tale in western Europe. It tells the tale of our hero, Cuchulain, fighting off the armies of Queen Maeve of Connacht, over a prize brown bull. "

Humans must seem pretty tame to you after the years of dog lust and bestiality that you have admitted to in this very group. I don't feel perverts such as yourself are qualified to judge what human relations are about.

Yes, but will it hold up the far end of a two by four while I'm sawing? Will it block up a car while I change a tire? Will it play eight track tapes? Does it project a bat wing symbol onto the night sky?

If not, it's pretty well useless.

Bill,

I'm very sorry to hear of your fathers passing. It's been about 20 years since I worked him but I recall his special note on his QSL card that I worked him from West Virginia to complete his Satellite WAS. That special QSO and his distinctive "US" callsign always drew attention when looking back over cards.

If you check back, I was WB2DIN/8 back in those days.

Halliburton secretly doing business with key member of Iran's nuclear team

Jason Leopold | Aug 06 2005
http://www.onlinejournal.com/Special_Reports/080605Leopold/080605leopold.html or http://prisonplanet.com/Pages/Aug05/060805halliburton.htm

Scandal-plagued Halliburton, the oil services company once headed by Vice President Dick Cheney, was secretly working with one of Iran's top nuclear program officials on natural gas related projects and, allegedly, selling the official's oil development company key components for a nuclear reactor, according to Halliburton sources with intimate knowledge into both companies' business dealings.

Just last week a National Security Council report said Iran was a decade away from acquiring a nuclear bomb. That time frame could arguably have been significantly longer if Halliburton, which just reported a 284 percent increase in its fourth quarter profits due to its Iraq reconstruction contracts, was not actively providing the Iranian government with the financial means to build a nuclear weapon.

Now comes word that Halliburton, which has a long history of flouting U.S. law by conducting business with countries the Bush administration said have ties to terrorism, was working with Cyrus Nasseri, the vice chairman of Oriental Oil Kish, one of Iran's largest private oil companies, on oil development projects in Tehran. Nasseri is also a key member of Iran's nuclear development team.

"Nasseri, a senior Iranian diplomat negotiating with Europe over Iran's controversial nuclear program is at the heart of deals with US energy companies to develop the country's oil industry," the Financial Times reported.

Nasseri was interrogated by Iranian authorities in late July for allegedly providing Halliburton with Iran's nuclear secrets and accepting as much as $1 million in bribes from Halliburton, according to Iranian government officials.

It's unclear whether Halliburton was privy to Iran's nuclear activities. A company spokesperson did not return numerous calls for comment. The White House also did not return calls for comment.

Oriental Oil Kish dealings with Halliburton became public knowledge in January when the company announced that it had subcontracted parts of the South Pars natural gas drilling project to Halliburton Products and Services, a subsidiary of Dallas-based Halliburton that is registered in the Cayman Islands.

Following the announcement, Halliburton announced the South Pars gas field project in Tehran would be its last project in Iran. The BBC reported that Halliburton, which took in $30-$40 million from its Iranian operations in 2003, "was winding down its work due to a poor business environment."

Halliburton, under mounting pressure from lawmakers in Washington, D.C., pulled out of its deal with Nassri's company in May, but has done extensive work on other areas of the Iranian gas project and was still acting in an advisory capacity to Nasseri's company, two people who have knowledge of Halliburton's wor in Iran said.

In attempt to curtail other U.S. companies from engaging in business dealings with rogue nations, the Senate approved legislation July 26 that would penalize companies that continue to skirt U.S. law by setting up offshore subsidiaries as a way to legally conduct business in Libya, Iran and Syria, and avoid U.S. sanctions under International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA). The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, is part of the Senate Defense Authorization bill.

"It prevents U.S. corporations from creating a shell company somewhere else in order to do business with rogue, terror-sponsoring nations such as Syria and Iran," Collins said in a statement.

"The bottom line is that if a U.S. company is evading sanctions to do business with one of these countries, they are helping to prop up countries that support terrorism—most often aimed against America," she said.

The law currently doesn't prohibit foreign subsidiaries from conducting business with rogue nations provided that the subsidiaries are truly independent of the parent company.

But Halliburton's Cayman Island subsidiary never did fit that description.

Halliburton first started doing business in Iran as early as 1995, while Vice President Cheney was chief executive of the company, in possible violation of U.S. sanctions. According to a February 2001 report in the Wall Street Journal, "Halliburton Products & Services Ltd. works behind an unmarked door on the ninth floor of a new north Tehran tower block. A brochure declares that the company was registered in 1975 in the Cayman Islands, is based in the Persian Gulf sheikdom of Dubai and is 'non-American.' But, like the sign over the receptionist's head, the brochure bears the company's name and red emblem, and offers services from Halliburton units around the world." Moreover, mail sent to the company's offices in Tehran and the Cayman Islands is forwarded to the company's Dallas headquarters.

Not surprisingly, a letter drafted by trade groups representing corporate executives vehemently objected to the amendment saying it would lead to further hatred and perhaps incite terrorist attacks on the U.S and "greatly strain relations with the United States' primary trading partners."

"Extraterritorial measures irritate relations with the very nations the U.S. must secure cooperation from to promote multilateral strategies to fight terrorism and to address other areas of mutual concern," said a letter signed by the Coalition for Employment through Exports, Emergency Coalition for American Trade, National Foreign Trade Council, USA Engage, U.S. Council on International Business and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "Foreign governments view U.S. efforts to dictate their foreign and commercial policy as violations of sovereignty, often leading them to adopt retaliatory measures more at odds with U.S. goals."

Still, Collins' amendment has some holes. As Washington Times columnist Frank Gaffney pointed out in a July 25 story, "the Collins amendment would seek to penalize individuals or entities who evade IEEPA sanctions—if they are "subject to the jurisdiction of the United States."

"This is merely a restatement of existing regulations. The problem with this formulation is that, in the process of purportedly closing one loophole, it would appear to create new ones. As Sen. Collins told the Senate: 'Some truly independent foreign subsidiaries are incorporated under the laws of the country in which they do business and are subject to that country's laws, to that legal jurisdiction. There is a great deal of difference between a corporation set up in a day, without any real employees or assets, and one that has been in existence for many years and that gets purchased, in part, by a U.S. firm.' It is a safe bet that every foreign subsidiary of a U.S. company doing business with terrorist states will claim it is one of the ones Sen. Collins would allow to continue enriching our enemies, not one prohibited from doing so."

Going a step further, Dow Jones Newswires reported that the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission sent letters in June to energy corporations demanding that the companies disclose in their security filings any business dealings with terrorist supporting nations.

"The letters have been sent by the SEC's Office of Global Security Risk, a special division that monitors companies with operations in Iran and other countries under U.S. sanctions, which were created by the U.S. Congress in 2004," Dow Jones reported.

The move comes as investors have become increasingly concerned that they may be unwillingly supporting terrorist activity. In the case of Halliburton, the New York City Comptroller's office threatened in March 2003 to pull its $23 million investment in the company if Halliburton continued to conduct business with Iran.

The SEC letters are aimed at forcing corporations to disclose their profits from business dealings in rogue nations. Oil companies, such as Devon Energy Corp., ConocoPhillips, Marathon Oil Corp. and Occidental Petroleum Corp. that currently conduct business with countries that sponsor terrorism, have not disclosed the profits received from terrorist countries in their most recent quarterly reports because the companies don't consider the earnings "material."

Devon Energy was until recently conducting business in Syria. The company just sold its stake in an oil field there. ConocoPhillips has a service contract with the Syrian Petroleum Co. that expires on Dec. 31.

Maryanne Kehoe is scheduled to go into hospital next week for her own version of Extreme Makeover.

A source very close to her (we can't reveal his identity but it's someone who paid her a lot of cash recently and lives with her) revealed Maryanne is scheduled for a full-body liposuction including the face and her triple chins, gastric bypass, butt lift, breast reduction, and a special surgery to shave her wrists, ankles, knees, elbows, and knuckles which are huge, like a man's.

This is in anticipation of the upcoming Fall pageant season where Maryanne expects to be very busy purchasing ... er I mean ... competing for titles.

Let us all wish her good luck!

1. I noted in some of your post that you were talking about no one can see/find you.
Something you need to know is that there are people in this group that if they "wanted" to see you would be right there. Always remember this, it's important!!!

2. You said something about having a hard time while waiting to go to Nam. Do you think you were the only one that was messed with. I was in SF airport when a woman spit in my face, I took out a year of retained anger and put everything I had into the only time I ever hit a woman right in the face. I'm sure when she got out of the hospital she was a little more careful who she spit at.

3. You seem to enjoy putting other people down or running your mouth about them.
The caliber of your post sure doesn't indicate that you have much room to put anyone down on this list. It looks like to me that you have worked very hard to make yourself look a fool, and you are doing a good job.

4. I asked you if you were an MP, you choose not to answer.
So you are not man enough to say what you were/are.

Just a few notes of things I have picked up on from your post. Even if you don't respect yourself, respect the others on the group. There are some very smart people on here that we all can learn from and even if we don't agree with what they say, they have a right to say it.

My thoughts,

Burr

1222. S350DL sales and price in Canada

I have been keeping an eye on the S350DL stock in the local Radio Shack* stores here in Calgary, AB, Canada, as I am tempted to buy one, via their website. It looks to me like the stores that have them (and the number is increasing, about half of them have them now) sell one every three days or so. Not bad considering the price (>$100), and the fact that they are radios, which few people seem to be interested in anymore.

Also, you may find this interesting: Universal Radio sells these guys for $150 US, and here in Canada they sell for $150 Canadian, at Radio Shack* of all places, or about $120 US. You guys are getting ripped off! The same applies for this radio's little brother, the S-350, $99 US or $99 Canadian.

* They were called Radio shack until a lawsuit between Tandy and InterTAN, now they are The Source by Circuit City, but that is too damn long to say.

P.S. It is nice to see the tables turned once in a while, we usually get ripped off big time on any consumer electronics here, with resellers applying the same markup with respect to US prices that they used to apply when the Canadian dollar was worth 20% less than it is now, because everyone's used to getting the shaft.

The only really reliable HF Broadcast I get are the Asian transmitters early in the West Coast morning. R. Australia used to be a fave,

This one does not smell like a "shill-bid setup" to me.
More like a feeding frenzy as the R-1000 was not a common radio (low production numbers) and the one shown looks to be in near-mint and well kept.

Like most e-bay ham and related auctions the price is way overblown. The most I would pay for an Kenwood R-1000 would be $250 in mint shape or $165.00 worn and well used.

Again, this don't look like a shill-bid situation.
The clear tipoff to a classic ham radio dealer shill-auction is bids where 30% or more of the total bids are "Undisclosed Bidders" on the Bid History.

I would not touch ANY e-Bay auction that has 'undisclosed' bids at any time with a 20' Lineman's Hotstick pole in rubber gloves.
Anyone who does is asking to be taken as such are RAMPANT in the Ham Radio categories on e-Bay and are exclusively run by ex-hamfest dealers who will steal you blind in a heartbeat.

Don't think cheesy really applies to that radio. I understand it is very well finished and the controls are precise for an analog radio and smooth in operation. It would be fun to use, but the price of $3,000 puts it way outside of the realm of what I would call a user radio.
Someone who like Sony things will undoubtedly put it on a shelf. There are numerous other radios with the same feel and reception ability for far less.

That's a neat little radio. The Philips are hard to come by in the states or harder at least.

I lived on the west coast for the better part of my life and I got fairly good reception but then again I spent a lot of time on my ant's. You would have went " WOW nice!!" I had four long wires and two inverted Vs and a Eves Dropper type of tuned dipole I made. I was lucky to have the ground for it all. I live here in Southern MN now and I do like getting the increased signal gain that this region has an advantage of in regards to European DX and the low power pirate ops etc... The bottom line is a good ant is the #1 priority. It takes work and experimentation to get your ant right and most neglect it because it is work.

A few weeks ago they were going for around $200-$250, when a few were up for auction at any given time. Then a week and a half went by with none available, followed by two in excellent condition (this one being practically new-look at the color of the pushbuttons). For a collector of pristine equipment, I can see it. Not for anyone else.

I dunno....collectors seem to have a wide range of acceptable value <vbg>.
I've seen the 320 fetch 2500 + on Ebay, the Panasonic RF9000 go for close to $4k, Sony 6800 go for $1k, and so forth. All nice radios, but collectors will bid one out of sight if it will complete a collection or if it comes with all important goodies like original box, instructions, hang tags, etc.

Yeah, I love to mess around with wire antennas. I really have no room at all for it because I live in an apartment. However, I'm blessed because the management company that oversees my building doesn't seem to care what I do or what I put on the roof. So, I've been going up on the roof periodically to experiment with long runs of wire. Eventually, I'm going to get at least one 200 ft random wire antenna up there. The key will be to get it 15 ft or so above the roof, so that it's clear of the building's noise envelope. There's some exposed structural steel up there that should make an excellent ground.

I have a Wellbrook 330S loop and I'm very happy with it, but I can't lose itch to mess around with wire once in a while.

That's cool. I don't have as much room as I did out there but I do have 70' pine trees so I ran a wire 50' across the yard and strait up the trunk to about 10' from the top of the tallest tree so I guess I got about 110' there and I did the same with the other tree but about 30' less. they run almost 90 degrees from one and other so I switch between the two for best reception. Contrary to what some think, you can bend long wires around your QTH. Steve Lare I think has a bent long wire and he reports great results with his setup.

I can easily out do you with near zero effort by just looking at the news group filters. No Googling needed.

You just just kill file Cuhulin with any follow up to him and 90% of the off topic nonsense posts go away. Kill file three others and you get rid of about 99% so just taking out 4 people and the news group looks civilized and on topic in general. That is all the effort it takes nothing more.

No, two wires. One is 70' and runs N-S, and the other is 200' and runs W-E. Both are transformer matched.

Current listening to NASCAR race at Indianapolis on 15,285 that started just a bit ago.

Maybe someone can explain why the race is on a religious broadcaster with AMBCB type commercial breaks. I have heard several WHR ID's during the broadcast so far.

And it's 1000% functional so that would make it 10 times better than new!

It looks pretty and in perfect shape but what makes this radio worth $2,250? The CRF320 supposed to be an exceptional performer?

The one in the foreground is the 200' (at the time the pic was taken it was 100'. In the background you can see one of the supports for the 70' wire.

For a collector, I could see $300, or MAYBE even $400. These two brand-new ebay members have bid this up to over $500! No way this is real, or at least these are not bids by people that know anything about the used radio market.

I don't like the fact that one bidder has moved the price from $301 to $510 by himself. This looks fishy.

Dear Mr. Telamon,
Thank you for asking about my DXing life. At this time all of my big SW radios are in the Philippines waiting for me. I'll have to work out the longwires when I get there. I will be totally dependent on SW for all my entertainment.

At this time I have the YB400 from my briefcase to use and my BC 245. Mostly I keep the BC245 on.

Again Mr. Telamon, I want to thank you for inquiring about my radio life.

Not hard to do. You'd have to read up on how the bidding process works.

I'll be looking forward to reception reports from you when you get there.

So if you only have portables on the west coast I expect that you are mostly listening evenings and early mornings. The propagation have been variable of late and I wanted to know what you have been listening to and how your reception has been.

Most people reading the news group want to know, that's why we read the news group so no thanks necessary.

> PS: If you don't like others post then don't open them!!!

The computer shows me what I want to see depending on how I program it so I don't have to see, evaluate and then decide what posts I want to read every time I down new posts. Lately filters have been auto deleting about two thirds of the posts to RRS. This saves time and effort, which is what the computer is supposed to do for you.

Well yeah I can understand how it can happen. A person just keeps putting in another bid but why? I can only speculate as to the reason.
Maybe the guy is doing this to off put other bidders but it does not look right to me because he has nearly doubled the price and established a bidding trend. Based on what he has done I can predict his next bid.

Another difference is that dxAce has his ~ 9 foot off the ground and Brian is up 60 to 70 foot in the air so Brian's wire should pick up more signal theoretically but dxAce's wires will have a lower noise floor.
dxAce reports using the pre-amp rarely if ever so his antennas pick up enough signal.

Yeah I did vote for Ross Perot once.

So what do I have to do to solve the number puzzle in a text based news group that you intimate is related to SW radio? If I connect the dots do I get a picture of a R75 or the schematic to a TT?

It looks like off topic BS to me. If someone were reporting the numbers that they heard on a SW frequency then where is the time, frequency and other related information along with whom they think might be the sender?

This is a news group not the mystery channel.

I think Cahooglin is such a strange character that some can't resist the interaction with him. He's the only person I ever kill filed and for only one reason and that's his disrespect of women. He's a retch and needs a primitive education that can only be conducted out behind a barn or a wood pile.

Does the Canadian version include an AC adapter and the headphones as advertised with the US version? I looked at www.thesourcecc.com catalog number 2019501 and it only shows the radio in the product description with no other items listed.

Does the S350DL sound a lot better than the original S350 with the smaller speaker? I would like to get the Tecsun BCL 3000 version that still has the smaller 4" speaker.

That was obviously taken before cuhulin moved in, as there are no abandoned refrigerators or derelict cars on the property. I'd love to see something more current.

The difference between you and me, cuhulin, is that I base everything I say about you on posts that you yourself have made. You, on the other hand, are forced to make things up.

Yes you do. Making a piece of electronic equipment on sale at a local

I believe the play here is that the shills bid it up, then the seller contacts the next-highest bidder and offers to sell it off eBay (since the high bidder "backed out"), for that seller's high bid. That way, there is no PayPal buyer protection or negative feedback that can be left.

Right John

This one guy guy just joined Aug.4th. Now he could have just joined for this auction. The thing is, even though it looks like shill bidding at first glance, I doubt it is. If this is a shill bidder, he went haywire and lost all control! No one is going to outbid this guy and pay so much for a R-1000. I know some collectors will but I doubt this guy is a collector.

But, yes, sometimes I'm amazed at the prices some of these older radios go for.
But you know what? At this point in my life I can understand it now. Life is short and may get even shorter with the way this world is politically. Anything could go down and who knows what.

So, if paying 5 or 6 bills for this radio is going to bring happiness and joy into this guys life, it's worth it to him and that's that.

I never, ever, ever will pay a radio off someone unless they take Paypal for credit cards or just credit cards alone. If the person is honest, and knows he has a good working radio, and he sees you have good feedback too, there is NO reason he would be scared to take a CC.

It protects all parties except a scam artist.
Me like a dummy was so tempted by a new Lowe HF-250 last week, I was ready to send off cash to some guy in Germany for it. Yes he had great feedback, but as much as I wanted the rig, and even watched acution to completion, I never bid on it.

So if they don't take a credit cards, and the radio is over $80, then no go.

I agree Steve,

he also doesn't count Jews as "white people" I now sees he hates everyone.
So, I see who he is truly is. He's nothing but a racist bigot who only loves himself.
But you know what? He hates himself. It shows in how bitter he is.

I surely wouldn't want to be his friend or neighbor. I wouldn't stop for him if he needed any sort of help. I would just keep on going.

His life is comprised of hate and I now see this and realize what kind of a person that is. No one likes that kind of person and he'll never get along in the world. He likes no one and no one likes him. It's OK to criticize things when there really is problem, but in this case david is the problem.

I won't waste typing his name in capital letters. To me, he's now a little nobody, a nothing. All he is a talking, hating, bitter, lonely, unhappy sack of putrefaction and guess what? He knows it deep inside.
He makes me depressed every time I read one of his posts which may not be for much longer.

BUT, he serves as a perfect example of what NOT to be in life. He truly is sickening. Truly....

A few weeks ago,I wanted to buy something from www.geeks.com geeks.com doesn't have a toll free phone number (if they have one now,they didn't have one a few weeks ago and I will not waste my time to check out their website again) and they only had a few of the items in stock.So I emailed geeks.com about the item I wanted to buy.I never did get an email reply from geeks.com Any company like that,that doesn't at least have a toll free phone number is not worth dong business with,in my opinion.I understand all the jazz about toll free phone numbers and perhaps geeks.com can't have somebody sitting around there to pick up the phone to reply to a toll free phone call,but if they can reply to a local or long distance non toll free phone call,they can certainly reply to a toll free phone call,it doesn't cost all that much money to have a toll free phone number.geeks.com lost a sale of about $85.00 to me.

Very bad famine reported with (as usual) too late international aide.
Anyone hearing radio from the area that's not the BBC? Expect this might be in French.

Well that is one take on him but I don't know if I agree with it. I think some people have self respect and socialization issues where they just don't know how to post something intelligent or topical. I think posting stupid off topic stuff just to get a reaction is the goal since they don't know what to do otherwise. This does not mean he acts out what he posts here away from the keyboard.

Not being able to post on topic is the equivalent of not being able to figure out a device works so they just start bashing it reducing it to useless rubble.

I've seen people just dump the trash out of their car into the street or parking lot right next to trash cans. Some people just don't want to behave. You would normally stay away from this sort of person so why do you and others interact with them in the news group is a mystery to me.

What is it called if somebody puts something (a radio,for instance) on ebay and starts a bidding price and then he or she uses a different name at a different computer with a different IP address? To keep driving up the price more than the item or items are worth.Does that sort of thing happen much on ebay? Frankly,I dont like auctions at all.

It's supposed to be a high tube count radio with very nice sound. As a program listener that means a lot to me. It has many tuning features and is one of the top tube radios to own. You are one lucky guy to own that radio.

Nigeria does, and in English. Nigeria is to the south of Niger. Channel Africa (South Africa) might be another good source, if you can hear it (probably better on the east coast of USA). France and Germany have extensive Africa services in English. Again, reception will be better on the east coast.

Golly Doctor Hartley, you sure are swell. I'm talking about The Chinese and Taiwanese and Japanese radio stations, not the people.

''Ethnicity and "race"

A stylised Mediï¿½val world map, depicting Asia as the home of the descendents of Shem (Sem). Africa is ascribed to Ham and Europe to JaphethIn Medieval Europe all Asian peoples were thought of as descendents of Shem. By the nineteenth century the term Semitic was confined to the ethnic groups who have historically spoken Semitic languages. These peoples were often considered to be a distinct race.
However, some anti-Semitic racial theorists of the time argued that the Semitic peoples arose from the blurring of distinctions between previously separate races. This supposed process was referred to as Semiticization by the race-theorist Arthur de Gobineau. The notion that Semitic identity was a product of racial "confusion" was later taken up by the Nazi ideologue Alfred Rosenberg.

Modern science, in contrast, identifies an ethnic group's common physical descent through genetic research. Though in genetic research no significant common mitochondrial results have been yielded, genetic Y-chromosome links between Near-Eastern peoples like the Palestinians, Syrians and ethnic Jews have proved fruitful (see Y-chromosomal Aaron). While population genetics is still a young science, it seems to indicate that a significant proportion of these peoples' ancestry comes from a common Near Eastern population to which (despite the differences with the Biblical genealogy) the term Semitic has been applied.''

You sure are wrapped up in the notion of race, aren't you? It obviously means a great deal to you to be able to fit everyone neatly into the right racial 'category'.

I might be incorrect, but it looks like the guy bid against himself. It seems this might be his first time bidding in an auction on EBay.

He obviously has his heart set on getting this radio!

For One and All,

What's next after the Grunidg Satellit 800 Millennium ?

Now that the Eton E1 AM/FM Shortwave Receiver with XM Satellite Radio has come to market and is "Assembled in India".
ETON E1 => http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ETON-E1-XM-Radio/

Has Eton Corp begain work on a newer 'undated' Grunidg Satellit 800 Millennium Receiver ?

Will it bear the "Grundig" Brand Name ?

Or will it bear the "Eton" Brand Name and be called the Eton {Elite Series} "E2" AM/FM Shortwave Receiver and feature "DRM" Digital Radio Mondiale reception ?

In the Future - What will becoming off the Tecsun GEM assembly line in China (PRC) to replace the Grunidg Satellit 800 Millennium "Big Box Receiver" ?

I don't think that would help. I'm not sure about him. Sometimes I think he's a deep troll, other times I think he's a not-so-deep idiot.

But I -always- think of him as my bitch. ;)

The E1 is assembled in India? Wow, even Chinese workers are getting their jobs outsourced now.

I wonder what the quality control is like. Tecsun and Degen were just getting to be pretty decent quality. I imagine the E1 will have a lot of QC issues.

The Chinese are sitting on $200 Billion of US dollars which are becoming increasingly worthless. First they bought the British automaker ROVER, then tried to get Unocal, and now are talking to Marconi Communications, the Brit defense contractor.

See all those plastic doodads in your closets? See all those Chinese-made clothes?
How about TVs and stereos? That's how they'll end up owning everything!

Grundig AG is in a state of reoganization and coming back with a vengeance in the other hemisphere in matters of consumer and commercial electronics. Their product lines are thin, right now, but R & D is working overtime, with a good number of products in production and more in the pipeline, with heavy focus on digital entertainment, and digital management. Given their sharp thumbs down on Sat 800, and the acquisition of the North American distributorship by Eton, it may be unlikely that the Grundig name will appear on non Grundig products for awhile, especially as Grundig finds their way anew. Eton, after all, has a vested interest in promoting the Eton brand. And Grundig would be a competitive brand in the marketplace.

E1 would have been The Next Big Grundig, had Eton not acquired the distributorship.

As far as the Tecsun line goes...keep in mind that Tecsun fielded a number of products that ended up on US shores that had been wearing the Grundig badge in North America. Ham 2000 came over here, through whatever channels, while Sat 800 was on the shelves. And the Tecsun badge is on thousands of radios that would be carrying the S350 designation in North America, again, through whatever channels doesn't matter. It's here. If they didn't want it to be here, it wouldn't be flowing in with such strong nubers. There were/are a number other examples as well. That's a pretty strong lesson for Lex/Eton to swallow. Especially after all the misdirection, hype, and disinformation about the radios' lineage, and implications of unique design, these badge engineered versions are not a marketing company's idea of a fun ride.

And in light of PRC's disregard for patent, copyright and intellectual property rights, even among allies, that can be a very nasty pill indeed.

The real tale is told in the fact that E1 is built in India.

What's next? Yes, that IS an interesting question.

Problem is, everything is now made in China, so we really have no alternative. Want a new TV? All of them are made in Shenzhen. Want a new fridge? It's made in Qingdao. Clothes wear out? Your new ones are made in a Chinese sweatshop. Who decided to place the world's manufacturing capacity in a country that may become unstable in the future, that is run by a tyrannical dictatorship that nearly was overthrown by a religion? Not me. It was the big megacorporations that control everything in our lives. THEY are authoritarian organizations run by men who wield absolute power over their realms, who are more powerful than the President and who treat their employees like plantation slaves. They answer to nobody, and they only care about easy profits. They ruin the economies of whole countries-including America-in pursuit of the almighty dollar. They place the world's manufacturing capacity in a single country, and the world's intellectual property in another single country, because that's where the costs are cheapest. What happens if the CCP collapses, setting off major shortages of nearly everything? Not their problem; they've already gotten their money. When are we going to hold the big corporations accountable for what they do? When are we going to demand that they start placing people above greed? When are we going to demand that they let go of the stranglehold they have on our lives? I don't care if I sound like a commie. A few dozen big companies hold the world hostage and create trade and economic imbalances that threaten to bring capitalism to its knees, all for easy money. It doesn't matter who we vote for, they're bought and paid for.

Can't bid against yourself. (unless you're using two accounts). You can keep raising your bid, but the bid that shows is only the one that beats the last bid of the other bidder.

What I suspect is happening is that the other bidder (whom he topped with his last bid) was 'feeling' for his high bid to try to get the bid as cheaply as he could. I've done this myself (usually unsuccessfully).

You can always go to these broadcasters web sites to get their the latest schedules.

Cuba Canada
North and south Korea
Japan
China
Thailand
Australia
New Zealand
Netherlands England
Russia

These are just some of the countries that broadcast in english on SW.

For schedules in general you can Google for them. Here is an example

Here I have found surveys in Language, Frequency, Station order.

The Programme Guide in English seems to be under construction, because some program schedules are not current...

Don't you think it is kind of odd that the cardboard box could be more valuable than the item itself.

How decent is the 330S for BCB listening? Passport says that it's better than it used to be down there, but the Wellbrook website doesn't claim the entire BCB band for the 330S. I'm rather curious, since I'll eventually have to give up my 50' wire to plant a tree in the backyard, and one option is going with an active loop for the space.

Newsweek
Aug. 15, 2005 issue - The departure this week of Deputy Attorney General James Comey, who has accepted the post of general counsel at Lockheed Martin, leaves a question mark in the probe into who leaked the identity of CIA operative Valerie Plame. Comey was the only official overseeing special counsel Patrick Fitzgerald's leak investigation. With Attorney General Alberto Gonzales recused, department officials say they are still trying to resolve whom Fitzgerald will now report to. Associate Attorney General Robert McCallum is "likely" to be named as acting deputy A.G., a DOJ official who asked not to be identified because of the sensitivity of the matter tells NEWSWEEK. But McCallum may be seen as having his own conflicts: he is an old friend of President Bush's and a member of his Skull and Bones class at Yale. One question: how much authority Comey's successor will have over Fitzgerald. When Comey appointed Fitzgerald in 2003, the deputy granted him extraordinary powers to act however he saw fitï¿½but noted he still had the right to revoke Fitzgerald's authority. The questions are pertinent because lawyers close to the case believe the probe is in its final stages. Fitzgerald recently called White House aide Karl Rove's secretary and his former top aide to testify before the grand jury. They were asked why there was no record of a phone call from Time reporter Matt Cooper, with whom Rove discussed the CIA agent, says a source close to Rove who requested anonymity because the FBI asked participants not to comment. The source says the call went through the White House switchboard, not directly to Rove.

Hi,

Just picked up a Sony SRF-A100 at a flea market for $6 in, amazingly, perfect working order. After about an hour of fine-tuning and listening, and tweaking, and more listening, finally confirmed WBAP, Ft. Worth, Texas, in C-QUAM mode AM stereo. It was the commercials that gave them away- all the sound effects were in perfect stereo.

After some Googling I've come to the conclusion there is no other place on usenet where mediumwave dx is being discussed- is that an accurate finding?

Cheers.

If you mean MW listening as opposed to MW DX-ing, the 330S should be fine. In fact, given your location, you could probably use something a little less sensitive on MW.

years.Their website is www.antiquetrader.com I once read in Antique Trader some antique toy boxes are worth more than the toys themselves.Think about it,most people who bought toys many years ago didn't bother to hang on to the boxes.That means the boxes are worth a lot of money,of course that depends on what sort of condition the boxes are in.Whether that holds true for radio boxes or not,the article did not say.Actually,for something to be considered a real antique,(according to Antique Trader) the item or items,must be at least 100 years old or older.

There's a school of thought which maintains that, no matter what foolish price you paid for certain uptrendy priced radios, there will always be somebody who will pay even more when the radio is resold. People who believe such things can "invest" their meal money and home down payments without worry.

Owning several Collins radios might constitue a nice retirement fund. Well, that and a large supply of well-heeled future "investors" who really want to own expensive old radios.

Yes, antique trader is interesting, I usually while away the time reading a free one between bids at the auction house. I don't doubt that boxes are important to some collectors - the toy guy on Antiques Road show makes that point almopst every monday evening.

I do believe there are collectors for just about anything. Ice cream scoops, electric fans, can openers, you name it. On the way to the Delaware shore a few years back we stopped at McDonalds for a bite.
That was when the Beanie Baby craze was taking hold. There were people standing in line to give repeat orders and to get a shot at one more free little doll. That craziness went on for maybe 3 years? Supply finally exceeded demand and the extraordinary behavior and madness of the beanie baby crowd finally subsided.

I don't believe that the above is true... The name of the "next-highest bidder" came from eBay and eBay calls this type of transaction a "second chance" offer, with all the rights, privileges and protection that that the highest bidder has. Also, the price in this case is what the second highest bidder offered, not the first highest. However, if someone does offer you something "off eBay", watch out!

I always look at the toys at the Goodwill thrift store.(I am going there in about an hour) Sometimes I find one or two collectible toys and sometimes new toys that I just happen to like and I buy them.I own a bunch of old electric fans,some of them are large table models and some of them are much smaller table models,one of them is a very old brass blade rare electric fan and they all still work just fine too.Those new electric fans made in China fans nowdays aren't worth a hoot.The big old electric fan that I am useing on the end table by the other end of my couch is an old Hunter electric fan,it stll runs just as good as brand new.It was made in Memphis,Tennessee,I think it dates back to the 1940's.I own a few old collectible icecream scoops too.Some of my old toys date back to around 1900 or not much later than that.I like to collect all kinds of very old things.I have been collecting old things since I was a boy,I just can't throw good junk away.Some of those ebayers would have fit if they saw my old collectible things.There is one elderly woman in paticular who sells old things at a fleamarket in the Jackson area (there are a bunch of fleamarkets around here) and she wants to tour inside of my house so bad and she wants to buy my old things at cheap prices (my old radios too,, NO SALE!,Vicky,I dont get rid of my old things!) she has a kaniption fit! Which article....seems to have disappeared.

The Energy Bill does extend the DST window to create some imaginary energy savings. I don't think the change will have any impact on radio listening since we use zulu time to track schedules. Your computer OS will have to be reconfigured for the new dates, but that's about it.

The politicians will get some milage from this pork barrel bill that really does very little to actually conserve energy. The individual energy tax credits part of this bill are positively byzantine in their complexity while having only a minute impact on individual tax bills.

I may eventually get into MW DX-ing, but right now, my concern is picking up WHIO 1360, about 50-60 miles north, during college basketball season. At nighttime, I'm picking up interference from a KY station, and I'll Actually, I mean 1290 WHIO; had 1360 on right now at home. Brain fart.

I've listened to their stream before, and it seems to cut out every 15-20 seconds for something like 0.5 seconds at a time. It's not very conducive to listening to a basketball game; I find myself grumbling at the feed more than listening to the game.

Because (like 4th graders), they are insecure with their own sexuality, and they consider it a major insult. Something along the lines of "'tard" and "tote". In truth, it tells us quite a bit about the person using such terms.

I bought three big heavy old movie projectors and two large empty film spools and one large film can that is about 17 inches in diameter at the Goodwill thrift store this afternoon.I paid $20.00 plus Mississippi RIPP OFF sales taxes for all of the items.Inside of the film can is a film,Martin Luther,(that is what the label on the film can cover says) total running time 105 minutes.Two of the old movie projectors were made by Kodak (so was the Martin Luther film on black and white safe film) and the other big old heavy (they each weigh about 35 pounds or more,I think) movie projector was made by Bell & Howell.One of the Kodak movie projectors looks to me like it dates back to the late 1940's and on the Bell & Howell movie projector is a label which says,Christians With A Mission.Congregational Methodist Church.I might be interested in selling or trading the items for something I like.Just because I paid $20.00 plus Mississippi RIPP OFF sales taxes for the items doesn't mean I will sell them cheap or trade them for something cheap because I know they are worth a considerable amount of money.There might be some similar items for sell on eBay.I have no idea of what the items are worth but I am going to find out first before I would get rid of them.

A country of southwest Asia. Site of a number of flourishing ancient Mesopotamian civilizations, Iraq fell to the Arabs (7th century) and later to the Ottoman Turks (16th century). It was established as an independent kingdom in 1921 and became a republic after the assassination (1958) of Faisal II. Baghdad is the capital and largest city. Population, 15,584,987.

Do you think those SOB's will be any better off next year then they were last year???

I don't think we should be there, I wrote Bush saying that before we went, I would hope we would put out in a months notice (or less).

Yes I do.
And you didn't answer the question.
Are you proud of the direction this country is heading?
Are you happy defending bush sr. with the lives of our youth?
Are you content with the invasion of Iraq, knowing full well that there were never any WMD, and that Ossama was responsible for 9/11, yet we choose to concentrate on Saddam?
Tell me what is so wonderful about the republican party, is it rove?
The man uses semantics to worm his way through something that if Kerry had done the same thing you would be screaming for his execution.
It is so easy to sit back in your comfortable life, unaffected in any real way by this war, and promulgate how wonderful life is here, in these United States.

Yea there 15 tube and nice sounding (PP 6V6s) and good performers for a a.. Passwords for ILGRadio are not available for those who are using a freemail (freemailer) e-mail address (e.g. hotmail, yahoo, altavista, bigfoot, netscape, usa.com, hotbot, gmx, web.de, freenet.de, ...) From these freemailers (some of them are selling e-mail addresses to commercial SPAMERS) we received a lot of unwanted SPAM MAILS during the past without stopping. Therefore we don't wish to receive any mail from those providers !

Well yes, at least from Libya, Radio Jamahiriyah... but that was when they actually transmitted from Libya. Currently it seems to be France.

The real impact to SW listeners is that listening schedules will be thrown off for a few weeks. SW stations use European time standards in deciding when to switch to summer time. If DST is a few weeks earlier and a few weeks later than European DST, then your favorite programs will come on an hour earlier or later your local time. For example, The World Today comes on at 0300 UTC winter and 0200 UTC summer. This means that it always comes on at 10pm Eastern time, regardless of season. What this means is that it will be on at 9pm or 11pm for a few weeks.

The original point being that to get Ebay to recognize the second bid and to obtain whatever protection Ebay offers the seller would have to go through the steps of cancelling the sale.

The second-highest bidder never just "kicks in". If the seller wishes to offer it formally through eBay to the next-highest bidder, he can send a Second Chance offer, which the buyer may choose to accept or decline.

However, the seller/scammer may also take his new list of potential buyers and offer the item to one or all of them privately, giving a story about deadbeat bidder, the guy died, whatever. The mark thinks he has lucked out and sends his money, but receives something that is far different than what was listed (in this case, perhaps, a totally non-working radio). Since the deal went down outside of eBay, the seller is stuck with no recourse; no PayPal Buyer Protection, or opportunity to even leave negative feedback. It's an old trick.

In any case, since this R-1000 closed at $610, something fishy definitely went down. These are great radios (I have one myself) but they aren't very rare and certainly aren't worth that kind of money. It could be simply seller's remorse. Decided he didn't want to sell it after all but already had bids, so just had his buddies bid it up and out.

Boundaries of Iraq and other mid-east countries were drawn up by Britain and France. Who then played nice with the dictator/king etc. More meddling does not look like it will fix it, or at least not soon. I saw a horrifying look at Turkmenistan by CBC/Australian BC yesterday. Shouldn't be playing nice with folks such as their dictator either or there will be another bad situation in the future with more terrorists. I agree with your post, except about the voting part. Pessimistically, I don't think it makes any difference who is running the show, and b/c I'm not a USA voter.

In just one month, this group has grown to 73 members with a pretty lively forum - the archive of 160 on-topic messages is publicly visible. Several members are actively experimenting with a variety of homebrew sync AM detectors. The member-only links, files and photos sections have grown to have a respectable body of reference material.

Check it out - your old receiver might get a new lease on life with an add-on sync AM detector for better audio quality and sensitivity and you'll have some fun doing it! Seasoned sync AM users/designers/experimenters - your expertise and experience couldn't go into a better group.

Well no. I've posted things in both of these newsgroups about the topic, and I'd say you're missing whole areas of the bibliography. I sure have no interest in joining some "club".

And if you were so interested in moving the topic ahead, you'd stay away from those "members only links and files".

By isolating yourselves, you lose out.

I wish it was an original Bambi film in very good to excellent condition.Oviously the film can is old,it has that been used many,many times before look to it and some of the paint is worn off from being handled so many times before and there is no zip code on the label so that dates the film and the film can to about 1966 or earlier.The label on the film can says,This Can Contains Black And White Safety Film.One 16 mm Print of Martin Luther.2 Reels Each 2000 FT.(I just now checked inside the film can,there are two reels of film inside of the film can) Total Showing Time 105 Minutes.The " MARTIN LUTHER " Film.Produced by Louis de Rochemont Associates For Lutheran Church Productions,Inc.35 West 45th St.New York,New York.IMPORTANT.1.Lutheran Church Productions,Inc.retains copyright ownership of all material herein including photography,sound track,and screenplay of Martin Luther; thus ownership of this print as a result of purchase technically constitutes ownership of a lifetime lease of the motion picture.2.This film cannot be broadcast via television.3.This film cannot be rented.4.This film cannot be changed in any way by deletions,except as a result of film damage,or by the addition of new materials.5.This film cannot be used or exported beyond the continental limits of the United States without specific clearance from the producer.6.For cleaning and film repair service,contact your film dealer or nearest camera shop.7.For replacement sections write to Lutheran Church Productions or consult your dealer.I would like to find out what the film is worth assuming it is still in good condition.I own a couple of old portable movie screens,I guess I could see for myself if it is still in good condition.

That's a Yahoo 'feature' over which we have no control. (Actually, on checking, the Links can be made public but many of them point to the member-only files and photos) other 10 replies... er...

I usually have trouble distinguishing co-frequency stations in the muck, but through an AM stereo receiver, One will appear in a different spot in the stereo image from the other, making them quite easy to discriminate. It's really rejuventated my interest. I'll have to get

I sent a reception report to the Libya address and to their Malta address on December 16, 2002. Received a personal letter February 4, 2003 via registered mail (at least I had to sign for it at the post office). While the letter does not verify my reception exactly, it does mention "your following-up programmes of voice of Africa and also your notices." And it was signed by someone at "Listeners affairs". Over the following months they also sent a tourism booklet, a tourism CD/DVD, and another piece I forgot what. Each envelope also contained a reception report form printed on heavy, glossy, green paper. It's not a place I want to visit, but you're right about the nice colorful stamps.

FBI Tracks Right-Wing Terrorists

US News & World Report/Danielle Knight | August 8 2005

When FBI agents raided the home and storage facilities of William Krar in Noonday, a small town in East Texas, two years ago, they stumbled upon a small arsenal. There were about 2 pounds of deadly sodium cyanide, 65 pipe bombs and several remote-control briefcase bombs. They also recovered more than 500,000 rounds of ammunition and a collection of white supremacist books. If mixed with some of the other chemicals Krar had, the cyanide compound could have created enough poison gas to kill everyone inside a large office building.

In the decade since the 1995 bombing of Oklahoma City's Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, local police and federal agents have foiled roughly 60 right-wing extremist terrorist plots, according to the Southern Poverty Law Center's Intelligence Project. While homeland security and intelligence officials understandably focus today on terrorism threats from abroad, hate-group experts say the danger from homegrown extremists like Krar, now in federal prison, shouldn't be ignored. "The fact that the only chemical weapon incident in the United States involved a domestic extremist suggests that domestic terrorism is still a serious threat," says Mark Pitcavage, director of fact finding at the Anti-Defamation League. The Southern Poverty Law Center's estimates that 762 extremist right-wing hate groups were active in the United States last year, up slightly from the 751 groups tallied the year before.

Loners. Last April, a strategy paper on domestic and international terrorism threats prepared by the Department of Homeland Security was leaked to the press. The paper listed radical leftist groups, such as the Animal Liberation Front and the Earth Liberation Front, but there wasn't a single word about right-wing militia or extremist groups. Rep. Bennie Thompson of Mississippi, the ranking Democrat on the House Committee on Homeland Security, says the DHS must focus more intently on right-wing groups. "The department's responsibility includes protecting the homeland from domestic terrorists," Thompson says. "And that should mean all domestic terrorists, not just some of them."

The DHS says that its strategy paper wasn't a comprehensive assessment of the risk of domestic terrorism. "We remain concerned about all threats," says Katy Montgomery, a DHS spokeswoman. Communication between her department and the FBI has improved significantly since 9/11, Montgomery says, and the two agencies frequently issue joint information bulletins to state and local law enforcement agencies.

The relationship between the two agencies isn't quite as good as it could be, however, others say. Mike German, a former special agent with the FBI who specialized in domestic counterterrorism, says he seriously doubts whether the bureau is sharing its best information with DHS. German learned how right-wing extremist groups operate firsthand as an undercover agent who infiltrated several white supremacist organizations. Radicals like Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh are often mistakenly seen by the FBI as "lone wolf extremists," German says. But "lone extremism" is a technique taught by some white supremacist groups, he adds: "Unless you see this as an ongoing conspiracy, you aren't going to be out front to prevent the next attack."

German resigned from the FBI last year after criticizing these and other alleged management problems in the FBI's counterterrorism program. The Justice Department's inspector general is investigating his claims. Ed Cogswell, a spokesman for the FBI, says the bureau cannot comment because of the pending inquiry. But the FBI, Cogswell says, considers both left- and right-wing domestic terrorism groups to be serious challenges. "Extremist groups," he says, "are difficult to track."

The difficulty is not hard to understand--and sometimes it just takes a bit of luck to stop a violent radical bent on trouble. Catching Krar, for example, wasn't the result of great detective work. After a package of bogus identification documents he mailed wound up at the wrong address, the unwitting recipient alerted authorities. FBI agents went to the return address Krar had scrawled on the package. As soon as they found the cache of weapons, they slapped the cuffs on him.

Hi, I'm a British citizen based near Cheltenham, UK. I'm trying to find a newsgroup to discuss shortwave DXing, but this newsgroup seems to be full of American politics. I'm not American, I don't plan on being American, so this is just irritating noise to me, and what with me having neither the ability nor desire to vote in the USA, I doubt that the political posters care about me one jot. Also I don't DX American stations, I prefer European, African or Asian stations (US stations seem mostly religious and I'm a humanist [agnostic/atheiest with morals] so that all goes over my head).

What other DXing newsgroups exist on Usenet? Is there one more skewed towards European, African or Asian DXing?

(Don't get me wrong; America is a lovely place, been there on business and holiday several times, nice people etc. I'm just not interested and democratically unable to be involved with the politics, and have no interest in religion).

Hi There,

I was curious to try the short wave radio listening so I went for my old and very cheapo Sony CFM-140L casette-recorder unit (16m; 19m; 21m; 25m; 31m; 41m; 49m). I don't remember how much it cost, but sure it was well below $30.00 I got a 1.5mm diameter coated wire "plugged" atop of the radio antenna, it was around 30 feet long (it, somehow, improved a wee bit the radio reception. No wonders though).

Later I switched to the SW dial and I started to tune stations using the main manual dial and the fine dial knobs, reaching to listen to the following stations, not without big efforts using those analogic knobs:

#1 RFI - French - France
#2 BBC World Service - English - United Kingdom
#3 DOA News - English - USA
#4 Radio Canada Internacional - Spanish - Canada
#5 World Wide Christian Radio - English - USA
#6 Radio Bulgaria - Spanish - Bulgaria
#7 kilo - papa - alpha - two -> What was that?
#8 Radio Internacional de China - Spanish - Vhina
#9 Radio Exterieur d'Espagne - French - Spain
#10 Radio Exterior de Espa&#65533;a - English - Spain
#11 CBC News - English - Canada
#12 Radio Rumania Internacional - Spanish - Rumania
#13 Radio Netherlands - Spanish - The Netherlands
#14 Canada International - English - Canda
#15 Radio Japan - English - Japan
#16 Radio Slovakia International - English - Slovakia

The above list was collected after four hours of discontinued listening; besides those, I was able to listen to a few more stations from Moldova, Colombia, ... a station which appeared to broadcast a "repetitive nanny song" in clock intervals of around 15 seconds and 5 mute. Other stations which broadcasted "noise" and a plethora of stations bradcasting in German and Arabic (many many stations!).

Almost all the radio programs were radiating news, all stations seemed to bradcast the same news despite being all from different countries. That's globalization! Although I find amusing to being able to listen to all those stations I must confess that listening only to news is really bothersome! The exception being, perhaps, Radio Internacional de China which had a varied grill.

Therefore, as a naive short wave listener I would like to know whether using this dial all I will find will be news, always the same all over again the same day, or whether there are wider program grills. Moreover, from the list of stations I heard can sombody advise me on whether buying new equipment (receiver plus antena?) I will be able to pick up more stations? Something below $100.00, even if it is second hand.

Eventually, as I am a completely novice in SW I would like to listen to all your advices concerning radio equipment (cheapo!), stations to listen to (English; French; Spanish), prime times, ...

Keep it up!

The older Sony sets were neat because you could switch between decoding systems ... which sometimes helped in using them as AM DX sets rather than just stereo receivers. Problem is, as you've discovered, there is less and less stereo broadcasting to listen to. I wonder what's happening in Japan, where AM stereo was booming and there were multiple receivers on the market (including super digital portables from Sony and AIWA). Those sets are off the market and they don't seem to have replaced them.

Please note that some of our amplifiers have an additional lead time.

ALC-1320 $14275.

Options at extra charge to the ALC-1320.
Option # 1 cw/Base : $3026
Option # 2 cw/Tripod : $3026
Option # 3. cw/Power supply $869

I don't think I'll pick one of these up anytime soon!

Hi there,

You might want to pick up a copy of the Passport to World Band Radio. The 2006 edition is out now, I think (someone correct me if I'm wrong here). You can find it at Barnes & Noble or Amazon. It lists all kinds of shortwave radio shows, many of which contain programs of special interest and music from all over the world. There are a lot of news programs on shortwave, but there is a lot of other interesting stuff too.

As far as cheapo shortwave radios that perform decently, check out the Degen DE-1103 or Degen DE-1102 (a/k/a Kaito KA-1103 and Kaito KA-1102). You can find these on eBay, and the seller with the best service and prices is Liypn. Do an advanced search and check out his store, V-COM Collections. These radios go for less than $50 each and Liypn is an excellent seller.

Of course, you could pay a lot more and get a lot better radio that would allow you to hook up an outdoor antenna and pull in really exotic, faint signals, but since you indicate you were looking for something cheap, I recommend both of these radios for their price/performance ratio.

Good luck,

Jackie

1554. The Republicans/Newt Gingrich's Legacy.....

Blunt political opportunism, not fancy libertarian ideas, is most of what's left of the '94 revolution

If there are still believers in limited government cowering in the corner of the Bush-Frist-DeLay Republican tent, they might recover some of their lost sense of shame by picking up a copy of the Cato Institute's new book, The Republican Revolution 10 Years Later: Smaller Government or Business as Usual?

It's a bracingly grim collection of essays from people who were generally enthusiastic about (and in some cases, participated in) the GOP's historic recapture of the House of Representatives in 1994. Take Stephen Moore, who worked with House Budget Committee chairman John Kasich (R-Ohio) in drafting the Contract with America budget for fiscal year 1996.

"Under President Bush (and a Republican Congress) federal outlays increased 28 percent between FY01 and FY05," Moore writes. "Nondefense discretionary spending increased 34 percent during these four years. That fiscal policy is exactly the opposite of what was promised by Republican leaders when they first came to power in the 1990s," Moore writes. "The tragedy is that many of the Republicans who led the revolution have settled into power, become too comfortable with their perks and authority, and are now mirror images of what they replaced. The Republicans are now spending money faster than the Democrats ever did and have forgotten why voters put them in power in the first place."

You don't have to cherry-pick to find quotes like that.

Cato President Ed Crane: "There are too many opponents of liberty within the Republican Party... Many in the Republican Party have focused exclusively on tax cuts and growing the economy without dealing with the tougher job of limiting government to its proper size....That strategy has sadly oriented the party away from a focus on individual freedom and restoration of constitutional government."

The Competitive Enterprise Institute's Clyde Wayne Crews, Jr.: "Most people assumed that Republican politicians replacing Democrats on Capitol Hill in 1995 would lead to small-government, anti-regulation policies. That assumption turned out to be wrong."

Cato representative-government guy John Samples: "The Republicans in power have used partisan gerrymandering to prolong their control of Congress, a practice they denounced when the Democrats held power."

Cato telecom chief Adam Thierer: "Many Republican policymakers rallied around the cry to get the government's 'hands off the Internet!' If we judge the GOP by those promises, then the last 10 years of Republican rule are generally a failure."

Cato education analyst David Salisbury: "Recent federal education spending increases have been massive. Gone is the idea that there is no constitutional role for the federal government in the nation's schools. Instead, the Department of Education has been adopted as the Republicans' favored stepchild. The last 10 years have been a great disappointment to people who felt that the 1994 elections signaled an effort to cut the federal government and remove from it areas such as education where it had no legitimate constitutional role."

Cato criminal justice specialist Timothy Lynch: "With respect to criminal justice policies, the Republicans not only squandered their mandate but now also preside over a burgeoning federal law enforcement bureaucracy....Instead of a revolution, the GOP has turned its back on the Tenth Amendment and embraced a big-government agenda."

And so on. Few of the big-picture laments will come as a surprise to readers of Reason, but the detail in which these and other authors document the across-the-board betrayal of limited-government principles makes it a must-read even for those whose libertarian cherries were popped long before Terry Schiavo, "intelligent design," and the stem-cell ban.

But the volume is also illuminating-and relevant to today's major-party politics-because it kicks off with mostly upbeat accounts from none other than Newt Gingrich and Contract co-author Dick Armey. Unsurprisingly, the two politicians reminisce about the Revolution as a means for winning elections; on that front who could argue with its success?

"People who dismiss our victory as a fluke do not study our base very often," Gingrich writes. "We had nine million additional votes in 1994, the largest one-party increase in American history. There is a huge pool of uncommitted voters who have no interest in politics. Thus, when campaigns are able to mobilize such groups, they win in a big way."

This passage is crucial, and points to arguably the real legacy of Gingrich's Revolution, one that is eagerly being studied and debated by Democratic Party loyalists as we speak. The Republicans located and attracted a new base of voters with bomb-throwing rhetoric that only happened to include some limited-government ideas (hardly surprising, considering the party had been out of government for so long).

The key to maintaining that base, besides the usual vote-buying that every governing party engages in, has been to keep the bombs coming, not to follow up on any of the limited-government promises (with the notable exception of welfare reform).

If you don't believe me, spend a day consuming the most popular cultural artifacts from the Republican-affiliated alt-media-say, the Rush Limbaugh show, FreeRepublic.com, and Fox News-and compare the number of libertarian arguments or ideas you encounter with the number of diatribes against Hollywood, Hillary Clinton, or liberals. If the ratio is even 1:50, I'm buying the drinks.

This, finally, might just be the fruit of '94-a base mobilized not to reduce the scope of government, but to jeer at domestic enemies, conflate opposition to war with treason, and vote decisively against Michael Moore.

That self-described libertarians spend more time on these pursuits than noticing how their ideals continue to be mocked by the party they vote for is a testament to the alluring power of party-based populism. That Democratic activists seem eager to emulate key parts of this approach is a reason to curb your enthusiasm about the day when the Gingrich legacy gets the whipping it so richly deserves.

LL,

Something is really, really up (down?) with Chuck Harder.
First, his Web site (www.chuckharder.com, mirror at www.forthepeople.org) hasn't been updated since February 5, over six months ago - the longest such interval I can recall since Chuck began using the Internet on a regular basis in 1996.
Second, Chuck hasn't taken calls from listeners at least since he lost that $860,000 Dept. of Labor contract on March 31 for his now-defunct TV network. That's over four months with no call-ins, again the longest interval I can recall since I first heard Chuck in September 1991 - 14 years ago.
Third, all his shows seem to be reruns; there is very little hard news in his broadcasts that pinpoints exactly when they were recorded. As I posted previously, this is exactly what happened with his TV network before it went off the air.
Fourth, about three weeks ago, Chuck let it slip that he was on a "controlled fast," and was eating "a couple pieces of fruit a day" (I'm paraphrasing here, but I believe these quotes are accurate). Why would Chuck say something like this on the air?
Fifth, after a big announcement in April, Chuck has said absolutely nothing about his new book on the bankruptcy of America. What's up? Has he abandoned it? If so, why?
I think what I said on my previous post is correct: Chuck Harder is off the air, probably for good, and for whatever reason, his syndication network, TalkStar Radio, is keeping his shows (whenever they were made) on the 2 PM-4 PM time slot due to contractual obligations. What's frustrating is that I cannot verify this; there is no press release or AP bulletin saying, "Chuck Harder is off the air!" That said, I hope to find out something soon; the mystery of what happened to Chuck Harder can't go on forever.
We'll see ...

Check out the Eastern Regional "Pay-triot" Net every weknight on 3.860 LSB Ham Radio starting at 8:00 PM Eastern time. A curious collection of ultra-paranoid right wing goofballs who get on ham radio sideband to talk about chemtrails, mexican "weed-whacker pilots" (landscaping services who hire illegals day workers for cash to cut rich people's lawns) and other sundry topics of mutual mental paranoia.
And of course don't forget the Liberty Net Saturdays at 10:00 PM on 3.950 LSB (+/- 10 kc's) for more wacky nutcases who see the NWO in the "made in Mexico" tag in the back of their Haines and/or BVD's.
Listenin to these clowns almost reminds one of old hags I used to see as a kid in their pink hair curlers, bedroom slippers and bathrobes jibber-jabbin oner the common backyard fence about who's-sleepin-with-who.
More patheric and to be pitied than worried about possible future acts of sedition from these clowns as I'd lay odds 70% of em are retired overweight chain-smoking "barstool ornaments" daily at the local Legion or VFW Hall.

Personally, I'd advice an inexpensive radio that's not something for the junk pile (like the Coby model).
If you like it, you can spring for something better. If you don't, you're only out $50 bucks or so.

Beware, however; you can get bitten pretty hard by the bug and you'll end up spending copious time and money on it if not careful. I suppose that it's money better spent than hanging out at the bars, tho.

for less than $100, if you don't mind buying used, I would suggest a gently used Sony ICF-SW7600G. Be careful, Sony has made a variety of radios in the 7600 line (some very good, some not so good). The newest in the line is the 7600GS, but that'll set you back around $160, if memory serves. It's predecessor, the 7600G, had fewer memories but has nice features like single sideband reception and sync detection (advantages of sync detection is a matter of some debate; some think it helps, some don't). I had one for several years before trading up to a ICF-2010 (on which I can say the sync detection definitely helps) and haven't looked back. But for $100 the 7600G is a lot of radio.

I also see the Sangean ATS-909 (and it's rebranded brother, the Radio Shack DX-398) selling for $50 to $150 used. If you are into FM, it has RDS built in. It has continuous SW coverage like the 7600G. I can't attest to the dx qualities of this radio though.

Gerry Adams Rev Paisley charged?

The Brits never thought to charge the IRA men or the rabid Proddy
Professor of Hate Ian Paisley with treason, so what's changed?
The Provisional IRA butchered innocent shoppers in supermarkets again and again; and the Proddy Killers slugged innocent Catholics all over Northern Ireland, yet not one Government minister came out with a charge of Treason against these vicious arseholes.
So how come the Packies are different?
History, perhaps?
A Muslim Mulla couldn't be more hate-filled than Ian Paisley in full-flow.
How about Enoch Powell's - Rivers of Blood - speech in the '60s, about Pakistani Immigration into Britain wherin he was 'predicting' civil violence.. The speech killed his career..and the British People have distinguished themselves as The Most Tolerant In The World.
As we say in Australia about the ordinary people of Britain - " You

And how do I feel about my Iraqi neighbours who had to go back to Iraq because their Visa application failed?
I miss them!

I have never owned a stereo radio before,but this afternoon at the Goodwill store I bought a nice Pioneer AM/FM stereo radio model number SX-3400 with two RCA speakers for $8.00 plus Mississippi RIPP OFF sales taxes (the radio $4.00 and $2.00 each speaker) and I bought a cardboard box of movie projector lamp bulbs,18 small movie projector lamp bulbs and 11 larger movie projector lamp bulbs,all for $6.00 plus Mississippi RIPP OFF sales taxes.All of the lamp bulbs look brand new and still in the boxes.Those kinds of lamp bulbs cost a lot of money if bought new at a regular store.What am I going to do with all of those movie projector lamp bulbs? I dont know,but I figure I have a lifetime supply of movie projector lamp bulbs.The radio and speakers looks good and works great.Not to shabby in my opinion,of the things I bought at the Goodwill thrift store this afternoon.I like shopping at the Goodwill store six tenths of a mile South (South is always best) of my couch. cuhulin

Ditto. The DE1103 is my choice (I have the 1102 as well). They both have SSB capability and performance vs. cost can't be beat. The 1103 is sensitive enough off the built in telescoping antenna that you won't need to add much, if any, wire.
Liypn has sold me 3 radios, 2 arrived in seven days and 1 took only 6 days from date of shipping.
Here's his eBay store address:
http://stores.ebay.com/V-COM-COLLECTIONS By the way, I don't know why the 1102 is more expensive than the 1103, but it is. Maybe buzzygirl, or another person who owns both can tell me?
The Sony 7600GR is excellent as well, but around 3 times the cost. Shop around online for the best deal and low cost, or free, shipping if you decide on that one.

I doubt it. It's probably an old religious or school educational film. Those types of 16mm films don't bring much on Ebay... maybe $10 or less if it even sells. They're a dime a dozen. Most folks want popular TV shows or motion picture films. Some of those command a fortune.

8mm and 16mm stuff don't bring much money now, but you can bet one day this stuff will be hot and collectible. Wouldn't be surprised in 25 years (maybe less) if a good working 16mm projector that sells for a few bucks today is worth $1000.

Passport comes out in October, I believe. Two months or so away. Best to buy it from their website www.passband.com. A bookstore may not have the most recent version.

If he's looking for something cheap, either one of those Degens will do.
The 1102 is easier to use ergonomically, so for a new listener, I would recommend it. The 1103 is the same or slightly better in performance, but its layout can be intimidating to some people.

Best to look for a moderated forum, probably via the web, that is directed towards UK listeners specifically. This group is unmoderated, and most of the people here are Americans. I can say that in your area most of your DX will be from Africa and the Middle East/Central Asia. I wouldn't consider stations beamed to Europe DX for you because they're more or less beamed to your area. You might hear some Asian domestics every so often, but most of them are beamed east (ie away from you) so they're harder to hear in Europe. US stations are mostly religious, because the preachers are the only ones who have the money for SW yet who are denied coverage on other domestic US media. WBCQ has some pirate type programming, and if they're still around WRMI has a variety of programming because they sell airtime for $1 a minute. WRMI broadcasts many programs from Cuban exile groups (they're located in Miami,Florida, the call letters mean Radio Miami International).

Poor Old Lardass tries to date a girl and after half the conversation is over he askes her to marry him.
This isn't the first failure, though, there is some red haired coworker, a fat blonde pot-smoking whale-woman, a volunteer firefighter, and now this Laura. And interview with her will be forthcoming.
Lardass just screams desperation, and the new movie coming out informative.

You're right -- I noticed an ad for it in the most recent issue of Monitoring Times, but didn't notice a release date. I thought August would probably be too early to release the 2006 edition.

Y'know, I've wondered that myself, and I really am not sure why the 1102 is the more expensive of the two radios. Beats me!

It's generally bad form to make multiple typos while typo-laming the previous poster's use of a period instead of a colon in the

You did a good job in a few hours time with a cheap portable. Imagine what you could do with a good table top radio and an out door antenna.

Hi

I have a no longer produced Sony ICF SW 1000T for auction currently on ebay but will sell through this board if you make an acceptable offer.

The radio is cosmetically an 8 out of 10 with some small wear marks on the corners.

The AC adapter is included and like new.

All Functions tested and work.

The manuals are included (Condition - worn/OK)

Ebay auction...

I guess that since dogs lack the power of speech, they can't really say no.
And if they can't say no, well...to cuhulin, that's as good as a yes. Maybe this is an example of what he means when he says that he's always right, even when he's wrong.

Maybe cuhulin rides the Hershey Highway. And with that little pud of his, it's not likely that he's ever going to do any doggie damage. There'll be nothing to see.

By the way, I object to the use of the word lay in this context. Bringing him up on charges doesn't sound much better, though.

Yeah, I've been using it since about 96/97, but never bothered to upgrade. A bit silly really since using filters could probably get rid of the political/religious noise I find so annoying on rrs.

Check out the discussion groups on Yahoo.com. There are several radio related groups and discussions are for the most part civil and focused on radio. Every once in a while a xenophobe will make an inappropriate comment on the Degen radio groups, but they are usually yanked back into line.

Interesting.. & settled out of court.

" Sangean settled its part of the case after only a few days of testimony. The terms of the settlement agreement were not disclosed.
Speaking from his office in El Monte, Calif., last week, Kevin Wang would say only that it allowed his company and C. Crane to get back to doing business together, and that he was happy for that. "

Sangean doubtless has deep pockets..

C Crane does have excellent customer service however their prices for radios and similar things are rather on the high side. I put them in the same merchandise/marketing class as Brookstone, LL Bean,
New England Candle Company and similar retailers.

I would like to buy from C Crane and similar "high end" catalog retailers, but when I can go to Grove Enterprises and similar outlets who carry the same products for often 30% less.....guess where I'm going to shop!

It's like buying gasoline. Real-World example: The Shell station this afternoon had Regular going for $2.41. Right across the street there was a Citgo station selling Regular for $2.32

Take a guess where I filled up at this afternoon! (grin)

I like the people at CCrane ok.It is just the Sangean radios I dont care for.When I worked at a factory in St.Louis that makes wooden jigs for Aircraft parts in 1961,I owned a battery powered Honeywell radio that also had a little solar panel on top of the radio.I bought it at a pawn shop in St.Louis,it was a great little radio.One evening when I got off work and back to my hotel room (Kingsland Hotel,6668 Delmar Blvd,I doubt if that old hotel is there anymore,it was so run down even back then,I paid $25.00 each week for my rent at that old hotel,an old guy by the last name of Walker ran that hotel) somebody had broken into my room and stole my radio and a few other things of mine.

C. Crane Co. has been exceptionally quiet about the high failure rate of the digital frequency display of the CCRadio.

My old "standard" GE SRll and Superadio 3 have no problems at all.

Until they acknowledge that and have a no-charge fix for such an obvious problem, they will not get anymore business from me.

Likewise, the over-hyped Super ATS-909, from Radiolabs, they should have left the narrow filter alone. The stock ATS-909 was a little deaf off the internal whip, but Radiolabs went too far in modding the radio out IMHO.

I don't buy his excuse for one minute...this was much more than just getting a group of names to test potential products on.

>From the story: At some point, Williams gave Justice instructions on how to break into Crane's database systems and retrieve the company's list of customers. On Tuesday, Nov. 18, Williams and Justice exchanged a flurry of e-mails. Most of them were during business hours, when Justice would have been sitting at his computer in C. Crane's offices. Justice had successfully obtained the list. .... But both knew that was just the beginning of their problems. In April, C. Crane had filed a 14-count civil suit against them, Wang, Sangean and Justice's father, Jack Justice, who had gone into partnership with his son to develop RadioLabs. The suit charged that these parties conspired to misappropriate C. Crane's trade secrets, to engage in unfair business competition and to interfere with the relationship between C. Crane and its subcontractors.

Justice, Willams and Sangean are damn lucky imho.

I would agree about the TinyTenna, but what were you using the Select-A-Tenna for? For AM reception, with any radio that has a built-in AM antenna (ferrite bar or loop) I consistently find that it's a distinct help at night, a profound help in the daytime for DX on the AM band. I paid $45 for it five years ago, and consider it money well spent. Thee are AM stations I listen to regularly that are fine with the Select-A-tenna, but are "hashy" without it.

I prefer radios with the old style mechanical analog dials and tuning anyday,even if they do drift a little bit.My old radios hardley drift enough to worry about at all.Sometimes,old technology is better than new technology.I am going to buy a new CRT (Cathode Ray Tube) HDTV set at Cowboy Maloney's Electric City store next year.I am not the least bit interested in LED's and stuff like that.I like the old technology.

How so? 'He was under the impression that Crane had promised him royalties on certain of his inventions, and Crane wasn't delivering.'

'Impressions' just don't cut it. A legal document would!

'Inventions'? Did he have any of his 'inventions' patented? Did C. Crane have any of these so-called 'inventions' patented?

If Chris Justice was 'ripped off' then he did it to himself.

I guess this is modern ethics.
Radio Laboratory will get ANY of my business.

I had suggested to 2 friends that they send

Hi,

I have two of the gems , unfortunately without the shoulder straps to securely carry the radios to and from the listening positions.

I think the main reason why the Gyro-antenna gets loose is because the radio is quite big and heavy ,and ends up being carried by the gyro-antenna - when the carrying strap is missing.

But you should have no problem receiving as long as the gyro-antenna is working like it should, even if it does not keep keep its upright position.

It is only when you don't need the Gyro-antenna (when it is quite parralel to the radio itself) that your antenna does not stay upright. From what I understand ..

When you turn the antenna _un-parralel_ to the radio , the antenna should rest
on top of the chassis of the radio?

So when you don't need to turn the gyro-antenna ,there's no need to extend it.

And when you need to turn it , it will still lean on the chassis of the radio (even if it doesn't stay upright on its own)

Do you see what I mean?

Greetings,
Knut Otterbeck

After thinking about it for about two years, I finally ordered a PCR-1000 today. I got it from Universal Radio for 499.95
This weekend, I plan on putting together a homebrew discone. One of the things I'm excited about is that I'll finally get a chance to receive/decode weather satellite images now.

As I plan to use it as a base receiver, I'm still concerned with how it is going to deal with noise coming off of my PC. I've read a few reviews that stated noise could be a problem. Has anyone here used one of them ???

The incredible thing in Britain, is that when native born and black Britons open their mouths they speak with the often very pronounced accent of their region, and bely the description of themselves as 'ethnic'. Islam is an anti-British religion though as it promotes teetotalism and the Brits like their beer, their pubs and their way of life. The sheer dishonesty of the Pakistani Community in Britain (check the Insurance fraud figures!) has not helped their reputation, and yet by humour and 'common decency' great prejudice has been avoided in the main.
The bombings have put a tension into Britain spun more by the media than ordinary people, who simply get on with their lives.

PCR1000 noise commnets:
I traded for a PCR1000withthe DSP module.
I wouldn't have spent ~$500 for it, but as part of the trade it is a usefull radio. Not great, but a radio with some clear uses.
PC noise can kill your efforts to receive LEO WXSATS.
Use good quality coax.
A diskcone isn't the best, or even a good choice.
Consider a homebrew QDH instead.
Mount the antenna away from your PC.
Make sure you PC, monitor etc is WELL groudned.
This means more then a 8' ground rod!
You can't have too amny Feritte RFI beads on your coax, and all the lines into/out fo your PC. Keyboard, network, modem, telephone line, printer ect.
Use an isolation transformer between the PCR1000 and your PC!!!!!! One with a internal RF shield is prefreerd but the radio shack 10:10:
automotive transformer is much better then nothing.
You might consdier building an 8ohm:10K step up islolation transformer. I used a rat shack 8ohm:1K, the a 1100 ohm fixed resistor and a 10K pot feeding a 10K:10K(with internal RF shield).
Bond all of your equipment with 1" braid to the best ground you can get!!

If your PCR1000 has the DSP module it will run HOT.
I added self stick 1/2 rubber feet to allow air flow. It really helped reduce drift.

Cross-posted to: rec.radio.shortwave,alt.radio.digital,rec.radio.amateur.antenna,rec.radio.amateur.dx

I have a Digital radio and reception of one packet on 225Mhz is poor.

This sentence gives me hope:

"DAB is very close to an American (not European) amateur radio band (the 220-225 MHz or one and a half meter band). It is therefore possible to find suitable instructions for building an own aerial in American amateur radio publications".

Anybody can point me to such a publication??

I have a general band III TV antenna, designed for 170-240Mhz, but the station is on 225Mhz, so thats on the upper side of the band. I already "redesigned" a yagi antenna and made the directors closer to each other, but do not know the exact size, or maybe there is some simple design that makes the signal boom.

Is there a publication/calculation to design Yagi's?

(I built a loop for ~500-1850khz and I'm dreaming of a loop antenna ;-)

Thanks,

Marc

Yes, a rotating antenna is a much better description.

Maybe calling it a Rotating (Ferrite) Bar antenna is spot on.

This particular model (RF-2200) perhaps was more than could be expected at the time - or just a very lucky combination of timing and resources.

Word had it (I haven't been able to confirm this) that the engineers behind the RF-2200 project was "headhunted" to engineer the first generation of Panasonic Cellular Phones. Another huge success...

Cheers,
Knut Otterbeck

Hiya, Terry

Thanx for all the info. I like the idea of the isolation transformer a lot.
I'm getting the idea that it may be absolutely necessary given what I have heard thus far. I dont have the DSP module in it, but I may eventually order one. I have the UT-106 in my R75 and I use it all the time.

I know the discone wont be a good antenna for weather sat images. I figure I'd make a discone as a multi purpose hf antenna. It probably wont cut it for weather sat, but I figured I'd give it a try. A quadrifilar helical antenna would be good for that, but not so good as an all purpose antenna. I'll probably make the discone for now and build a quadrifilar helix later on. I'm also going to try out my two roof antennas with the PCR-1000 and see if they do anything useful.

A "long" wore (in my case ~70') with a 9:1 matching transformer, with an external attenuator (pull a 10dB, 20dB and 40dB design from an older ARRL handbook or online, I had a link but it is now dead. And a HF high pass, MW reject fitler and an FM BCB band reject fitlers will do wonders for the PCR1000. Leave the DSP module in your '75, it is a much better HF receiver then the PCR1000 could even dream of being.
I view the PCR1000 as a glorified service monitor, and a task specific scanner. I have made lists of frequencies for "special events", T-storms, floods snow/ice storm, eathquake, nerve gas leak(I live ~20 miles from a major nerve agent storag and disposal site). I also have a list of HF frequencies for similar special events.

I have an older 40MHz laptop, with Win 95B, for such emergencies.
Before running any software be sure to backup the EProm. Even with the Icom factory software Eprom corruption has been known to happen.

A crossed dipole over a set of crossed reflectors or metal screen make a good begining WXSAT antenna. QDXis clearly the way to go, a mast mounted JFET(or MOSFET) preamp will make that simple antenna about 80% as good as a QDH.

Good luck

I like this part - it's OK to steal C.C.'s database but spammers are the lowest of the low.

It's a bit like John Geoghan, the Boston paedophile priest, who was offed in prison by a "decent" murderer.

Not to defend spammers but stealing a database is a crime. Spammers frequently commit crimes as part of their spamming and Virginia has a spammer-specific criminal law but in most cases spamming is a civil tort.

[quote]

At some point, Williams gave Justice instructions on how to break into Crane's database systems and retrieve the company's list of customers. On Tuesday, Nov. 18, Williams and Justice exchanged a flurry of e-mails. Most of them were during business hours, when Justice would have been sitting at his computer in C. Crane's offices. Justice had successfully obtained the list.

Williams: "Fucking A dude! Now if we can just find some spammer with cash!!!"

Justice: "No, never! I don't think I could actually stoop that low besides, even though I just did something that my momma would have told me not to, I still have morals!"

Williams: "No I was kidding. I wouldn't do that either but I'm pretty excited about the list though it is dangerous."

Here in the states, the 1.25m band follows normal ham operation practice.
a vertical polarized antenna cut to about 31cm or so as a 1/4wave antenna over four radials works well for FM operation where as horizontal works well for SSB

You shold be able to find decent plans for a 1.25 beam in either a ARRL, JARL, or RSGB publication, or use or friend Mr. Google on the interweb.

Or, you can tell them what frequency to make the beam for at http://www.arrowantennas.com/. Pretty darn good and cheap antennas I use a few UHF beams here and the combo 2m/70cm beam for portable ops

Most of those AM/FM stereo radios aren't worth a hoot for picking up long distance radio stations.Depending on what kind of territory (hills or mountains) you probally would need a good external antenna.Yesterday at the Goodwill thrift store I bought a nice Pioneer model SX-3400 AM/FM stereo radio for $4.00 and two nice RCA speakers for $2.00 each.

I have horror stories of both of them

Dan Robinson told a story a while back that he sent his CRF-330K to them and the charged him hundreds of $$$, didn't fix it in several attempts and basically did a screw job. He had to send it to someone else notice how they DON'T repair radios any more !

I had a CCrane charger and the bottom wires inside the case shorted and almost burned the house down. I called them and I thought that since this was the 3rd one that broke on me and I was warning them of a hazard they would ask for it back and replace it. basically, the only thing they did is offer to sell me a new one !!!!

I was not impressed !!!!!!!!!

The insuing trauma and need for revenge changed his already suspect outlook towards man's best friend into one of lust, debauchery and the evil, corrupt lifestyle he lives now. I think the noise problems that some of the pc controlled radio owners have has more to do with the computer/monitor than the radio. I have an rx320 and have never had any problems but have heard others that have all kinds of problems. The first monitor I used with it was a Samsung and I could put the radio almost touching the monitor with no problems. The Gateway EV700 that I'm using now causes a slight problem if I get any closer than about 6 inches to it. RM~

1769. 4 Star General Fired For Organizing Coup Against Neo-Cons?(watch Charleston,SC)

Four Star General Fired For Organizing Coup Against Neo-Cons?
Reporter suggests Brynes discovered plan to turn nuke exercise into staged terror attack

Paul Joseph Watson & Alex Jones | August 10 2005
http://www.prisonplanet.com/articles/august2005/100805fourstargeneral.htm
The head of Fort Monroe's Training and Doctrine Command, four star general Kevin P. Byrnes, was fired Tuesday apparently for sexual misconduct according to official sources.

Other sources however have offered a different explanation for Byrnes' dismissal which ties in with the Bush administration's unpopular plan to attack Iran and the staged nuclear attack in the US which would provide the pretext to do so.

According to reporter Greg Szymanski, anonymous military sources said that Brynes was the leader of a faction that was preparing to instigate a coup against the neo-con hawks in an attempt to prevent further global conflict.

Indications are that, much like popular opinion amongst the general public, half the military oppose the neo-con's agenda and half support it.

Further revelations were imparted by journalist Leland Lehrman who appeared today on The Alex Jones Show.

Lehrman's army sources, including a former Captain in intelligence, became outraged when they learned that the official story behind 9/11 was impossible.

They told Lehrman that the imminent Northcom nuclear terror exercise based in Charleston, S.C, http://www.northcom.mil/index.cfm?fuseaction=news.showstory&storyid=C9BFBBAC-F3CA-BD2E-008C7B34AFE33114 where a nuclear warhead is smuggled off a ship and detonated, was originally intended to 'go live' - as in the drill would be used as the cover for a real false flag staged attack.

This website has relentlessly discussed similar style drills which took place on the morning of 9/11 and on the morning of 7/7 in London.

"Speculation exists that he had potentially discovered the fact that it was gonna go live and that he was trying to put a stop to it or also speculation indicates that he may be part of a military coup designed to prevent the ridiculous idea of doing a nuclear war with Iran, " said Lehrman.

Lehrman said that other sources had told him all army leave had been cancelled from September 7th onwards, opening the possibility for war to be declared within that time frame.

Northcom officials also admitted to Lehrman that CNN had been using its situation room as a studio.

Earlier this week, Washington Post reported http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2005/08/07/AR2005080700843_pf.html that the Pentagon has developed its first ever war plans for operations within the continental United States, in which terrorist attacks would be used as the justification for imposing martial law on cities, regions or the entire country.

American Conservative Magazine recently reported http://www.prisonplanet.com/articles/august2005/020805nukeiran.htm that Dick Cheney had given orders to immediately invade Iran after the next terror attack in the US, even if there was no evidence Iran was involved.

Government and media mouthpieces have been fearmongering for weeks about how a nuclear attack within the US is imminent.

Now would be the most opportune time for the Globalists to stage a major attack, as it would head off any potential indictments against the Bush administration for their involvement in illegally outing CIA agent Valerie Plame.

While rumors circulating about indictments having already taken place against Bush and Cheney should rightly be treated very carefully, the fact that there is an ongoing criminal investigation into the matter is something that's admitted and shouldn't be viewed as speculation.

I've owned one for almost 6 monthes. It's put together well and is stable as far as its construction. I had him put a standard coax connector so I could use it with my Drake R8B.
I'm no expert for sure, but it's very low noise and does the job well.
It's rotating loop make listening to DX in the evening great and as a bonus it tunes down to nearly 300 khz and over 1900 khz so its pretty versiile.

Siberia's rapid thaw causes alarm

The whole western Siberian sub-Arctic region has started to thaw
The world's largest frozen peat bog is melting, which could speed the rate of global warming, New Scientist reports.
The huge expanse of western Siberia is thawing for the first time since its formation, 11,000 years ago.

The area, which is the size of France and Germany combined, could release billions of tonnes of greenhouse gases into the atmosphere.

This could potentially act as a tipping point, causing global warming to snowball, scientists fear.

The situation is an "ecological landslide that is probably irreversible and is undoubtedly connected to climatic warming," researcher Sergei Kirpotin, of Tomsk State University, Russia, told New Scientist magazine.

The whole western Siberian sub-Arctic region has started to thaw, he added, and this "has all happened in the last three or four years".

Warming fast

Western Siberia has warmed faster than almost anywhere on the planet, with average temperatures increasing by about 3C in the last 40 years.

The warming is believed to be due to a combination of man-made climate change, a cyclical atmospheric phenomenon known as the Arctic oscillation and feedbacks caused by melting ice.

When you start messing around with these natural systems, you can end up in situations where it's unstoppable

The 11,000-year-old bogs contain billions of tonnes of methane, most of which has been trapped in permafrost and deeper ice-like structures called clathrates.

But if the bogs melt, there is a big risk their hefty methane load could be dumped into the atmosphere, accelerating global warming.

Scientists have reacted with alarm at the finding, warning that future global temperature predictions may have to be revised.

"When you start messing around with these natural systems, you can end up in situations where it's unstoppable," David Viner, of the University of East Anglia, UK, told the Guardian newspaper. "There are no brakes you can apply.

"This is a big deal because you can't put the permafrost back once it's gone. The causal effect is human activity and it will ramp up temperatures even more than our emissions are doing."

The intergovernmental panel on climate change speculated in 2001 that global temperatures would rise between 1.4C and 5.8C between 1990 and 2100.

However these estimates only considered global warming sparked by known greenhouse gas emissions.

"These positive feedbacks with landmasses weren't known about then," Dr Viner said. "They had no idea how much they would add to global warming."

That doesn't change the fact that you obviously have a reading comprehension problem, now does it?

Fact: Harveyat8c43z0@aol.com made the assertion that Justice and Williams 'could have done time...'.

Fact: You replied 'No indication of that from the article'.

Fact: The article indicates that both Justice and Williams were originally charged with grand theft, and under California law that's a potential year in jail.

Fact: Both Justice and Williams 'could' have done time.

Back over to you for your next twist to try and cover your ass.

You could try
http://www.clarc.org/Articles/uhf.htm

It looks fairly straight forward.

I'm not knowlegeable enough to say whether global warming is a natural cycle or whether it was partly induced by manmade pollution. That it is happening is beyond doubt. A trip through alaska reveals glaciers melting rapidly.

The broken plastic piece can also be repaired with fiberglass resin with fiberglass cloth which is available at marine/boat supply stores and stores such as Home Depot and similar stores.There are two types of fiberglass resin,epoxy resin and polyester resin.Epoxy is the strongest and polyester is not quite as strong as epoxy but is more flexible.I have repaired quite a few things before with epoxy resin and useing fiberglass cloth with the fiberglass resin and none of them has ever broken yet.If you use (I prefer epoxy fiberglass resin) that method to repair the broken plastic piece,scuff the plastic piece up first with some coarse grade of sandpaper.Dont underestimate the many,many things that can be repaired with fiberglass resin and useing fiberglass cloth with the fiberglass resin for a permanent repair.

The only part of that fairy tale that was true was where the four star had his command yanked. The rest of it is typical schizo ranting.

In another time the military would have given him a letter of reprimand for banging some honey while still married. The military is under pressure to put on the cleanest of all faces possible so they are going overboard on cases like this.

I've got mixed feelings about this situation. On the one hand he is a career soldier who knows the rules about conduct unbecoming a soldier and the need for senior officers to set an example by their actions. On the other hand I am somewhat troubled by the decision to ruin the final hours of this guys career by yanking his command. I doubt that they will go further with charges. Something less severe like a letter of reprimand or strong dressing down by Rumsfeld would have been appropriate imho.

I took about 7 feet of used coax, stripped about 6 feet down to the wire and made it into a loop, twisting the end back onto itself. Works admirably for free - I think I might make my next one bigger.

Not too shabby if you are like me and have way more coax around than you can use.

Have any of y'all ever seen the Book Of Kells before? The original Book Of Kells was found in a Bog in Ireland many years ago.That Book Of Kells sits in a locked glass showcase in Dublin,Ireland Library and each day,someone who works for that Library unlocks that case and turns a page and then locks the case back up.When Metrocenter Mall www.metromalljackson.com opened for business in November,1977,I went over there across Highway 80 from me to check out the new shopping Mall.Inside the Waldensbooks book store on the book selves was a reprint of the Book Of Kells and naturally,I bought that reprint Book Of Kells.The book is sitting inside of my old antique shift robe closet (I brought that old shift robe closet from my old homeplace in Carthage,Mississippi many years ago) in my bedroom right now.

Texas Becomes a Majority-Minority State
Aug 11, 7:50 AM (ET)
By ALICIA A. CALDWELL

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Texas has become the fourth state to have a non-white majority population, the U.S. Census Bureau said Thursday, a trend driven by a surging number of Hispanics moving to the state.

According to the population estimates based on the 2000 Census, about 50.2 percent of Texans are now minorities. In the 2000 Census, minorities made up about 47 percent of the population in the second-largest state.

Texas joins California, New Mexico and Hawaii as states with majority-minority populations - with Hispanics the largest group in every state but Hawaii, where it is Asian-Americans.
Five other states - Maryland, Mississippi, Georgia,
New York and Arizona - aren't far behind, with about 40 percent minorities.

Public policy analysts said these states and the country as a whole need to bring minority education and professional achievement to the levels of whites.
Otherwise, these areas risk becoming poorer and less competitive.

William Frey, a demographer at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C., said lawmakers need to start with immigration reform, while striving to bring minorities' education and salary levels in line with Anglos.
"Immigration is good for the United States ... it's important for us to keep our doors open, but we need to keep an eye on the people coming in," Frey said. "While initially it will be a state problem, eventually it will be a national issue, and education is the best way to deal with it."

Complications from the cultural shift aren't likely to be exclusive to states that already have majority-minority populations, Frey said.

Nevada, for instance, has seen a massive influx of minorities in the last 15 years, reducing the percentage of Anglos since the 1990s from nearly 80 percent to about 60 percent.
Such a rapid shift is likely to cause growing pains that include trying to balance the needs of a bigger and younger minority community with an aging Anglo community, Frey said.

"That's the kind of state that is going to have to deal with quick transition," Frey said.

Though some areas may never see this shift, the country as a whole is expected to continue the trend first noticed more than a decade ago.
The nation should be more than half minorities by 2050, said Steve Murdock, a demographer at the University of Texas at San Antonio.
"If you look in the 1990s, in every one of the 50 states, non-Anglo Hispanic populations grew faster than Anglo populations," Murdock said. "It's a very pervasive pattern."

Murdock above is correct, he just put it in a much more 'politically correct' way of saying that Mexicans and Latins
IN GENERAL tend to have multiple-babies every 11 Months.

To put it another way....they BREED like rabbits....you'd be best to learn Espanol as a second language fast Bunkie because

I did a Google news search for this story and I found no sources to back up this theory that it was Byrnes' policy beliefs, let alone any "coup" that led to this demoting. (Be VERY CAREFUL with that word "coup" - it implies treason.) Of course, you can find just about any conspiracy theory from any point of view you want on the internet and "the man hears what he wants to hear and disregards the rest".

Interestingly, both the leftish Amy Goodman (Democracy Now/ Pacifica) and the rightish or whatever Arianna Huffington say very similar things.

Both say that Byrnes was demoted over adultery and both say that it is a bit strange that the army seems to regard torture of prisoners as less important than adultery.

http://news.yahoo.com/s/huffpost/20050811/cm_huffpost/005427

[quote]

Hereï¿½s all the proof you need that the lunatics have taken over the Pentagon and DoD asylums (that is, if the lunacy of their Iraq policies hadnï¿½t already convinced you):

Four-star General Kevin Byrnes, the third most senior of the Armyï¿½s 11 four-star generals, was sacked over allegations that he had an extramarital affair. Meanwhile, Lt. General Ricardo Sanchez, the senior commander in Iraq during the Abu Ghraib torture and abuse scandal, is being considered for promotion to, yep, four-star general.

Talk about your utterly perverted priorities.

Now, it long ago became clear that the Bushies inhabit a bizarro, topsy-turvy universe -- a place where being utterly wrong about slam-dunk WMD earns you a Medal of Freedom, dismissing a ï¿½Bin Ladin Determined to Strike in U.S.ï¿½ memo earns you a promotion to Secretary of State, signing off on torture makes you AG material, another 123 American soldiers being blown up is the mark of an enemy in its ï¿½last throesï¿½, and outing an undercover CIA agent (and then lying about it) merits a vote of confidence instead of a pink slip.

[quote]
The Pentagon has refused to punish any senior military officers for the prison abuse at Abu Ghraib or Guantanamo, but the army has taken the rare action of relieving a four-star general of his command. But not for any role in torture of prisoners. Gen. Kevin Byrnes stands accused of having an extramarital affair with a civilian. The General led the Army's Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Virginia and he was reportedly set to retire in November after 36 years of service. Army officials say they could find no case of another four-star general being relieved of duty in modern times.

You should be driving a 1986 Ford pickup truck with no less than TWO clear-thru-the-quarterpanels 4" diameter rustout holes in the bedliner in it! Not a damm 4-wheeler old lady car. Get an old rusted out Ford PU, then you can toss yer beer cans and soda cans in the tailbed and as you drive you can watch and bet when the cans FALL THRU the rust holes onto the highway below whilst turning or changing lanes on the Interstate. (this is better known as 'Playing Redneck Billards' among the more refined grades of American Trailer Trash......)

I can attest to the effectiveness of Litz wire. I have been using 36 turns of #36 by 12 strand Litz wire for my loopstick antennas for awhile, and it works very well. The Q of the antenna itself is so high that I can get away with using an NTE-618 varactor diode to tune the antenna circuit.

Now, why don't you make about five more posts in which you complain about reception, and while you're at it make racist comments about the Chinese and Japanese. There's nothing sophomoric about that.

Interesting how, if you wait long enough, everything you say on USENet gets quoted back to you.

Your statement are my exact words from a conversation 6 years ago.

But you keep snapping, there, Bubba. Eventually, you'll even say something in context.

Your pattern of responses, though, and your inability to agree with anyone, more than one or two transactions, anyway, reminds me very much of someone who used to participate here. Someone who also was known, occasionally, as Dave. Someone who also used to respond to disagreement with personal insults.

Interesting that he took pride in that, too.

Have a nice day, David. Anyone who can quote Pittman, deserves at least that much.

Can tell you where this plot most likely came from:

[From a review of the motion picture "Special Bulletin", on Amazon.com]
http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/detail/-/6301650662/002-9597378-4051236?v=glance

The whole "movie" is done to try and not be a movie at all. In the spirit of H.G. Wells and "War of the Worlds" this 'movie' attempts to seem like an actual news broadcast. You watch as a normal news day turns into a national crisis. A group of anti-nuclear activists has assembled a make-shift atomic device of comparable yield to the ones that destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Thier demands are US nuclear disarmament, in the hopes that if they forced the US to make the first move, the USSR would follow suit by disarming in turn. The plot isn't very plausible, even by 80's standards, but the film is interesting and enjoyable to watch.

And...

Special Bulletin is a TV movie about nuclear bomb threat in Charleston S.C. and how on television network responses to crisis, when one of their newcrews becomes in invovled. I really liked this movie, because of the way that the network reacts to the crisis. In the beginning there is concern for the hostages, but as the continues you see graphics and music being developed. And it becomes less about the hostages and more about get the story. Overall its a good movie.

Went to the local Disabled American Veterans thrift store this afternoon and was "shocked" to see a guy walking up to the counter with a nice Panasonic RF-2200 for $9! I rarely see them at hamfests let alone thrift stores. Would of been mine if I would have got there 5 minutes earlier.

Everyone don't dismiss thrift stores as only having clothes and housewares. There's good finds to be had.

The three Goodwill thrift stores in Jackson open at 8:30 AM in the mornings and there is a Salvation Army thrift store and a Rescue Mission thrift store and a lot of yard sales and fleamarkets and junk shops around here.The Goodwill store I go to at around noontime is only seven tenths of a mile South (South is always best) of me.I have to watch the Three Stooges from 8:00 AM to 9:00 AM every morning and it takes about four cups of coffee for me to get waked up and stirring around real good.I know exactly what you mean by being a few minutes (sometimes,only a second or two) too late and miss out on a good deal,it has happened to me many times before.

Hi RHF,
I am working with some prototypes on this antenna match with "F" connector.
I think I will stay with the 9:1 version for this match as the losses are a little more when trying to feed the 10:1 into 75 ohm coax rather than 50 ohm.
You will have a little loss converting the 75 ohm coax to 50 ohm adapters but that is so small that the gain you receive on the balun conversion will be dominating factor.
I have updated my website with the balun information and put a link to the radio shack "F" adapters.
I should have working units for sale by next week.
(SWLZ Model / $17.50 each + S&H)
Thanks again your your advice and tips.

I didn't notice that they're supposedly nuking Charleston. What is IN Charleston, anyway? What's it known for, besides a dorky dance popular in the 1920s that had people singing "Charleston, Charleston, dadada Charleston..."? It's more likely that the terrorists would blow up New York or Washington. A REALLY ingenious plot would be to blow up a dirty bomb in the Golden Gate when there is a big onshore summer wind blowing, the kind that blows 30mph in Fairfield. Within days some of the world's richest farmland would be worthless, and 10 million people would be doomed to die from radiation poisoning.

JD,

You are right there is the Fatal Flaw in the Kyoto Environmental Accords :
Both China and India are exempt from the Standards that the USA and Europe whould have to meet.
By the Year 2020 the Nation of China (PRC) will become the Major World Wide Environmental Polluter in the World with India being #2 or #3. With China's Total Environmental Pollution from all sources exceeding both North America (USA-Canada-Mexico) and Europe.
By the Year 2035 the Nation of India will become the Primary World Wide Environmental Polluter in the World; and China will be the second largest. The combined Total Environmental Pollution from both the nations of India and China will be greater than the all sources from 'The-Rest-of-the-World'.
FWIW in 2020 and 2035 the per capita Environmental Pollution in the USA will still exceed the levels in both India and China : But their ever increasing Amounts of Pollution coupled with a Population that is still growing at a much greater rate then the USA or Europe.
A very real Health Fact of the Future : At some point in time
(15 to 30 years out) more Americans and Europeans will Die
Each Year from China's and India's Environmental Pollution; then from Cigarette Smoking and Auto Accidents.

What I can't figure out is why the regular (Army, Marines, etc) service (professional, well trained, experienced) men and women are not fighting in Iraq!

Instead, your and my neighbor (part-time service people - Reserves, Gaurd, etc) are doing the fighting for them over there.

There is something wrong here!

The substitutes and back-ups are doing the dirty work for the paid professional who, through making the service their career, should be in the majority, not the back-up guys!

There is something definitly wrong here.

Warren.

What is IN Charleston anyway? Charleston,South Carolina has a rich History.Charleston is one of the oldest Cities in U.S.A.The oldest City in U.S.A.(and I know y'all wont believe me) is the original City of Pensacola,Florida.The present City of Pensacola is not where the original City of Pensacola used to be many,many years ago because a Huricane destroyed the original old City of Pensacola.Saint Augustine,Florida is not the oldest City in U.S.A.If you want to get technical about it,the Indians had Cities in America thousands of years ago.

As many of you know, a common problem with the RF-2200 is the gyro antenna failing to stay in the "up" position.
Well: Here is the post to the Yahoo group about this very problem, and a reply with a fix.

Ques:
I recently purchased a '2200 in great shape, much better than the one I had sold a few years back. The only problem with it is that the gyro antenna doesn't always stay up (it does sometimes when I set it just right). Before I try something on my own which could make it worse, any idea as to how to correct this problem? Any help is appreciated.

ANS:
I have disassembled a few of these and can tell you that most likely the only cure is a new gyro antenna from a parts set. Removal of the whole assembly is easy though.

1) Remove the back panel (6 screws if I recall).

2) Clip or unsolder the two leads coming from the tube at the base of the gyro antenna where they are soldered onto metal studs on the PCB..

3) Remove the C ring which holds the gyro antenna in the radio at the bottom of the pivot tube. Be sure to note the position of several washers - I think there are 3 of them).

4) Lift the whole gyro antenna assembly straight up out of the tube and clear of the radio

5) Under the round base you will see a screw holding a curved flat metal piece about 1 inch long. Remove the screw.

Now you can see how the mechanism works. Beneath the curved metal arm is a coil spring and a ball bearing. The ball and spring are retained in a square plastic stud, and when this stud breaks the antenna no longer stays up. IF ALL THE PARTS ARE PRESENT (including the broken piece of the plastic stud) you MAY be able to fix it. You have to scrupulously clean all the grease out of it, then use super glue to repair the plastic stud. Re-assemble, apply some light grease, then use with care.

However, if that broken plastic piece is missing you will have to be very creative in order to salvage it, but you will at least understand how the mechanism is supposed to work.
I hope that helps you out a bit.

Nice radio I'm sure, but since the S350 lacks the rotating antenna of the 2200 and uses a digital display that was seen on the later 2600...2900 radios wouldn't those be a better comparison.

Up to now I found some (not on the inexpensive side though...) Sony ICF-SW7600G and Sony ICF-SW7600GR for sale.

U.S. Defends Detentions at Airports
By NINA BERNSTEIN
Foreign citizens who change planes at airports in the United States can legally be seized, detained without charges, deprived of access to a lawyer or the courts, and even denied basic necessities like food, lawyers for the government said in Brooklyn federal court yesterday.

The assertion came in oral arguments over a federal lawsuit by Maher Arar, a naturalized Canadian citizen who charges that United States officials plucked him from Kennedy International Airport when he was on the way home on Sept. 26, 2002, held him in solitary confinement in a Brooklyn detention center and then shipped him to his native Syria to be interrogated under torture because officials suspected that he was a member of Al Qaeda.

Syrian and Canadian officials have cleared Mr. Arar, 35, of any terrorist connections, but United States officials maintain that "clear and unequivocal" but classified evidence shows that he is a Qaeda member. They are seeking dismissal of his lawsuit, in part through the rare assertion of a "state secrets" privilege.

The case is the first civil suit to challenge the practice known as "extraordinary rendition," in which terror suspects have been transferred for questioning to countries known for torture.

After considering legal briefs, Judge David G. Trager of United States District Court prepared several written questions for lawyers on both sides to address further, including one that focused pointedly on Mr. Arar's accusations of illegal treatment in New York. He says he was deprived of sleep and food and was coercively interrogated for days at the airport and at the Metropolitan Detention Center in Brooklyn when he was not allowed to call a lawyer, his family or the Canadian consul.

"Would not such treatment of a detainee - in any context, criminal, civil, immigration or otherwise - violate both the Constitution and clearly established case law?" Judge Trager asked.

The reply by Mary Mason, a senior trial lawyer for the government, was that it would not. Legally, she said, anyone who presents a foreign passport at an American airport, even to make a connecting flight to another country, is seeking admission to the United States. If the government decides that the passenger is an "inadmissible alien," he remains legally outside the United States - and outside the reach of the Constitution - even if he is being held in a Brooklyn jail.

Even if they are wrongly or illegally designated inadmissible, the government's papers say, such aliens have at most a right against "gross physical abuse."

Under immigration law, Ms. Mason asserted, Mr. Arar was afforded "ample" due process when he was given five days to challenge an order finding him inadmissible.

"The burden of proof is on the alien to demonstrate his admissibility," Ms. Mason said, "and he did not do that."

"Do you do this to all people on a connecting flight?" Judge Trager asked, raising his eyebrows.

"Yes, all have to show admissibility," Ms. Mason replied. In some ways, she asserted, Mr. Arar had more rights than a United States citizen, because he could have challenged his deportation to Syria, which he had left as a teenager, under the Convention Against Torture. He also had 30 days to challenge his removal, she said.

But David Cole, a law professor at Georgetown University who argued on behalf of Mr. Arar and the Center for Constitutional Rights, contended that the government had denied Mr. Arar a meaningful chance to be heard, first by refusing to let him call a lawyer, and later by lying to the lawyer about his whereabouts.

Mr. Arar, who had been told he would be deported to Canada, was not handed a final order sending him to Syria until he was in handcuffs on the private jet that took him away, Mr. Cole said, while his lawyer was told he had been sent to a jail in New Jersey.

"We can't take a citizen, pick him up at J.F.K. and send him to Syria to be tortured," he said. "We can't hold against Mr. Arar the failure to file a motion for review when he's locked up in a gravelike cell in Syria."

Dennis Barghaan, who represents former Attorney General John Ashcroft, one of the federal officials being sued for damages in the case, argued that Congress and recent judicial decisions tell federal courts "keep your nose out" of foreign affairs and national security questions, like those in this case.

At several points the judge seemed to echo such concerns. He said he had refused to read a letter from the plaintiffs detailing testimony before a Canadian board of inquiry into Mr. Arar's case because he did not know how to deal with questions that might require the government to confirm or deny classified information.

"How am I going to handle that?" he asked, rubbing his forehead and furrowing his brow before adjourning the hearing.

These same people who claim global warming were telling us back in the 70's we're heading for global cooling, remember that one??
Through out earths history their have been many ice ages followed by warming periods. One could say the earth is warming up, because we are now coming out of a 10,000 year ice age. Man has little to nothing to do with it. Read anything by Dr. Dixie Lee Ray, I believe is her name, and she spells it out quite well.

Do you have names for these ''same people''.

Does NASA ring a bell?

Could it be that in the past 30 years we learned more?

If the Gulf Stream quits bringing warm water to New England and Europe might they get colder while Equatorial regions get warmer.

The word for today is ''thermohaline''.

With the gun related crimes data base showing that the source of guns used in crimes in Canada coming from the US, perhaps anyone trying to smuggle a gun in their motorhome on a trip through Canada to Alaska should be identified immediately as a terrorist and flown involuntarily to a Cuban jail, with info to his government provided to him after he's gone. Of course, this would not happen in a democracy with checks and balances and a constitution would it?

The Arar story can be heard on radio as it unfolds if you wish to listen.

My job very well could get outsourced to China. We've already lost considerable business, management tells us how much cheaper Chinese workers are, and so on. So, I figure, why don't we import more Chinese? I don't mean Chinese products, I mean Chinese workers. Hell, if some Chinese guy wants to do my job, let him do it here, on the same machines I run. Just let me get my cut.

Let me, and everyone else, whose job is threated by a low-pay Chinese worker bring in a few of those Chinese workers. The factory could hire them at half pay, and the threatened American worker (now the Labor Importer) could take half of that. Four imported Chinese workers and the Labor Importer would be back where he started, with no work to do but paper work. It's a win-win-win situation!!

Of course, my imagined pay rate is purely speculative. The Labor Importer might get even more attractive rates with larger numbers of imported Chinese workers. Who knows how low the pay rate might go? 25%? 10%? 1%?? Why, we might see American built cars selling for $3000, American built computers selling for $30 and American made shoes for $3!!

Well, if all of that happens, I'll leave the Labor Importer business to somebody else. I'll use my $200 Billion to become a real estate speculator. You think 30 million illegal immigrants have helped drive up real estate prices near absurd levels? Just wait 'till the hordes of Chinese workers come here! We might see modest homes in so-so neighborhoods selling for $3 million!! I'm tellin' ya -- we'll all be rich!!!

Cuhulin,
If you are still using the common 100 Watt Incandescent Bulb.
"SunLight Bulb" Saves the Planet and your Eyes and reduces Radio Noise generated by most CF Lights :o)
Try one of the newer Compact Fluoreescent (CF) Bulbs from Lights-of-America that uses FluoreX Technology.
These are be sold as "SunLight Bulb" (Sky Blue Label) and are rated at 135 Light Output 2000 Lumens with only a 30 Watt Energy Use and a 6000 Hour Life.
The Model No.2830 S with a Color Temperture or 6500K (Cool White) . Claims are : Natural Spectrum Light; Provides Soothing Glare Free Light; Enjoy Natural DayLight Indoors; Natural DayLight has an overall positive effect on Health, Mood, and Appearance while reducing any Eye Strain. <www.lightsofamerica.com>
So these newer "CF" Bulbs seem to offer several Pluses over the older "CF" Bulbs and original Incandescent Bulbs:
+ More Rated Output (35%) then the original Bulb.
+ Less Power Used (30%) then the original Bulb.
+ Better Sun Light Color Rendition then the original Bulb.
+ Less RF Radio Noise then older CF Bulbs.
[Better for your Radios and Radio Reception]
Available at Wal-Mart Stores for about $8+

Here's clue about Science. It works by having a crowd of people come up with all sorts of different ideas. Each person or group comes up with a set, and the rest of the group work to tear it to shreds. So if you go back a bit in time, before the dust has settled, you'll find a serious scientist saying JUST ABOUT ANYTHING.

It's not what one scientist says, it's what they select as a consensus.
Listen to one scientist, and you can be listening to a total crank, like your example in the next paragraph.

>Through out earths history their have been many ice ages followed >by warming periods. One could say the earth is warming up, because >we are now coming out of a 10,000 year ice age. Man has little to >nothing to do with it. Read anything by Dr. Dixie Lee Ray, I believe

Er, she was an Atomic Energy Commissioner and then Governor of the State of Washington. So put her in the Politician category, not the Scientist category. (And having been a state employee that that time, not a very good one, either).

Before that, she was a Marine Biologist and then ran a museum (the Seattle Science Center). So her expertise was in kelp or worms or something like that. And pissing people off. She was real good at pissing people off, but not very good at having a scientific model that made good predictions. In other words, she could say wrong or stupid things with great certainty.

Direct (Screw-In) Halogen Bulbs should be as RF Quiet
as the older 'standard' Incandescent Bulbs.
Some Halogen Desk Lighting Systems use a Transformer Ballast and are RF Noise Generators.
[Beware : Halogens in Track Lighting Systems with or without Dimmers]
These newer "SunLight" Compact Fluorescent
(CF) Bulbs generate less RF Noise then the older CF Bulbs and are worth replacing when the older CF Bulb burns-out or is noticeably an RF Noise
Source that can be heard on your Radios.

why dont you compare apples to apples? If you're an American

Do you suppose this might be a normal earth function that takes place in cyclical patterns?? Do you know how many thousands of tons of toxic gasses and carbon dioxide Mt St Helens dumped into the atmosphere. Or how many thousands of tons of toxic gasses Mt Minatubo(sp?) in the Phillipines dumped into the atmosphere when they erupted?? How many under sea eruptions take place in a year. Those gasses ultimately make it to the surface. One of the biggest greenhouse gases is methane, produced by every living creature on this earth.

well I have seen on TV all the components I'd need to make a WMD and we have been shown of FoxNess and CNN empty containiers of such chemicals
So they it looks like there were WMD's

But that aside Saddam has violated the terms signed with the US on the Hey, maybe your next door neighbor is going to blow a building up. Call the police and have him arrested immediately. Detain him forever. Don't bother checking to see if he has any explosives.

I like that idea. Preventative jailings. Hey, since everyone could be a potential terrorist, let's lock up everyone in the country. Since jails aren't big enough we'll just install a national police/army force.

I;d feel so much more safer, wouldn't you? We'd neve have to worry about terrorists again!

He is and was a Canadian citizen. His 'home of record' was in Canada.
Canada treats all citizens equally, whether born here or naturalized. I thought America did too. Cuba is a reasonable comparison for Americans, or you can suggest another if you like, Chile under Pinochet would have been good.

The world of hurt for an American bringing a gun to Canada is a $3-400 fine at present at max, with an opportunity to mail it home in many cases and no consequence unless he's got a carload.

What's this about toxins in water supplies and dirty nukes? Why don't you compare apples to apples?

If a flight that goes over American airspace has an inadmissable alien, can they arrest him while in American airspace too? After all, that is our territory.

Seems kind of dingy. And they don't work very well in the cold here.

Its nice not having to change bulbs every couple weeks though when using the CFLs.

Teddy Bear, look for consignment, second hand, Salvation Army, St. Vincent de Paul, thrift stores, etc, Church Rummage sales, garage sales, your local newspapers freebie section (I once saw a sailboat, for free, listed once. My ex didn't want me having it. Talked to the guy who got it...trailer, boat, outboard motor for absolutely nothing and in great shape. 'Bout a 16-18 footer. One reason we're not married now <G>.)

Also try Craigs List (Craigslist ?). It has a freebie section, barter section, electronics, etc. And in locations all over the U.S. Seen all sorts of freebies. Some good, some bad, but the price is right! Never know what you'll see listed there.

Good Luck on the hunt!!!!

that anyone who disagrees with the Reichsfuhrer is a ''liberal'' and that description alone is sufficient to discredit the dissenter.

A ''halogen'' bulb is simply an incandescent with gas, rather than a vacuum, inside the bulb. It still uses 90% of the energy going into it to produce heat, rather than visible light.

$8 a bulb is way too high for a CF. Try the 5-packs at Home Depot.

The Democratics are just as bad as the Neorepublicans. I like the old-timey Republicans (but they are a rapidly vanishing species).

''When Democracy Failed: The Warnings of History
by Thom Hartmann

The 70th anniversary wasn't noticed in the United States, and was barely reported in the corporate media. But the Germans remembered well that fateful day seventy years ago - February 27, 1933. They commemorated the anniversary by joining in demonstrations for peace that mobilized citizens all across the world.

It started when the government, in the midst of a worldwide economic crisis, received reports of an imminent terrorist attack. A foreign ideologue had launched feeble attacks on a few famous buildings, but the media largely ignored his relatively small efforts. The intelligence services knew, however, that the odds were he would eventually succeed. (Historians are still arguing whether or not rogue elements in the intelligence service helped the terrorist; the most recent research implies they did not.)

But the warnings of investigators were ignored at the highest levels, in part because the government was distracted; the man who claimed to be the nation's leader had not been elected by a majority vote and the majority of citizens claimed he had no right to the powers he coveted.
He was a simpleton, some said, a cartoon character of a man who saw things in black-and-white terms and didn't have the intellect to understand the subtleties of running a nation in a complex and internationalist world. His coarse use of language - reflecting his political roots in a southernmost state - and his simplistic and often-inflammatory nationalistic rhetoric offended the aristocrats, foreign leaders, and the well-educated elite in the government and media. And, as a young man, he'd joined a secret society with an occult-sounding name and bizarre initiation rituals that involved skulls and human bones.

Nonetheless, he knew the terrorist was going to strike (although he didn't know where or when), and he had already considered his response. When an aide brought him word that the nation's most prestigious building was ablaze, he verified it was the terrorist who had struck and then rushed to the scene and called a press conference.

"You are now witnessing the beginning of a great epoch in history," he proclaimed, standing in front of the burned-out building, surrounded by national media. "This fire," he said, his voice trembling with emotion, "is the beginning." He used the occasion - "a sign from God," he called it - to declare an all-out war on terrorism and its ideological sponsors, a people, he said, who traced their origins to the Middle East and found motivation for their evil deeds in their religion.

Two weeks later, the first detention center for terrorists was built in Oranianberg to hold the first suspected allies of the infamous terrorist. In a national outburst of patriotism, the leader's flag was everywhere, even printed large in newspapers suitable for window display.

Within four weeks of the terrorist attack, the nation's now-popular leader had pushed through legislation - in the name of combating terrorism and fighting the philosophy he said spawned it - that suspended constitutional guarantees of free speech, privacy, and habeas corpus. Police could now intercept mail and wiretap phones; suspected terrorists could be imprisoned without specific charges and without access to their lawyers; police could sneak into people's homes without warrants if the cases involved terrorism.

To get his patriotic "Decree on the Protection of People and State" passed over the objections of concerned legislators and civil libertarians, he agreed to put a 4-year sunset provision on it: if the national emergency provoked by the terrorist attack was over by then, the freedoms and rights would be returned to the people, and the police agencies would be re-restrained. Legislators would later say they hadn't had time to read the bill before voting on it.

Immediately after passage of the anti-terrorism act, his federal police agencies stepped up their program of arresting suspicious persons and holding them without access to lawyers or courts. In the first year only a few hundred were interred, and those who objected were largely ignored by the mainstream press, which was afraid to offend and thus lose access to a leader with such high popularity ratings. Citizens who protested the leader in public - and there were many - quickly found themselves confronting the newly empowered police's batons, gas, and jail cells, or fenced off in protest zones safely out of earshot of the leader's public speeches. (In the meantime, he was taking almost daily lessons in public speaking, learning to control his tonality, gestures, and facial expressions. He became a very competent orator.)

Within the first months after that terrorist attack, at the suggestion of a political advisor, he brought a formerly obscure word into common usage. He wanted to stir a "racial pride" among his countrymen, so, instead of referring to the nation by its name, he began to refer to it as "The Homeland," a phrase publicly promoted in the introduction to a 1934 speech recorded in Leni Riefenstahl's famous propaganda movie "Triumph Of The Will." As hoped, people's hearts swelled with pride, and the beginning of an us-versus-them mentality was sewn. Our land was "the" homeland, citizens thought: all others were simply foreign lands. We are the "true people," he suggested, the only ones worthy of our nation's concern; if bombs fall on others, or human rights are violated in other nations and it makes our lives better, it's of little concern to us.

Playing on this new nationalism, and exploiting a disagreement with the French over his increasing militarism, he argued that any international body that didn't act first and foremost in the best interest of his own nation was neither relevant nor useful. He thus withdrew his country from the League Of Nations in October, 1933, and then negotiated a separate naval armaments agreement with Anthony Eden of The United Kingdom to create a worldwide military ruling elite.

His propaganda minister orchestrated a campaign to ensure the people that he was a deeply religious man and that his motivations were rooted in Christianity. He even proclaimed the need for a revival of the Christian faith across his nation, what he called a "New Christianity." Every man in his rapidly growing army wore a belt buckle that declared "Gott Mit Uns" - God Is With Us - and most of them fervently believed it was true.

Within a year of the terrorist attack, the nation's leader determined that the various local police and federal agencies around the nation were lacking the clear communication and overall coordinated administration necessary to deal with the terrorist threat facing the nation, particularly those citizens who were of Middle Eastern ancestry and thus probably terrorist and communist sympathizers, and various troublesome "intellectuals" and "liberals." He proposed a single new national agency to protect the security of the homeland, consolidating the actions of dozens of previously independent police, border, and investigative agencies under a single leader.

He appointed one of his most trusted associates to be leader of this new agency, the Central Security Office for the homeland, and gave it a role in the government equal to the other major departments.

His assistant who dealt with the press noted that, since the terrorist attack, "Radio and press are at out disposal." Those voices questioning the legitimacy of their nation's leader, or raising questions about his checkered past, had by now faded from the public's recollection as his central security office began advertising a program encouraging people to phone in tips about suspicious neighbors. This program was so successful that the names of some of the people "denounced" were soon being broadcast on radio stations. Those denounced often included opposition politicians and celebrities who dared speak out - a favorite target of his regime and the media he now controlled through intimidation and ownership by corporate allies.

To consolidate his power, he concluded that government alone wasn't enough. He reached out to industry and forged an alliance, bringing former executives of the nation's largest corporations into high government positions. A flood of government money poured into corporate coffers to fight the war against the Middle Eastern ancestry terrorists lurking within the homeland, and to prepare for wars overseas. He encouraged large corporations friendly to him to acquire media outlets and other industrial concerns across the nation, particularly those previously owned by suspicious people of Middle Eastern ancestry. He built powerful alliances with industry; one corporate ally got the lucrative contract worth millions to build the first large-scale detention center for enemies of the state. Soon more would follow. Industry flourished.

But after an interval of peace following the terrorist attack, voices of dissent again arose within and without the government. Students had started an active program opposing him (later known as the White Rose Society), and leaders of nearby nations were speaking out against his bellicose rhetoric. He needed a diversion, something to direct people away from the corporate cronyism being exposed in his own government, questions of his possibly illegitimate rise to power, and the oft-voiced concerns of civil libertarians about the people being held in detention without due process or access to attorneys or family.

With his number two man - a master at manipulating the media - he began a campaign to convince the people of the nation that a small, limited war was necessary. Another nation was harboring many of the suspicious Middle Eastern people, and even though its connection with the terrorist who had set afire the nation's most important building was tenuous at best, it held resources their nation badly needed if they were to have room to live and maintain their prosperity. He called a press conference and publicly delivered an ultimatum to the leader of the other nation, provoking an international uproar. He claimed the right to strike preemptively in self-defense, and nations across Europe - at first - denounced him for it, pointing out that it was a doctrine only claimed in the past by nations seeking worldwide empire, like Caesar's Rome or Alexander's Greece.

It took a few months, and intense international debate and lobbying with European nations, but, after he personally met with the leader of the United Kingdom, finally a deal was struck. After the military action began, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the nervous British people that giving in to this leader's new first-strike doctrine would bring "peace for our time." Thus Hitler annexed Austria in a lightning move, riding a wave of popular support as leaders so often do in times of war. The Austrian government was unseated and replaced by a new leadership friendly to Germany, and German corporations began to take over Austrian resources.

In a speech responding to critics of the invasion, Hitler said, "Certain foreign newspapers have said that we fell on Austria with brutal methods. I can only say; even in death they cannot stop lying. I have in the course of my political struggle won much love from my people, but when I crossed the former frontier [into Austria] there met me such a stream of love as I have never experienced. Not as tyrants have we come, but as liberators."

To deal with those who dissented from his policies, at the advice of his politically savvy advisors, he and his handmaidens in the press began a campaign to equate him and his policies with patriotism and the nation itself. National unity was essential, they said, to ensure that the terrorists or their sponsors didn't think they'd succeeded in splitting the nation or weakening its will. In times of war, they said, there could be only "one people, one nation, and one commander-in-chief" ("Ein Volk, ein Reich, ein Fuhrer"), and so his advocates in the media began a nationwide campaign charging that critics of his policies were attacking the nation itself. Those questioning him were labeled "anti-German" or "not good Germans," and it was suggested they were aiding the enemies of the state by failing in the patriotic necessity of supporting the nation's valiant men in uniform. It was one of his most effective ways to stifle dissent and pit wage-earning people (from whom most of the army came) against the "intellectuals and liberals" who were critical of his policies.

Nonetheless, once the "small war" annexation of Austria was successfully and quickly completed, and peace returned, voices of opposition were again raised in the Homeland. The almost-daily release of news bulletins about the dangers of terrorist communist cells wasn't enough to rouse the populace and totally suppress dissent. A full-out war was necessary to divert public attention from the growing rumbles within the country about disappearing dissidents; violence against liberals, Jews, and union leaders; and the epidemic of crony capitalism that was producing empires of wealth in the corporate sector but threatening the middle class's way of life.

A year later, to the week, Hitler invaded Czechoslovakia; the nation was now fully at war, and all internal dissent was suppressed in the name of national security. It was the end of Germany's first experiment with democracy.

As we conclude this review of history, there are a few milestones worth remembering.

February 27, 2003, was the 70th anniversary of Dutch terrorist Marinus van der Lubbe's successful firebombing of the German Parliament (Reichstag) building, the terrorist act that catapulted Hitler to legitimacy and reshaped the German constitution. By the time of his successful and brief action to seize Austria, in which almost no German blood was shed, Hitler was the most beloved and popular leader in the history of his nation. Hailed around the world, he was later Time magazine's "Man Of The Year."

Most Americans remember his office for the security of the homeland, known as the Reichssicherheitshauptamt and its SchutzStaffel, simply by its most famous agency's initials: the SS.

We also remember that the Germans developed a new form of highly violent warfare they named "lightning war" or blitzkrieg, which, while generating devastating civilian losses, also produced a highly desirable "shock and awe" among the nation's leadership according to the authors of the 1996 book "Shock And Awe" published by the National Defense University Press.

Reflecting on that time, The American Heritage Dictionary (Houghton Mifflin Company, 1983) left us this definition of the form of government the German democracy had become through Hitler's close alliance with the largest German corporations and his policy of using war as a tool to keep power: "fas-cism (fbsh'iz'em) n. A system of government that exercises a dictatorship of the extreme right, typically through the merging of state and business leadership, together with belligerent nationalism."

Today, as we face financial and political crises, it's useful to remember that the ravages of the Great Depression hit Germany and the United States alike. Through the 1930s, however, Hitler and Roosevelt chose very different courses to bring their nations back to power and prosperity.

Germany's response was to use government to empower corporations and reward the society's richest individuals, privatize much of the commons, stifle dissent, strip people of constitutional rights, and create an illusion of prosperity through continual and ever-expanding war. America passed minimum wage laws to raise the middle class, enforced anti-trust laws to diminish the power of corporations, increased taxes on corporations and the wealthiest individuals, created Social Security, and became the employer of last resort through programs to build national infrastructure, promote the arts, and replant forests.

To the extent that our Constitution is still intact, the choice is again ours.''

I don't really think the Russians are our enemies--at least not in this context. Remember that school in Russia that got shot up, with all of those little kids murdered? The Islamic radicals who attacked that school are the cut from the same cloth as ones who attached the WTC and who are now bombing the London subways. They want to destroy Russian influence in Chechnya just like the want to destroy American influence in Iraq and Saudi Arabia. These radicals hate the West. They don't care whether it's America, Russia...you name it.

RHF suggested I try the PWA shown at http://www.geocities.com/n2uhc/portablewire.html. He also suggested I modify it by adding 8" to 12" of wire hanging over the "toroid" end to attach a mini-plug and connect directly to the antenna jack on my portable SW radios. I used this indoors so didn't need the fishing weight for throwing into a tree. Tacked it up around the ceiling.

No soldering required.
Here's what you need.

Radio Shack stuff.
Hookup wire AWG22 90 feet cat. #278-1218
1/8" solderless mono mini plug cat. #274-868 package of alligator clips cat. #270-375 (Online order $16.90 delivered, probably cheaper if you buy locally)

I got a five foot length of 1/2 inch inside diameter pvc at Home Depot for a couple of dollars. I have a "mini" hacksaw which I used to cut a one foot length. I left 10 inches of wire hanging over the end of the pvc and used super glue to tack the wire in place near the end while winding more wire on the tube of pvc (see the website picture). Then I wrapped the whole thing in black electrical tape.

From the remaining spool I ran 50 more feet of wire after I finished the tube part. Attached an alligator clip to this long end of wire, and the mini-plug to the "short piece" that extended beyond the "toroid" end. Then ran about 8 feet of wire up the wall, tacked it in place and worked my way around the ceiling.

I put the "tube" over a partially extended whip antenna, with mini-plug into the antenna jack.

Works great.

That is good to know. I always wondered why ancient cities had to be dug out of the ground. Why shouldn't they be above ground the way they were a couple of thousand years ago?

Remember the halogen floor lamps that started fires? If a curtain happened to get draped across the top, the bulb was SO hot that it would ignite the curtain. After that, I was VERY cautious about using halogen lamps. I recently put a halogen fixture in my bathroom, but only because all the other fixtures at Home Depot used incandescents.

If the SunLight Bulb is truly superior, then $8 is a reasonable price.
If it becomes popular, then we will see lower prices.

That's where they're heading. Our selected president has decreed that all planes flying over American airspace have to submit a passenger list to the feds to be checked against no fly lists. It doesn't matter whether the plane's destination or departure point was in America. If it's flying from Vancouver to Quebec, and passes over American airspace, it has to be preapproved by the feds. If it's flying from Mexico to Europe, and passes over Florida, ditto. This goes against every law of aviation there is. Osama must be loving how America is tearing itself apart to guard against terrorism. That was his goal, indeed that's the goal of every terrorist. Not bad for the price of 19 box cutters.

You are in Iraq because the American Military had lost Osama and Bush had to divert the attention and anger of the American people and make it look like he was doing something about it.

You are in Iraq because War is good for business.

You are in Iraq because there was a recession in America.

You are in Iraq because two days after Bush sent in the troops he announced a $3.6 trillion dollar rescue package for the American economy.

You are in Iraq so that American businesses can rebuild the country and spend some of that $3.6 trillion and pay it to American workers and shareholders.

You are in Iraq so that American businesses can supply guns, tanks, hummers, radios, uniforms, aircraft, buildings, food, helmets and 6ft wooden boxes and restock using some of that $3.6 trillion.

You are in Iraq because War is good for business.

Professor FRASER in BRIEF identified a group of black skinned individuals and told Australians they had IQs under 70 and he also identified Asians as overperformers and then suggested that both these groups should not be Australians. He also admitted to being involved with at least two well known EXTREME RACIST GROUPS but claimed he was not a member of either.

In my mind when you target a RACE and place all members of that race in a group that is inferior or superior to you, you have fitted the OED definition of a RACIST. If it is further shown that you MIX with Extreme Racist Groups well what more does one say about his attitude to other RACES.

I know that you have some strange views of people who call others a RACIST because did you not say once; (Aug 12th to be exact)

"Labelling him a RACIST and attacking him personally only proves that what he says has merit and his oponents have no rational means of reply."

So to your logic if someone makes a RACIST statement that person cannot be called a RACIST because when someone calls him a RACIST it proves his RACIST statement had MERIT.

Is that what you said jOHN?????????????

Charlie

The definition of a racist is clear. If you believe the GOOD PROFESSOR is correct, it can only lead to the FACT that both you and the GOOD PROFESSOR are RACISTS.

Does the fact that he has suggested Australia's migration policies are in need of an overhaul to bring them up-to-date and his belief that multiculturalism has failed, make him a racist?

Does that fact that I also believe this and have said so, make me a racist?

It is your belief in the superority of your RACE that makes you a RACIST.

I have not stated anywhere that my race is superior. Yet you call me a racist.

We are all members of the HUMAN RACE John. No sub set of the Human Race is, as a subset greater or lesser than any other.

Is this and extension of your wonderous statement "we are all one human race divided up into five races"?

Please go look up the UN 30 Articles of The Universal Declaration of Human Rights and tell me which ones you REJECT.

Only you have introduced Human Rights into the discussion as a diversion and in a childish attempt to impress Human rights are not at issue here.

OH I ask again: Have you ever been in a WAR? Third request for a response.

There's that unhealthy question again.

How is treating something with disrespect in and of itself possibly illegal, let alone a felony?

He had no right to go over the security fence. There's nothing "great" about raising a generation of scumbags like that kid.

You have a yard? Put a rock or something on top of your yard/grass/dirt and dont disturb that rock or whatever.If you wait long enough,it will gradually sink on down completly out of sight and other dirt will gradually cover the rock completly over.Dirt is soft stuff and harder/heavier things sink into the dirt or sand.

At the moment, our security at the border often amounts to little more than a few strands of barbed wire with no government personnel within miles to guard it. I remember standing at just such a wire on the Arizona-Mexico border a couple of hours before daylight on Sept. 11, 2001. I had been riding with a heavily armed retired Border Patrol all night, had seen just how little effort our government was making to close down what was known then as Cocaine Alley, and was feeling a little vulnerable. Then, I got angry. I turned to my guide and spouted a bunch of rhetoric about how our government's refusal to protect American workers from illegal labor had also left us totally open to all kinds of terrorism. The American people would be shocked to see how cavalier our government treats their safety.

... as a kid, my grand-dad did much worse, he related some of those stories to me when he would kill a couple of beers on his back porch in the evenings. These girly-men youth of today couldn't even approach his "style."

My favorite story was about when he and a couple of other youngsters didn't like one old guy in their neighborhood (this was when he was about 12 mind you!) They snuck over in the night and tipped over the guys outhouse! Only problem, the old guy had got up during the night, went out to said outhouse, and fell asleep!

Needless to say, the old guy got one rude awakening, and my grandfather, one good "butt tanning!"

2059. Leading CCP Official Argues for Exterminating U.S. Population

Leading Chinese Communist Party official argues for exterminating U.S. population

The following is a partial transcript of a speech believed to have been given by Mr. Chi Haotian, Minster of Defense and vice-chairman of Communist China's Central Military Commission.

War Is Not Far from Us and Is the Midwife of the Chinese Century

Hitler's Germany had once bragged that the German race was the most superior race on Earth, but the fact is, our nation is far superior to the Germans.
Ostensibly, in comparison, today's China is alarmingly similar to Germany back then. Both of them regard themselves as the most superior races; both of them have a history of being exploited by foreign powers and are therefore vindictive; both of them have the tradition of worshipping their own authorities; both of them feel that they have seriously insufficient living space; both of them raise high the two banners of nationalism and socialism and label themselves as "national socialism"; both of them worship "one state, one party, one leader, and one doctrine."
...
The fact is, our "development" refers to the great revitalization of the Chinese nation, which, of course, is not limited to the land we have now but also includes the whole world.
...
Our per capita resources are much less than those of Germany's back then. In addition, economic development in the last twenty-plus years had a negative impact, and climates are rapidly changing for the worse. Our resources are in very short supply. The environment is severely polluted, especially that of soil, water, and air. Not only our ability to sustain and develop our race, but even its survival is gravely threatened, to a degree much greater than faced Germany back then.
...
To solve this problem, we must lead the Chinese people outside of China, so that they could develop outside of China.
...
Our economic development is all about preparing for the need of war! Publicly we still emphasize economic development as our center, but in reality, economic development has war as its center! We have made a tremendous effort to construct "The Great Wall Project" to build up, along our coastal and land frontiers as well as around large and medium-sized cities, a solid underground "Great Wall" that can withstand a nuclear war. We are also storing all necessary war materials. Therefore, we will not hesitate to fight a Third World War...

...we, the CCP, will never step down from the stage of history! We'd rather have the whole world, or even the entire globe, share life and death with us than step down from the stage of history!!! Isn't there a 'nuclear bondage' theory? It means that since nuclear weapons have bound the security of the entire world, all will die together if death is inevitable. In my view, there is another kind of bondage, and that is, the fate our Party is tied up with that of the whole world. If we, the CCP, are finished, China will be finished, and the world will be finished.
Therefore, solving the "issue of America" is the key to solving all other issues. First, this makes it possible for us to have many people migrate there and even establish another China under the same leadership of the CCP. America was originally discovered by the ancestors of the yellow race, but Columbus gave credit to the white race. We the descendents of the Chinese nation are entitled to the possession of the land!
...
It is historical destiny that China and United States will come into unavoidable confrontation on a narrow path and fight each other! ...the relationship of China and the United States is one of a life-and-death struggle.
...
This yellow land has reached the limit of its capacity. One day, who knows how soon it will come, the great collapse will occur any time and more than half of the population will have to go.
Only by using special means to "clean up" America will we be able to lead the Chinese people there. This is the only choice left for us. This is not a matter of whether we are willing to do it or not. What kind of special means is there available for us to "clean up" America? Conventional weapons such as fighters, canons, missiles and battleships won't do; neither will highly destructive weapons such as nuclear weapons. We are not as foolish as to want to perish together with America by using nuclear weapons, despite the fact that we have been exclaiming that we will have the Taiwan issue resolved at whatever cost. Only by using non-destructive weapons that can kill many people will we be able to reserve America for ourselves. There has been rapid development of modern biological technology, and new bio weapons have been invented one after another. Of course we have not been idle; in the past years we have seized the opportunity to master weapons of this kind. We are capable of achieving our purpose of "cleaning up" America all of a sudden.
...in recent years, we have been conducting research on genetic weapons, i.e. those weapons that do not kill yellow people.
...
...death is the engine that moves history forward.
...
It is indeed brutal to kill one or two hundred million Americans. But that is the only path that will secure a Chinese century, a century in which the CCP leads the world.

one Dancing on a grave is in no way a descration, Pissing on Nixon, well between the likely political comment it was making I suspect if fought out it would come under the flag burning though, although it is more questionable

However neither site was harmed so it is hard to say that a desecration occoured
